

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

TO THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL OF ABERDEEN, K. T.
PRESIDENT.

MY LORD,

The second volume of the "Magni Rotuli Scaccarii Normanniæ," which I now lay before your Lordship and the Society, contains the later Roll of Richard I. and the detached membranes of Rolls of the time of King John, completing the publication of all that is known to be preserved of these invaluable fiscal records. It had been my intention, as announced in the Advertisement to the First Volume, to have appended Indexes of Persons and Places, embracing the whole series of Rolls printed in both volumes, the pages of the text having been consecutively numbered for this purpose. But the length of the "Observations on the Great Rolls of the Exchequer of Normandy," forming as it were a digest of the contents of each membrane, prefixed to this volume, and to which a copious Index is attached, has now induced me to relinquish their insertion, and to defer such publication for a third and separate volume. By printing each name in extenso in the Indexes of Persons and Places, with references to the variations in the orthography in aftertimes, where they can be satisfactorily ascertained, and by adding a glossary of the strange and obsolete words occurring in the text, the value of these two published volumes will be much enhanced, independently of the use of such Indexes to enable each descendant of a family of Norman origin readily to trace out the locality or epithet, from which his surname is derived. In contemplation, therefore, of this further labour,

I have the honour to be, my Lord,

your most obedient humble servant,

THOMAS STAPLETON.

Willelmus de Sancto Johanne (pro Ballia de Constantiis) et a tergo.

Under the first of these titles the ferm of the Prevôté of Pont-Orson and the several issues of the Bailiwick of the Avranchin, with the product of the loan and tallages in both jurisdictions, are severally comprised, the accompts being rendered by William de Thieuville and Roger des Fontaines in their joint names. The ferm of Pont-Orson was this year at an improved assised value as compared with the year 1180, and for tythe to the abbey of Mont St. Michel the payment was increased in proportion; the execution of justice had cost 2 li. 9s., and certain sums had been laid out, under the royal sanction, for the repairs of the bridge and causeway, and for covering anew the dwellings within the castle of Pont-Orson, as also for mill-stones supplied to the King's mills, and for the repairs of the said mills. To Earl William of Salisbury 59 li. 15s. had been paid as his proportion of the ferm for three months and a half, reckoned up to Michaelmas; and there was owing a balance of 70 li. 7s., which was a charge upon Ralph Fitz Walter, who had been in office during a part of this fiscal year. William Fitz Patric, Earl of Salisbury, died 17th of April 1196, leaving issue an only daughter, named Isabella or Ela, then in tender years, and who in the course of the year to which these accompts refer had been bestowed by the King in marriage upon his natural brother William, surnamed Long-espé; whereupon, in her right, he had forthwith investiture of the earldom of Salisbury. In Normandy a provision had likewise been made for his maintenance, and the payment here made proves him to have held Pont-Orson by grant from the crown in the month of June 1198. In the following reign land in England was assigned to him in exchange for the castle of Pont-Orson to the value of 1300 librates, viz. Writtle, Havering, Andover, Congresbury, with other lands and manors; these the Earl, 4 John, 1203, restored and quit-claimed to the King upon being again put in possession of the castle of Pont-Orson. In the Bailiwick of the Avranchin the fair of St. Andrew, from which the receipt had been 10 li. of ferm in 1195, in this year yielded 12 li. 4s. 5d., and the Bailiff had 2 li. from the meadows of Avranches. Of the gift of Henry I. King of England the church of St. Andrew of Avranches had the moiety of the fair of St. Lambert and the tythe of the fairs of St. Andrew and of Le Pont, wherefore payment of 2 li. 4s. 5d. had been made this year to the Canons of the Cathedral, and is deducted in the accompt of the Bailiffs. Ralph Fitz Walter named above owed accompt of the chestnuts got from the King's chestnut-groves; and among the debtors to the crown residing in the Bailiwick, whose debts were this year in course of liquidation, Fredericus Mal-es-mains rendered accompt of 115 li. of the ferm of the Prevôté of Pont-Orson, viz. for half a year, and the Abbot of St. Michel du Mont of 277 li. 5s. 2d. of the residue of his debts. Peter de St. Hilaire rendered accompt of 40 li. of the issue of his land of Teilleul, which had been an escheat in the hands of the Bailiff of the Val de Mortain in 1195, and though restored to him in that year his subsequent tenure was apparently only as custos for the crown. Mention is also made of Liescelina de Gripon, and her sons Fouchier Paynell, Hugh Paynell, Thomas de Boillon and John Paynell, in connection with the settlement of some dispute with Robert Murdac and his brothers, in which also William Paynell of Servon and Henry de St. Pierre were concerned, all these parties being indebted to the crown either pro concordia or pro falso clamore. Robert Murdac, knight, son of Roger Murdac, deceased, with his wife Hawis, was a benefactor to the abbey of La Luzerne, in the diocese of Avranches, in 1194, as was also Henry de St. Pierre, with his wife Gondrea de Soliers, in 1195; the latter had name from St. Pierre Langer, arrondissement of Avranches.

Stephen de Turnham, Seneschal of Anjou under Henry II. and Sheriff of Wiltshire 9 and 10 Ric. I. had been in some way connected with the Bailiwick of Pont-Orson, and was yet a debtor to the crown in 181 li. for the residue of his receipts and debts. A loan, borrowed in sums of not less than 10 li. from certain of the inhabitants of each Bailiwick in Normandy, had been this year raised for fiscal purposes, and of the money so obtained in the Bailiwick of Pontorson William de Thieuville and Roger des Fontaines rendered accompt, as also of the fines taken from those who were bound to send men-at-arms to the host and had not sent. The same Bailiffs further rendered accompt of the tallage set in the Bailiwick of the Avranchin to maintain men-at-arms in the March of Normandy; but for the tallage of Pontorson set by the King William Beleteste and the men of the town of Pontorson were debtors in the sum of 200 li., and the men of Genets and St. Leonard owed respectively 100 li. for the same. At each of the burghs last named were priories, cells to the Royal abbies of Mont-St.-Michel and St. Etienne of Caen, but it seems the burgesses were subject to a direct tallage by the King.

Henry Fitz-Ralph, who in 1195 had rendered accompt of the ferm of the Vicomté and Prevôté of Exmes for the preceding year, having then in his custody the castle of Exmes, was in this fiscal year Bailiff of Gavray, and had filled the same office in the two preceding years. His first accompt relates to the residue of the issue of the Honour of Gavray of the third year past, i. e. in 1196; the amount was 96 li. 16s. 4d., but in default of any rent from the mills, which had been damaged in war-time by Comte John, and on account of the waste of the lands, and of the loss of the three fairs not being holden by reason likewise of the war, the accomptant was allowed to deduct 37 li. 13s. 1d., beside 20d. the expense for the execution of justice. In the next place Hugh Fitz Ralph rendered accompt of the issues of the same Honour, together with the vill of Torneor, in 1197 and 1198, for each year the sum of 138 li. 3s. 3d.; whereas in 1195, prior to the war, the issue had been 160 li. 16s. 4d. The tythe paid thereout to the abbey of Cerisy was apparently always of fixed amount, for 11 li. had been alone charged in each year, without increase in proportion to the issues, and hence the expression decima statuta on the Roll. The expenses authorised by the King's brief in this interval of two years were for repairing the dwellings of the castle of Gavray,—for seven mill-stones to the King's mills, and for repairing the same mills and covering them in,—for repairing a great and a little oven, and for repairing a tanning mill. Under the head of amercements, proffers and fines the receipts of the Bailiff had been greatly diminished in comparison with the return made in 1195; from William de Rollos 2 li. had been received, being the residue of the aid due for his knights' fees, and from William de Thieuville 2 li. 6s. 8d. as mainpernor of Richard de Grizy. The caput of the fief of William de Rollos, Roullours, from which he had name, is situate in the vicinity of the castle of Vire; but he was also lord of the castle of La Bloutière upon the river Sienne, at no great distance from Gavray, and his land in the parishes of La Bloutière and Fleury was subject to the render of half a pound of pepper at Gavray; in England he was also possessed of lands, viz. at Brompton-upon-Swale, Kiplin, and elsewhere in the Honour of Richmond. Accompts follow of the issue from the views of the forest of Gavray in each year, of which the abbey of Cerisy received the tythe pursuant to the grant of William the Conqueror. The tallages set in the Bailiwick of Gavray, of which accompt is next rendered, were those imposed in Normandy in the course of these two years, and which were first a tallage of 12d., next a tallage set to maintain men-at-arms in the March, thirdly, a tallage of 18d., fourthly, a tallage set to maintain men-at-arms in the Isle d'Andely; and there was beside the tallage set in the burgh of Gavray by the King. Henry Fitz-Ralph also rendered accompt of 40 li. of the loan made in the Bailiwick of Gavray, but in the Treasury were only 30 li. by reason of the King's brief directing 10 li. to be remitted to William des Roches, which had been required from one who held of his fief. The war carried on in the vicinity of the castle of Gavray in 1196, to which allusion is here made, is unnoticed in the history of the transactions in Normandy of that date; there was, it seems, an assault then made upon the castle on the part of Comte John, the King's brother, who had been previously restored to the Comté of Mortain, and who may have thereupon sought to get this adjacent stronghold into his own hands, and to eject those who had been charged with its custody by the King.

The ferm of the forest of Montfiquet, which stood this year at the same value, viz. 100 li., as in 1180 and 1195, was rendered accompt of in the name of Richard de Montfiquet by Joscelin the priest, who owed 65 li.; which sum remained unpaid, by reason that the customers of the forest could not avail themselves of their rights on account of the sale of the forest. Of the produce of this sale, 1118 li. 12s., William Poignart, Bailiff of the Bessin, and Hamo Le Bouteiller, who had previously held the office, rendered accompt on this membrane on behalf of themselves and their associates, the forest being situate in that district of Normandy.

The ferm of the Vicomté of Coutances was also fixed in amount, and again in this year William de Sancto Johanne rendered accompt through Thomas des Periers of 50 li. as in 1180 and 1195, and of 7 li. of the ferm of the Terra Aucupum, which had been this year paid by him to Piculfus, of whom mention has been made as the King's fool, and who is elsewhere styled Dominus Piculfus. The same officer, or his deputy, further rendered accompt of the amercements, proffers and fines of the Bailiwick of Coutances; under which head we have payments by the Bishop of Coutances for his knight's fees and for the aide de l'ost—by Hugh de la Haie for having recognition of a fief d'haubert—by Thomas de Periers 17s. found in the earth—by William Tholomeus 7s. in lieu of a bezant for a hearing of this matter, viz. that Richard de Fleury had acknowledged him to be the next heir, and had left him his inheritance as his heir, and that he William had given him 10 li., and in like manner by the abbot of La Lucerne 7s. in lieu of a bezant for a hearing of the purchase he had made of Erenborc, late wife of Richard the Chaplain, and her sons, of the fief of William the heir, as the chirograph between them witnessed. The service due from the Bishop of Coutances to the Duke of Normandy numbered five knights, and ad servitium suum eighteen; and such land as subjected the holder to service in the host with horse and at arms at his own expense bore in Normandy the designation of a fief d'haubert, i. e. feodum loriceæ. The fief to which reference is here made had name from the owner, and in the terriers of the diocese of Coutances the parish of La Haye-Bellefond is designated Haia-Hugonis. William Tholomeus was apparently the clerk of the Seneschal of Normandy, who, having been first ordained deacon for the purpose, was on September 21, 1198, chosen by the Canons of Avranches to that see, then vacant, and whose election was declared null by a bull of the Pope, 17 March 1199; he was, however, again elected and received consecration in the ensuing year. Among those who rendered accompt, in part payment of their debts, in this Bailiwick, were William de Tracy of the residue of the ferm of Moyon, and Lucia de Moyon of 50 li. of the ferm of the land of Moyon and of 20 li. for having the same ferm. The Honour of Moyon, which had been relinquished by Richard de Humez in 1194, had, it seems, continued to be fermed as an escheat down to the present time by reason of the minority of Reginald de Moyon, the heir, who was not of age till 4 John 1203; when, as appears from a memorandum on the Patent Rolls, Hubert de Burgh, the Chamberlain, had in command from the King to admonish and induce Reginald de Moyon to take from the King an exchange in England for his land of Lyon near Caen, and either to send on account of this matter to the King or else his letters patent. In the previous regnal year Lucia de Moyon had paid into the Treasury in England 20 marks for seven knight's fees for leave not to cross the sea, her acquittance being entered on the Great Roll of the Pipe, tit. "Dorsett' et Sumersett,'" in which latter shire was the castle of Dunster, the caput of the Honour of the family of Moyon in England. Hence it is probable that these seven fiefs were held by her in dower of the inheritance of her son, and that she was the widow of William de Moyon, surnamed junior or le Meschyn, whose obit occurs in the month of October in the Necrology of the abbey of La Luzerne. After the conquest of Normandy the Honour of Moyon, with its fiefs in the Bailiwicks of Coutances and the Bessin, escheated to the crown, and was held for a time by Warin de Glapion; but in 1220 it is registered as being then in the King's hands. Geoffrey de Saukeville rendered accompt of 35 li. in lieu of 100 bezants for having an award versus Ralph de Bouillon, and Thomas de Briqueville of 3 li. 10 s. in lieu of 10 bezants for having recognition of the fines levied in the court of Fulk Paynell versus the said Fulk. Briqueville-sur-mer formed part of the vast property of the Barons Paynell in the Vicomté of Coutances, and the family which bore the local surname were feudatories of their Honour; the tenure of Fulk Paynell in Briqueville and Annoville and Torneville and Langrune was, however, only as mesne lord under the Abbot of Mont-St.-Michel for the service of one knight, which he rendered to the King at the summons of the abbot, and it is so noted in the Register of Philip Augustus. In the year of grace 1227, Emma du Cotentin, widow of William du Cotentin, knight, and daughter of Geoffrey de Brikeville, knight, granted and confirmed to Fulk Paynell that exchange which Thomas de Brikeville, her brother, had made with the said Fulk, of his whole inheritance in Bricqueville, Anoville, Tourneville, Lengronne, and Le Cran, for a fief in Brehal. It is nevertheless probable that the Thomas de Briqueville here mentioned left issue, for in the first year of King John's reign Thomas de Bellomonte gave thirty marks for having confirmation of the custody of the land which had belonged to Thomas de Brichisville with the heir until he was of age, pursuant to the terms of the charters of the lords of the fief. Thomas des Periers rendered accompt in his own name of the issue of the land of William de Magneville before it was at ferm, and of the issue of Orval during the term of its being in the King's hands; as also of 46 li. 10s. from the sale of nine tuns of the King's wines, and of 110 li. of the aide de l'ost from the fiefs of eleven knights of the Honour of Moyon, who make five knights ad servitium Regis. The same quantity of service is specified to be due from William de Moyon on the Roll of Fiefs in Normandy, transcribed in the Red Book of the Exchequer of England, and compiled in the year 1172; on the Roll in the archives at the Hotel Soubise at Paris containing a transcript of a portion of the above Roll, after Guillelmus de Moion servitium v militum et ad suum servitium xi milites, we read Garinus de Glapion habet, denoting that the Honour was in his hands at the time of this transcript being made. The Register of Philip Augustus, aº d'ni 1220, describes the fief of Moyon as being then in the King's hands by escheat, and as owing to the Lord the King the service of five knights, of which two and a half were in the Bailiwick of Coutances, and two and a half in the Bailiwick of the Bessin. In explanation of these and similar entries respecting the services due from fiefs in Normandy, it is important to cite the words of the inquest taken after the death of Richard, Bishop of Bayeux, the son of Samson, aº d'ni 1133, of the fiefs of the baronies, of the knights, and of the vavassories, held of the church of Blessed Mary of Bayeux, and of their services. The jurors declared "that the Bishop of Bayeux owed to the sovereign lord of Normandy ten knights ad servitium Regis Francorum, and that ten knights of the Bishopric performed this service through the medium of one knight for the term of forty days." And they said also, "that the said Bishop owed the service of twenty knights in the Marches of Normandy during forty days, wheresoever the King might appoint, and this service five knights performed through one knight. But if the sovereign lord of Normandy should summon an army to come to his banner nomine prelii, he who holds a knight's fief cannot remain elsewhere than at the army, nor, or so be it they have a just excuse, might they send a knight in their room." In process of time the personal service was allowed to be commuted into a money-payment at the option of the tenant of the fief, and thus a certain sum came to be customarily chargeable upon all fiefs in aid of the army whenever the sovereign raised his banner in war. Eleven knights owed their service to the Lord of Moyon, and 10 li. was the charge upon each fief for the aide de l'ost in 1198; hence 110 li. were to be accounted for at the Exchequer, of which 30 li. had been paid into the Treasury, and 80 li. remained charged upon the knights of the Honour of Moyon. Richard de Grizy, who in 1195 had made a fine with the King and found pledges, was in 1198 an accomptant in this Bailiwick of 68 li. 2s. 3d. the residue of such fine; 14 li. 10 s. had been paid into the Treasury, and he took credit for such sums as the several Bailiffs had received of his mainpernors in their respective districts in the past or current fiscal years, whereby the debt was reduced in this year to 17 li. 15s. 7d.

Membrane 1. dorso.

Item Willelmus de Sancto Johanne (pro Ballia de Constanciis.)

The remaining items of accompt presented at the Exchequer on the part of William de Sancto Johanne, as Bailiff of Coutances, are entered on the Roll in the single name of his deputy, Thomas des Periers, and relate to the receipts from the Loan raised this year in the several Bailiwicks of Normandy, from the tallage set to maintain men-at-arms in the March, and from the tallages set by the King's precept in the City of Coutances and in the burgh of St. Pair. In regard of the latter full payment of the assessments had not been made, for a certain amount still remained charged respectively upon the inhabitants of each place; whereas the whole of the assessment due on the score of the first mentioned tallage had been paid into the Treasury, save 4 li., which, by reason of an exemption obtained by the Knights Hospitallers for their men of Ville-Dieu under the King's writ, had been abated to the accomptant. We have, lastly, the list of those dwelling in the Bailiwick of Coutances, who were debtors to the crown, and from whom nothing had been received in discharge of their debts during this fiscal year; of these Adam du Port owed 36 li. de tanga and 3 li. of the fair of Orval, Ralph Tesson 36 li. 16s. of the fouage of his land, and Gislebert de Racinei 5 li., which Robert L'Angevin had delivered to him for the works of the mills of Lithaire. Tangue is the word in common use for the sea-sand, which is brought from divers points of the coast in this part of Normandy, and serves to enrich the land as manure; and of the nature of the impost called fouage, only levied in every third year, we have already treated in the Observations which are prefixed to the preceding Rolls. Gislebert de Racinei had been the fermor of the Honour of Lithaire and Orval in 1195, and subsequently up to the year of this Roll; hence it will have been, by reason of the restoration to Adam du Port of the lands of the Honour, that the money given him for these works was not expended. The Honour of Percy in the Bailiwick of Coutances was the land of Ralph Tesson, and held of the crown in capite by the service of a knight: he had also in this district the castle of La Roche-Tesson, which had been chosen as the seat of the lords of the fief of La Colombe, belonging to the Honour of St. Pair, and for which he had done homage to the abbot of Mont-St.-Michel in 1178, after the death of his father Jordan Tesson.

Membrane 2.

Galfridus Cambitor de Receptis suis.

Vicecomites Rothomagi.

Vallis Secanæ per Ricardum Brieguerre.

The residue of an Accompt of Receipts during the past year, now again rendered by Geoffrey de Val-Richer, the Money-changer of Rouen, is first entered on this second Membrane of the Roll, and it will be seen from the disbursements what ample provision had been made by King Richard for the security of the eastern frontier of Normandy against invasion. Considerable sums had been laid out upon the works of the bourg of Eu, of the castles of Gamaches in the Vexin Normand, La Roche and Orival upon the banks of the Seine, Rade-pont on the river Andelle, Tillières and Courteilles on the river Aure; the castles of Lyons and Longchamp in the forest of Lyons had strong garrisons; and mercenaries, Welch, Flemings, and Saracens, were in considerable numbers in the pay of the King. Courteilles is a commune between Verneuil and Tillières, where the March of Normandy had the river Aure for its boundary, and was conterminous with the diocese of Chartres; after the cession of Ivry and Nonancourt pursuant to the terms of the peace of Issoudun, this fortress had been built to supply the loss and as a defence to the shattered frontier. Upon the renewal of hostilities in 1196 Nonancourt was for a short interval in the possession of the Norman forces; and while King Philip with his army was successfully employed in its recapture, John Comte of Mortain, making a sudden inroad into the ceded territory of the Vexin Normand, won the castle of Gamaches. This advanced post was immediately and strongly fortified; to Elias of the Almonry 400 li. were paid in 1197 for the works of Gamaches, and the further sum of 900 li. in this year. Among other disbursements in the former year is one of 3226 li. 13s. 4d., equal to 1210 marks, to merchants of Plaisence, in discharge of the debt which the Bishop of Durham contracted with them at Rome upon the King's business. His mission to Rome arose out of the dispute between the King and the Archbishop of Rouen, on occasion of the encroachments of the former upon the demesnes of Andely, where he had begun the construction of two new fortresses, one in an island in the channel of the Seine, and another on a rock overhanging the river. Of the property belonging to the see of Rouen, Andely was the manor specially set apart for the supply of the table of the Archbishop; hence the occupation of the island and a great part of the demesne land was regarded by him as an outrage not to be borne, though the advance of the French frontier to beyond Gaillon, and the cession of the Vexin Normand, rendered these constructions imperative for the safety of the capital against the common enemy. Frantic at their continuance in spite of prayer and remonstrance, he boldly resorted to the spiritual weapons, which his position as head of the church in Normandy enabled him to avail himself of against his sovereign, laid the whole province under an interdict, and then withdrew to the diocese of Cambrai. In this stage of the quarrel the King dispatched his Chancellor the Bishop of Ely, the Bishop elect of Durham, and the Bishop of Lisieux, to prosecute an appeal before the Pope at Rome, whither the Archbishop also went upon a summons to attend the hearing. The Chancellor, falling sick by the way, died at Poitiers 31st Jan. 1197; the other two Bishops continuing their journey reached Rome, where both parties met in the presence of Pope Celestine III. and the matter was discussed. The result of a long deliberation between the Pope and Cardinals was a recommendation to the Archbishop to come to an amicable arrangement with the King, his lord, and to accept from him compensation for the loss; at the same time, of his plenary authority, the Pope forthwith dissolved the interdict, and on Sunday, 20th of April, he consecrated with his own hands the Bishop elect of Durham. From the largeness of the sum borrowed to expedite this business, it may be surmised that this favourable termination to the mission had been in some measure brought about by a liberal distribution of bribes to the members of the sacred college. The Archbishop returned to Normandy, and, on the 16th of October 1197, the convention between the King and the Archbishop for the exchange of Andely was formally ratified at Rouen. In the same year 900 li. had been paid to the Marquis of Montferrat as his fee, and 26 li. 13s. 4d. as a present from the King. This service of Boniface, Marquis of Montferrat, in the armies of the King of England, as his hired partisan, is unnoticed by the biographers of this celebrated warrior, who was chosen to be their leader by the Crusaders in 1201, and afterward took a prominent part in the conquest of Constantinople. To Hugh de Nevill had been paid 104 li. for the expenses of the Bishop of Beauvais, the warlike Philip de Dreux, who had been made prisoner by Comte John and the band of Marchadé in an expedition into the Beauvoisis, 19th of May 1196, and remained closely confined in the tower of Rouen, of which Hugh, son of Ernisius de Nevill, had the custody in 1197. In the same year 100 li. had been remitted to the monks of Dunes under the King's writ, who had also been the objects of the royal bounty in 1195, when they had of the King's gift forty marks. This monastery was situate on the coast, in the diocese of Terouanne, near Nieuport, and it was doubtless in return for the services of Helias, abbot of Dunes, through whose influence, exerted at the solicitation of Queen Eleanor, the mediation of the Duke of Austria with the Emperor for the liberation of King Richard had been eventually obtained, that these presents were now made; in England Eastchurch in the island of Shepey, in the county of Kent, with other temporalities, were at the same time appropriated to this Flemish abbey. Other recipients out of the King's purse in 1197 were Guy d'Auteuil 50 li., Hugh de Canberon 100 li., William le Waleis 50 li., Magister Euric 20 li., John Torel 20 li., William Boteril 50 li., and Girard de Grinberge 80 li.; the priest of the royal dwellings at Moulineaux had 4 li., and Baldwin of Jerusalem 25 li. for his expenses. To Denis Poignant 30 li. had been paid for a horse bought for the King's use, and to a merchant of Vitot 80 li. for three other horses for the King. Among those who had payment of their wages named in this Accompt were the Computatores, who had cast up the Accompts at the Treasury, and Tiebald and Ferrand the King's Valets. The balance was in favour of the Accomptant, who had expended 117 li. 18s. 5d. over and above the money he had received, and for which he had credit elsewhere. The next Accompt of Geoffrey was rendered on behalf of William de Merlou, taken prisoner along with the Bishop of Beauvais, viz. of 1000 marks of silver of the ransom of the said William, and of 47 marks 3s. sterling ad perficiendum pondus de Treies; out of this sum the Comte of Boulogne, who, with the Comte of Flanders, had in this year embraced the party of Richard against the King of France, had received 500 marks of the King's gift, and the remainder having been paid into the Treasury, the debt was wholly acquitted; so that this eminent knight, who is described as being most dear to the King of France on account of his valour, will have been in this year released from his captivity at Rouen. A third accompt of Geoffrey concerns his receipts in the current fiscal year, viz. of 1019 li. 2s. from the tallage set in the Bailiwick of Caux for the entrenchments of the frontier town of Eu—of divers large sums remitted from the Treasury of England and from the Bailiffs of several districts of Normandy—from the monks of Jumiéges of 100 marks of their gift to the King—of 60 li. from the sale of the Haye d'Arques—from the Earl of Warren 100 li. of money which the Seneschal had lent him—from the Chamberlain of Tancarville 95 li. of the residue of his debts—from Richard de Bleville 10 li. of his father's debt—from Doon Bardolf 68 marks 10s. 4d. sterling, worth 183 li. 8s. money of Anjou—from Clair le Despenser 500 li.—and from William de Martigny 80 li. of their fines, being a sum total of 5514 li. 10s. money of Anjou, and of 6859 marks, 2s. 3½d. sterling, which were worth 18,291 li. 2s. 6d. money of Anjou. As to the disbursement of this large sum, the deposit in the Treasury was 570 li. 6s. 8d., and 117 li. 14s. 5d. went to cover the balance in favour of Geoffrey on the preceding accompt; further, 6500 marks had been carried to the credit of Richard Brieguerre, the Mayor of Rouen, and the said Geoffrey, at the Treasury of Rouen, of which they owed accompt, and there was a balance of 1027 li. 0s. 2d., over and above the payments under the King's writ, still due. These payments were chiefly for wages to the troops serving as garrisons at Tillières, Lyons, Longchamp, the castle and isle of Andely, and at Gamaches, while a company of 20 men-at-arms serving with John Torel had 2 li. 13s. 4d. for four days, being at the rate of a mark a day. John le Quanteis had 50 li. for the works of Argueil, a castle in the pays de Bray, which had been severed from the land of Hugh de Gournay and annexed to the demesne, and William de Montchensy 80 li. for the works of Radepont, a castle on the river Andelle; forty bucklers had been bought and conveyed to Vaudreuil and the Isle d'Andely, cords and cables had been bought and sent to the castle of La Roche, and payment made for 5000 quarrels with arrows, and for 5000 Turkish javelins. Four marks of gold, worth 86 li. 10s. had been used to make the King's crown, and ten drinking cups and candelabra had been purchased for his use; a dish belonging to the Royal Almonry had likewise been repaired and the cost defrayed. To Hugh, Comte of St. Pol in Artois, 500 marks had been given as a present from the King, and to Hugh de Malaunay 840 marks in payment of his ransom, which the King had taken; likewise the amount of rent which was to accrue to the nuns of Camp-Souverain under the charter of Henry II. in 1180, had been in this year paid to them by Geoffrey out of his receipts; and he had likewise defrayed the expenses of the messengers from Flanders and from Lombardy. It appears from the calculations in this accompt that sterling money was of a value quadruple to that which had currency in Normandy at this period under the name of money of Anjou; and in noticing the depreciation we will add some remarks in explanation of this difference. As early as the reign of Philip I. (1060—1108) one third of copper had been mixed up with the silver in the coinage of France, so that in the livre as coined there were only eight ounces of silver, though reckoned to contain twelve ounces. In consequence of this debasement the Roman livre grew to be disused as a standard, and in its place a weight containing eight ounces of silver was generally adopted. This new standard had the name of poids de marc, apparently from its prior use by the nations inhabiting the shores of the Baltic and the Northern sea, for in Denmark at the present day the word marc denotes a weight of eight ounces; and doubtless from the same cause the coins estimated by this standard were designated sterlings or esterlings, from the generic name Oosterling distinctive of the eastern people among whom they first had currency. In charters of the time of William the Conqueror, as transcribed by Ordericus Vitalis, and by that writer himself in the text of his history, the epithet Sterilenses is applied to the issues from lands in England which had been appropriated to the support of religious houses in Normandy. Likewise, in the Domesday Survey, we have constant mention of the mark and half-mark both of silver and gold; and over this, the libra is there frequently specified to be a libra alborum nummorum de xx^{ti} in ora, a subdivision which is indicative of the use of this standard, for the multiple of 20 by eight, i. e. 160, furnishes the number of pence contained in a mark. In the treaty between Edward and Guthrun Kings, cap. 3, it is set down that if a priest mislead the people, either in time of feast or fast, the fine with the English to be thirty shillings, and with the Danes three half marks; and cap. 7, if any one should presume to hold a market on a Sunday, he was to lose his market, and the fine to be twelve oræ with the Danes and thirty shillings with the English. Twelve oræ will therefore have been equivalent to three half-marks, and consequently eight oræ will have been contained in a mark; hence Ora, having the name from its being a copper-weight, was the eighth part of a whole, as uncia in Latin was the twelfth part. In respect also of the coined money of the Danes eight stycas made one silver pennig. In Elfric's grammar is this gloss, Libra on Leden is pund in Englisc, fif penegas gemacigath ænne scyl-linge and thrittige penega ænne mancs; now, as 240, the multiple of thirty by eight, is correspondent with the number of pence, the known contents of the Anglo-Saxon pound, it may be assumed that mancs signified a weight equal to the eighth part of a pound, similarly as ora of a mark. In some parts of England the ora was, it seems, subdivided into sixteen pence, inasmuch as we find that two marks of silver are said to be worth twenty oræ, and fifteen oræ to be contained in a pound. Thus, in like manner, the number of pence which made a shilling varied in England, in Westseaxen-lage the computation being five, and in Marchen-lage only four; hence, by reason of this variance, the Anglo-Saxon pound is sometimes described to contain sixty, at other times forty-eight, English shillings. The shilling of Domesday is on the other hand always twelpence. In England the coins were customarily tested at the Mints by weighing and fusion, after which process they were said to be dealbated, and were qualified as denarii, albi, blanci, candidi. It was, doubtless, this practice which chiefly tended to the preservation of the standard in England during the reigns of William the Conqueror and his sons, for under Stephen a great adulteration of the coin took place; it was, however, upheld by Henry II. who abrogated the coins of the nobles, which had been current under his predecessor, and caused the issues of the royal mints to be alone admitted to circulation in the kingdom.^a In France, on ^a Novam facit monetam, quæ (abdicata jam procerum illa) sola recepta erat et accepta in regno. (Hoveden Annal. pars posterior, p. 491, a. g. 1156.) This new coinage had been previously made a stipulation in one of the articles of the Treaty of Peace agreed to at Wallingford between King Stephen and Duke Henry, "Et publica moneta una et eadem erit in regno ex argento percussa." In the Great Roll of the English Exchequer, of the 31st of Henry I. we have distinct mention of the mark of gold as containing eight ounces, in the following and other entries: [Oxenefordscira.] "Teodricus Ursus reddit compotum de dimidia marca auri pro recto de quadam terra. In thesauro xxx so. pro ii uncias auri. Et debet ii uncias auri." The entire mark of gold will therefore have been equivalent in value to 120s. of sterling money, and taking nine as the number at which the proportional value of gold over silver was then estimated, as evidenced by the calculations made elsewhere upon the Roll, and dividing by it, the quotient will be 13s. 4d., which sum represented the value in money sterling of the mark of silver. But, notwithstanding the adoption of the poids de marc as the standard of the coinage of gold and silver in England and on the Continent, accmpts in money continued to be kept, according to the formula anciently in usage among the nations subject to Roman domination, in libræ, solidi and denarii, though the value these terms represented necessarily varied according to the greater or less purity of the coin that issued from the mints. In England, in the reign of Stephen, such was the adulteration of the coin that the contrary, the standard of the coinage during the reigns of the monarchs who succeeded Philip on the throne fell continually lower. According to experiments by weighing the coins struck during the reigns of Louis VI. and Louis VII. (1108—1180) at Paris, Chartres, and Pontoise, and now preserved in the Cabinet des Medailles at Paris, it would appear that there is little variation as to weight between the coins of either of these towns compared with those of the other two; while between the coins of the same mint the weight varies from seventeen to twenty-two grains; the mean may therefore be taken at about twenty grains, a result equally obtained from experiments by weighing the English coins of William the Conqueror and his son William Rufus. But the French coins in question having been assayed by the Officiers de la Monnaie, have been found of very base alloy, containing in copper more than a half of their weight; and to judge from a comparison of the prices of articles in the reigns of the Kings above named with the prices of the same articles in the reign of Philip Augustus, the adulteration of the coinage will have yet continued undiminished in any degree, or rather it will have been progressive, as may be collected from these Rolls. In 1180 we find the mark of silver variously reckoned at 2 li., 2 li. 6s. 8d., and 2 li. 10s. of Norman currency; in 1184 the mark is quoted at 2 li. 13s. 4d., just quadruple its amount in sterling money, and it continued at the same valuation in 1195 and 1198. The mark of gold, accounted of the value of 20 li. Norman currency in 1180, had become equivalent to 21 li. 12s. 6d. in 1198, though the proportional value of gold over silver had diminished, and was then reckoned at a little more than eight times its quantity instead of nine, the proportion in the first half of this century. In France the right of coining was a privilege of the great vassals, and at the mints of Troyes and Provins, the capitals of Champagne and Brie, belonging to the Comtes Palatins, the Roman standard, with its division of the pound into twelve ounces, had been retained, so that a sum of money stipulated to be paid according to the weight of Troyes necessarily exceeded a sum of the same nominal amount according to the poids de marc. The ransom of William de Merlou, for instance, was set at 1000 marks, and that sum was accounted for in sterling money at the Norman Exchequer; but because the payment was to be according to Troy weight, a further sum of forty-seven marks three shillings sometimes out of ten or more solidi scarcely twelve denarii were obtained of the standard weight, and the latter was reported to have been tampered with and lightened by the King himself.

sterling was added ad perficiendum pondus de Treies. In these local usages originated the present denominations of Troy weight for Roman weight, and of avoir-du-pois weight, that is, sufficient or standard weight, for the poids de marc. Occasionally, the money of England was re-coined and transmuted into the baser currency of the transmarine provinces, as we learn from the Dialogus de Scaccario, where is contained as follows; erit autem curæ eorum qui præsunt Receptæ, gratiâ dominorum suorum, hoc est, Clerici, Thesaurarii et Camerariorum, ut, receptâ pecuniâ, seorsum mittunt examinati argenti pondera et denarios de firma, appositis quibusdam signis saccis eorum, ut si Rex vasa argentea ad cultum domûs Dei vel ad domûs propriæ obsequium, vel forte monetas transmarinas fieri voluerit, ex hiis fiant.

The next accompt on this membrane is of the residue of the Old ferm of the Vicomté of Rouen, and is rendered in the names of the Mayor of Rouen and two associates, Ralph Groinnet and Ralph de Cailly, on behalf of themselves and the whole commune of Rouen. The purchase of munitions of war, and their transport to the island of Andely—the conduct of one Robert Le Moine, the King's prisoner, from Rouen to Caen—the transport of the King's venison from Rouen to the castle of La Roche, and of his wine to the same place, and to Orival-sur-Seine—the cost of three vessels and three cables bought and sent to the island of Andely—the disbursements for nails tinned over, and for plaster for the King's dwellings of Vatteville and of Hauville in the forest of Brotonne, for panniers and a coffer, and for a chariot with harness and trappings for the King's use, for two saddles for the King's horses with their equipments, for harness bought for the royal stud and for the sumpter-horse carrying the King's chapel, for an ounce of petroleum, and for caldrons, pails and barrels hooped with iron for the King's kitchen, had, with the wages paid to ten Welchmen staying at Tillières during forty days, together caused an expenditure of 161 li. 8s., being more than the amount of residue; wherefore the accomptants had credit for 2 li. 2s. 3d., which balance was computed to them out of the new ferm of the Vicomté of Rouen, whereof the same parties rendered accompt below on this membrane. The amount of the New ferm will be found the same as on the Rolls of preceding years, but it had become subject to further annual deductions by force of the King's grants. The Archbishop of Rouen had 1000 li. in the mills of Rouen by the King's charter for the exchange of the manor of Andely, dated at Rouen, 16th Oct. 1197; and to the same Archbishop and to the Canons of Notre Dame de Rouen other 583 li. 10s. had been paid out of the ferm in this year, as the price of three hundred muids of wine, pursuant to the terms of another charter, whereby King Richard, for his own soul and the souls of his predecessors and successors, and for his anniversary, and in recompense for the losses and damages which his Lord, Philip, King of the French, had caused to the said Archbishop and Canons during the war between him and the said King, had granted to the said Archbishop and Canons 300 muids of wine to be taken each year out of the proceeds of the mueison of Rouen by entire casks as he himself was accustomed to receive the same; of which quantity the Archbishop was to have 100 muids to his own use and the Canons 200 muids for the use of their community, and in case of a deficiency 20s. money of Anjou to be reckoned for each muid so wanting to complete the number.^b By the King's charter the Butchers of Rouen had also been relieved from the amount of their contribution to the ferm in this year, reckoned at 20 li., but the instrument has not been preserved. The Comte of Mortain had received out of the ferm 716 li. 13s. 4d., and this entry in the account heads the items of the current expenditure of the year authorized by the King's writ; such as the several payments made in relief of the burgesses of Andely—for cords bought for the King's ship and for their transport with two anchors from Rouen to Dieppe—in the cost of making a counterpane and mattress and in the expenses of him who made them—in the purchases of sumpter-horses for the King's use and in the expenses of the King's stud—for a palfrey for brother Guy de Provins—for the ^b This charter of King Richard, given at Rouen by the hand of our Chancellor, William, Bishop of Ely, "anno vi^o regni n'ri," will have been granted upon occasion of the truce agreed upon between the Kings of England and France at Issoudun on the Eve of St. Nicolas, 5th Dec. 1195, and not earlier, as no deduction in favour of these grantees is made in the Account of the ferm of the Vicomté of Rouen entered on the Roll of the year 1195. In like manner at the foot of the original charters of King Richard and John Comte of Mortain for the exchange of Andely, dated at Rouen 16th Oct. 1197, the readings are "anno regni n'ri octavo," and "anno regni domini Regis octavo;" yet, in each instance, the regnal years are miscalculated, if computed from the first Coronation of King Richard on the third of September 1189 to the same day of the month in each successive year. Hence, it seems, the years of the reign of Richard I. were occasionally reckoned onwards from the usual time of commencing the year at Christmas, and made to coincide with its duration; such is the mode of computation adopted by Ralph de Diceto and Roger de Hoveden in their Annals. Thus the sixth year of the reign of Richard I. will have commenced at the feast of Christmas 1194, and have continued to the celebration of the same feast in the following year, while the eighth regnal year embraced the period between 25th Dec. 1196 and 25th Dec. 1197. In the reign of King John the regnal years were reckoned from the moveable feast of the Ascension, which happened to be coincident with the day of his Coronation in 1199, notwithstanding that by this mode of calculation each regnal year was of a different length and began on a different day.

transport of treasure from Rouen to La Roche—for iron to make fetters and rings for the gaol of Rouen, and for provisions bought and sent to Lions-la-fôret. Among the debtors to the crown in the Vicomté of Rouen we have the names of three Money-changers and a Walter Marc d'Argent, whose surname bespeaks a similar occupation. Emma, Vicomtesse of Rouen, and Rolland the Money-changer, owed forty marks of the debt of Gervase of (South) Hampton, an English merchant, of whom we find mention in the Great Roll of the Pipe, 9 Ric. I. rot. 2 a. Sudhant, under the heading De conventionibus per H. Cant. archiepiscopum, where is this entry; Nigellus de Havena (debet) L marcas pro societate mercandis arum quam habuit cum Gervasio de Hantona. The large debt of the same Vicomtesse for the old ferm of the Vicomté, contracted prior to the year 1180, was yet unliquidated, and only the trifling sum of 25s. had been received by the Mayor of Rouen towards its discharge in the course of this year.

The same Vicomtes of Rouen, for themselves and the whole Commune of Rouen, further rendered accmpt of 5 li. 18 s. received by the Mayor of Rouen, Matthew Le Gros, from debtors in the Vicomté—of 100 li. which the Seneschal of Normandy had lent them—of 628 li. 2s. 8d. of the residue of the levy for the men-at-arms, which the citizens of Rouen were bound to find the King in war-time—of 30 li. for a horse returned to Nicholas Groinnet, who had sold it to the King—of 80 marks of silver, the proceeds of the sale of seventeen sacks of wool remaining of the cargo of a vessel of Iceland—of 21 marks of silver, the produce of the sale of the same vessel—of 39 marks 1s. 9½d. sterling, the issue of the Exchange of Rouen of the fourth year last past, i. e. in 1195, and of this year—of 200 marks of silver of the proffer of the son of Rohais de Bohon for having hearing of his right coram Rege in the suit between him and Ralph de Ardena—of 26 li. 2s. 6d. of the ferm of the land of John de Gisors—of 2000 li. of the tallage set in the city of Rouen to maintain men-at-arms in the March—of 1000 marks of silver of the loan raised in the same city—of 20 li. 10s. of the ransoms of the poor French men-at-arms taken in war-time—of 30s. the price of an ox, a waif, sold—of 120 li. received from Henry de Pont-Audemer—and of 320 li. 8s. the produce of the sale of forty-four tuns of the King's wine. The son of Rohais de Bohon had name Engelger de Bohon, and was the representative of one branch of the great Anglo-Norman family bearing this local surname, descended from Humphrey de Bohon, contemporary with the Conqueror, whose tenure of the Honour of Bohon is shown from his endowment of the church of St. Georges de Bohon, as a cell to the abbey of Marmoutier. William, King of the English and Duke of the Normans, by a deed bearing his signature and those of Matildis Queen of the English, Robert son of the King of the English, William son of the King of the English, Michael Bishop of Avranches, Odo Bishop of Bayeux, Roger de Montgomery and Richard son of Tursten, confirms of his sovereign authority the gift which Unfredus de Bohum had made to God and St. Martin of Marmoutier of the church of St. Georges at Bohon, i. e. of the benefice of four canons, and of the fief of a knight named Serlo, which the brethren of the said monastery had bought. The church was collegiate for secular canons, and Humphrey gave this alms to St. Martin under an agreement to this effect, that when a canon should die, a monk, a priest, should replace him, until the number of four monks, priests, who were to sojourn there constantly, should be complete. Humphrey de Bohon had, it seems, been thrice married prior to the conquest of England, for, when he gave to the nuns of St. Amand at Rouen the tythe of his own plough and a garden for himself and his three wives, the grant was witnessed by William Comes, William clericus, Robert his brother, of Belfou and Restold, the priest of Beveron. The locality of this grant is unnoticed in the transcript of the deed, an extract only, in the Chartulary; but it probably relates to Puchay, of which vill William de Cléville had given a fourth part for his daughter Matilda, and Robert his brother another fourth part along with the church and all belonging to it, to the same abbey, with the sanction of William Comte and Duke of the Normans. The other moiety was the fief of Humphrey de Bohon, for he subsequently gave it and the tythe to the Monastery of St. Leger at Préaux upon these terms, viz. that after his death all he had in the said vill should belong to their church for his redemption and that of his kinsmen; which gift his sons Robert and Richard assented to and placed the gift upon the altar. The same Humphrey also gave to St. Leger the tythe of Barbivilla and the church of St. Mary (Nôtre Dame de Brevans) and the tythe of the bourg of Carentan with the rectory; and not long after he increased and confirmed this gift for a second daughter of his admitted into the monastery, when his sons Richard and Humphrey, and Ralph du Cotentin their cousin, in like manner as before placed the gift upon the altar, these being witnesses, Estur dapiſer, Osbern, Geoffrey clericus, Helbert præpositus, and Almericus pistor. At the time of the Domesday survey the only land held by Humphrey de Bohon in England was a manor at Taterford in Norfolk; but in the reign of William Rufus he was enfeoffed of an extensive barony in the county of Wiltshire. These details are evidences of a long life, and justify the description of the Trouveur, Robert Wace,

E de Bohon li vieil Onfroï.

Robert, named first in order of the sons of Humphrey de Bohon, was apparently deceased in the lifetime of his father; of Richard, the next in succession, an act in confirmation of the grant of Humphrey to Marmoutier has been preserved, entitled Auctoramentum Richardi filii Humfredi de Bohum in the Manuscript, of which the context is as follows: "Let all now and to come know that Ricardus de Mareio granted to St. Martin and his monks in their Chapter whatever his father had given them, on account of his soul and the soul of his father, and also on account of a certain monk of the same place by name Ingelrannus, who had admonished him on this head, moreover, on account of a certain little boy his son, whom he had given to the same place to bring up and educate until of such age as to be able to bear monkhood, if indeed he should choose to be a monk. And we wish here to notify the fact, that the aforesaid Richard made in person the gift to our abbot under whose rule we lived, the lord abbot Bernard, before all our brethren, who were then in our Chapter, and afterward placed the gift upon the altar of St. Martin. Be it known also that in the same place and on the same day the aforesaid Richard granted to us the cell of Bohon above mentioned, to be enjoyed for ever as free and quit as we had it on the day on which his father Humfredus died, promising that he would guard and defend it and all belonging to it for us, as far as in any mode he justly might, from all mankind. And he also there made this promise that throughout Normandy, wheresoever we should have need of his aid or service, he would be to us a helper, as one of our servants of our kitchen. And if the Lord should grant him to increase in his goods, he would also increase our goods. These witnesses saw and heard the whole of this proceeding. These are on his behalf, Richard Arbalestarius, Lewis Ridellus, Odo son of Guicher de castro Rainaldi (Chateau-Renault). On our behalf, Arnulfus Cellerarius, Otgerius de Hospitio, Aimo de Hospitio, Landricus Bucherius, Johannes Hospitalarius, Letbertus de Sartrino, Hildenanus de Coquina, Algisus de Coquina, Herbertus de Bohonio. Done in the year from the Incarnation of the Lord M.C.XIII. We being under the rule of the Lord abbot Bernard in the tenth year of his ordination." Mareium (Meri) designated the marshy territory along the banks of the river L'Ouve in the vicinity of Le Homme, otherwise L'Isle-Marie, adjacent to the communes of Liésville on one side and of Picauville on the other. Thus Symon de Mareio gave to the abbey of St. Sauveur the entire church of St. Martin of Levila with the whole tythe of the same vill and all the glebe of the said church, viz. eleven acres of land and all the tythes of his mills and of all his fisheries de Mareio, which gift Nigel, to wit, and Roger, the Vicomtes, granted and confirmed and maintained for the souls of all their ancestors. Henry, likewise, des Aigneaux assented to this gift and with his own hand placed it upon the altar. Emma wife of Ralph de Mareio^c and her daughter Albereda gave to the abbey of St. Sauveur the land which she had in her dower, which lay adjacent to Breteville and Guillemaison, for their own souls and for the soul of Ralph her husband and of Symon her son^d and of her other predecessors; and the Lord Abbot Unfridus and the monks, beside the prayers and benefits of the church which he granted to them, he and the whole convent in chapter gave to the mother 30s. and to the daughter a certain tucked up silken garment, Nigel the Vicomte giving his assent and bearing his testimony, these the witnesses, Ralph Surbosc, William son of Robert, Osmund de Bruchebot (Briquebosc), Robert son of Hamon, Picot nephew of the Prior. At Picauville the prior of Bohon had as parcel of the endowment of his cell a portion of the tythe, which had doubtless been thus constituted a prebend of the church of Bohon by reason of the territory being held of the founder. To an instrument containing an enrolment of grants made to the abbey of L'Essay previous to the accession of Henry I. Signum Richardi de Meri is subscribed; and in regard to his issue, beside Herbert de Bohon left at

^c Ralph de Mairie was also himself a benefactor to the abbey of St. Sauveur by his charter confirming a gift which his father had made, and granting the land of the marura de capite ville, which had belonged to Herbert du Pré, together with three hundred head of eels in his fisheries of Mairie and Liesville, and to which Geoffrey de Mairie was an attesting witness. Ralph de Maireio and Emma his wife and his sons, together with Geoffrey de Baudreville, gave to the same abbey whatever they had in the church of St. Ouen de Catteville, and Riwallon de Grocei gave two parts of his tythe in Houesville which he held of Ralph de Mairi. The father of Ralph bore the local surname of Liesville, for Alexander de Livilla, by consent of Ralph his first born, gave to St. Sauveur the land of his demesne in monte monasterii, which is situate between the church of St. Martin and the windmill, following the track of the road from the vill to the church.

^d Roger de Sotevast gave to the abbey of St. Sauveur the church of St. Brelade with all the tythe of the said vill for the soul of his brother Ralph, who was buried in the said abbey. Afterward William de Magnavilla his brother, for the death of Simon de Mareio, conceded and confirmed this donation in the presence of Nigel the Vicomte and Roger his brother, and with his own hand placed it upon the altar.

Marmoutier, a daughter of Richard de Meri was apparently the wife of one Engelger, a Norman of the Côtentin, who in 1130 was instrumental in making peace between Henry I. and his favourite Geoffrey de Clinton, then labouring under a false charge of treason, whereupon the latter enfeoffed him of the vill of Théville in that district. In proof of this conjecture we find in a recital as to the tenure of certain land in Oxfordshire, which dates from the time of King John, that Hugh de Plaiz held seven hides in Bereford (Little Barford), which had been given to Richard de Meri in augmentation of his barony at the Conquest of England for his service, and he had given them to Enjugier de Bohon in frank-marriage, and he the said Enjugier gave them to the ancestor of Hugh de Plaiz. The failure of male issue of Richard de Meri will have opened his succession to the son born of this marriage, and have at the same time given birth to a claim on the part of his nephew, Humphrey de Bohon, the King's Steward, who sought to make title to the land of Meri; for in 1131 a proffer of sixty marks of silver would be owing from him to the crown si poterit dirrationare terram de Meri.^e The brothers Engelger and Alexander de Bohon were conspicuous among the most active partisans of Geoffrey Comte of Anjou, being by him entrusted with the custody of the captured fortresses of Argentan and Domfront, when, after the death of Henry I. he entered Normandy with an army to claim the inheritance of his son, afterwards Henry II. Along with Robert de Neubourg, Robert de Courcy and Richard de la Haie, Engelger de Bohon acted as justiciary for the Comte Geoffrey in the Bessin and Côtentin; and in 1151 Richard de Bohon, Dean of Bayeux, was made Bishop of Coutances. Of Engelger de Bohon an original charter has been preserved, made by him in favour of the Cistercian abbey of Quarr in the Isle of Wight, whereby for the health of his soul and the souls of his parents he ^e Rot. Pip. 31 Hen. I. Willelcira, p. 18, 1833, 8vo. The suit would appear to have been decided in favour of Humphrey de Bohon, for among the fiefs held of the Honour of Carentan in 1220 we find that Matheus de Malliaco tenet inde feodum unius militis apud Piquauvilla et alibi de dono D'ni Regis. Carentan is in the immediate vicinity of Bohon, in the marshy district watered by the river Taute, and a yearly grant of a thousand eels from Carentan was parcel of the endowment of the Priory of Farley, com. Wilts, confirmed by the charter of Humphrey de Bohon and Margaret his wife. Carentan, with the lands in England of which the old Humphrey de Bohon had been enfeoffed, fell to the share of Humphrey de Bohon, younger brother of Richard de Bohon, otherwise de Meri. He married Mathildis or Mabilia, daughter of Edward of Salisbury, and dying in 1131 left issue Humphrey de Bohon, Dapifer Regis, and a daughter Mabilia. Adela, aunt of Humphrey de Bohon, was living in 1131, having lands in Wiltshire.

grants to the monks his land in Haseley, quam in insula de Wict a progenitoribus meis jure hereditario possideo.^f To the abbey of Savigny Engelger de Bohun confirmed the gift made by Richard de St. Fromond and Rohais his wife and William their son of lands held of his fief; and to the abbey of L'Essay he gave the half of one thousand eels caught at Bohon. His wife Adeliza was a daughter of Stephen Comte of Aumale, and relict of Robert Bertram, a great baron of the Côtentin, of whose Honour the castle of Briquebec was the caput, in the Deanery of Les Pieux. "William Comte of Aumale had four sisters, daughters of Stephen, one of whom was given to the Vidame of Picquigny (Girardus), another to the Vidame of Gerberoy, a third to the nobleman Bertrannus of Brikebec, the fourth to William de Roumare, and afterward to Peter de Brus." The following deed proves the second marriage of the third sister, and substantiates the above genealogy, taken from the Register of Fountains: "To the beloved in the Lord Jesus Christ, to all the sons of Holy Mother Church, be it known that I, Adeliza, daughter of the Comte of Aumale, through regard of God and in pity give and grant to the abbey of St. Sauveur in perpetual alms the church of St. Mary of Le Homme, which I have in my dower, as Helias des Aigneaux and Thomas and William his sons and Corbinus his nephew have given and confirmed the same by their charter in the time of Richard de Bohun, by the grace of God Bishop of Coutances. This gift I have granted for my own redemption and that of the Lord Engelger my husband, and that of my son Robert Bertram, and for the souls of my father and mother and of all my ancestors. These being witnesses, Engelger de Bohun, Humphrey prior of Bohun, Andrew de Gonneville, William the priest of Le Homme, Osmund Calf (Vitulus), William Hare (Lepus) and many others." The charter here referred to sets forth the grant of Helias and his sons above named of ^f Mon. Ang. vol. I. p. 761, ex autogr. in officio Armorum. To this charter were subscribed the signatures of Algar Bishop of Coutances (1131—1151), Hugh abbot of Cerisy, Peter abbot of Montebourg, Theodoric abbot of St. Lo, Serlo abbot of Savigny (1140—1153), William de Bosevilla (Beuzeville), Bigot, Gervase de Bosevilla, Geoffrey Le Roux, Helias des Aigneaux, Baldwin nephew of the Bishop, Robert le Waleis, Stephen de Seon (Saon) and Robert de Brehal. The progenitors of Engelger de Bohon were doubtless indebted to the family of Rethvers, Barons of Néhou in the Côtentin, for their possessions in the Isle of Wight. Richard de Rethvers, son of Comte Gislebert of Brione, had been invested with the signiory and demesnes of the island by Henry I. in the beginning of his reign, and from that time the surnames of the feudatories who held of the Honour point to the Côtentin as their parent country. From the like connection William son of Robert Estur of the Isle of Wight became a feudatory of Engelger de Bohun in the Côtentin, where with the consent of his lord he gave to the abbey of Montebourg the church of Thiéville and certain tenements in the parish.

the said church and all its appurtenances, for their salvation, and for the soul of Henry brother of Helias, and all their ancestors; in consideration of which gift abbot Hugh and the monks of St. Sauveur granted to the said Helyas the habit of a monk in the abbey in case he should apply. This donation Corbinus des Aigneaux, son of Henry, conceded and placed with his own hand on the altar; also Robert Bertram, to whose charter Robert Bertram his son was a witness, ratified the grant made to St. Sauveur and the monks there serving God of the right of patronage of the church of Blessed Mary of Le Homme, and further gave 20s. money of Anjou for the lights of the church of St. Sauveur to be taken annually in the præpositura of Le Homme. This mention of a Prevôté is distinctive of a bourg, whilst holm is expressive of a locality surrounded by water; such was the site of the bourg of Le Homme, called L'Isle-Marie from the adjacent marsh, which had this name, (Mareium, Meri) rather than by reason of the dedication of the church within its territory to the blessed Mary. In the Chartulary of the abbey of St. Sauveur it is put upon record that the church of St. Sauveur was free from all episcopal dues from the time of the elder Richard Comte of the Normans, and of Roger the Vicomte, who began the church of St. Sauveur and constructed it thus exempt; who for this privilege granted to Blessed Mary of Coutances the church of St. Nicholas de Hulmo and the street (vicus) which is called Gishaula in the same vill. Wherefore, in the list of the possessions of the see of Coutances, which William Duke of the Normans, son of Robert, caused to be inserted in his Charter as being of the endowment in the time of his predecessors, recital is made of the church of Le Homme, together with the tythe of the toll of the same vill and three dwellings. In the bull of Pope Eugenius III. addressed to Algar Bishop of Coutances, the property of his see in this place is set down as comprising "the church of St. Mary of Le Homme, the chapel of St. Nicholas, and the land in the same bourg which belongs to the jus, and of the customs and franchises which you justly have in the same place, a piscary in the river Ouve at Merri.s" Mention of a

XI. instr. c. 240. In a charter of Henry II. for the abbey of L'Essay, printed in the same work, c. 234, we read in like manner of "duas dimidias piscarias in Viria, quæ est juxta Hulmum;" but in the Mon. Ang. vol. II. p. 968, where the same charter is transcribed, we have piscarias in Unna, quæ est juxta Hulmum. The latter is the more correct reading and designates the river Ouve, Unva, which has its castle on this site occurs in the act for the settlement of the dower of Adela, wife of Richard III. Duke of the Normans, of the date 1026; it included the city which is called Coutances along with the comté, except the land of Archbishop Robert, and also the castles which were within it, viz. Cherbourg, together with that which is styled Le Homme (Holmus) and that which is styled Brix (Bruoto), with all regarded as belonging to them. This marriage having never been consummated, the dower of Adela reverted to the Comte Robert, Duke of the Normans in succession to his brother, Richard III.; for in a memorial drawn up in the presence of Matildis, Queen of the English, in the year of the Incarnation of our Lord 1075, transcribed into the Chartulary of the Abbaye-aux-Dames at Caen, we read as follows; to wit, "that the Comtesse Adeliz, daughter of Comte Richard II. and sister of Comte Robert, had purchased with her own money of the said Comte, viz. her aforesaid brother Comte Robert, the castle which is called Hulme, situate in the Côtentin, with all thereto belonging. Which, afterward, her son Guy unjustly taking from her gave it to Néel the Vicomte; but if the aforesaid Néel has said that he held it by right of inheritance, be it known that his father by no means had this castle otherwise than because he was Vicomte of the same district, and the Comtesse Adeliz had commanded him as an officer to render her this service. All which at length the Comtesse Adeliz granted without any reservation in her life-time to the abbey established under the name of the Holy and Undivided Trinity at Caen freely and absolutely for the salvation of her soul, and for participation beside in the prayers of that community. Witnesses, Baldwin son of Comte Gislebert, Hugh Pincerna, Hugh de Sildevil, and William the chaplain of the same Comtesse." In the year from the Incarnation of the Lord 1080, William King of the English, Prince of the Normans and the Manceaux, and Queen Matildis his wife, daughter of Baldwin, Duke of the Flemings, gave to the abovementioned abbey the bourg of Le Homme with its revenues, Adelisa, amita mea, benigniter annuente, cujus hereditas erat; with a reservation however in favour of Adeliza, comtesse of Aumale, who also course between Beuseville and Le Homme. It may also be suggested that the street called Gishaula was identical with the three dwellings named in the subsequent charter of William, and with the land belonging to the jus in the Bull of Pope Eugenius. Gishaula probably signifies the toll-house, of which the possession carried with it the right to the tythe of the toll of the bourg; and hence the phrase "quæ pertinet ad jus" may either be a misreading for "ad Gis-haulam," or the expression is used to denote the grant in reference to its being the tenement to which the right of toll customarily attached.

gave her consent to the grant, of the tenancy during her life, sed et comitissa A. de Alba-marla concedente, eo videlicet pacto, ut ipsa teneret in vita sua; post obitum vero suum ad victum sanctimonialium sancta possideret ecclesia. In the year 1094 Robert Courte-heuze, Duke of the Normans, took the castle of Argentan, and afterward the castle of Le Homme (Hulmense castrum),^h which had been garrisoned for King William Rufus by William Peverel, a baron of the Côtentin, whose fief had its chief extension in the parish of Clitourp. This castle is next incidentally mentioned by the historian Ordericus Vitalis in describing the occurrences which followed upon the violent death of Roger the Vicomte in the same district of the Côtentin, at the hands of the partisans of Duke Robert; for in the time of Lent, A.D. 1138, Engelrand de Say and other followers of the King's party boldly encountered Reginald de Dunstanville, son of King Henry, and Baldwin de Redvers, outside the castle of Le Homme (Ulmus), and coming to close quarters, they took prisoners Baldwin and several others. The Comtesse Adeliza, sister of William the Conqueror, had been first the wife of Comte Engerrannus of Ponthieu, who had the castle of Aumale of the inheritance of his mother Berta, daughter of Guerinfridus its founder, and who was slain in 1053 in an attempt to succour William, Comte of Talou, besieged in the castle of Arques. Her second husband was Lambert, lord of Lens in Artois; after whose death she became the wife of Comte Odo of Champagne, who in her right had possession of the castle of Aumale. In 1089 Stephen of Aumale, son of Comte Odo and Adeliz, was the first of the Normans to embrace the party of King William Rufus against Duke Robert, and at the King's expense strongly fortified his castle upon the river Aucius (now the Bresle), and admitted into it a numerous garrison of the King's troops to hold the same against Duke Robert. The castle of Le Homme, which has been shewn to have belonged for life to the Comtesse Adeliz under the agreement recited above, was apparently withheld from the nuns of the abbey of Caen by her son Stephen, and garrisoned in like manner by the King's troops. From him we trace the descent of the fief to his daughter Adeliz, who had it of her marriage portion and conveyed it

^h Simeon of Durham places these hostilities in the year 1094, and ascribes the capture of Argentan to King Philip of France, who had united his forces with those of Duke Robert of Normandy; but who after this success withdrew into France. Comes vero Rodbertus, continues this writer, castellum, quod Holm nuncupatur, obsedit, donec Willielmus Peverel et DCCC homines qui id defendebant illic se dederent. to the family of her first husband, the Baron of Briquebec. The grant of the advowson of the church to the abbey of St. Sauveur has been adverted to above, and conformable thereto in the ancient terriers of the diocese of Coutances the abbot is set down as patron; both the great and small tythes were received by the rector, and in the parish was a chapel belonging to the church without revenue.¹

To return to Engelger de Bohon; with his brother Alexander and Robert de Bohuno he witnessed a charter of Geoffrey Duke of Normandy and Comte of Anjou ratifying the finding of the jury in the time of Algar bishop of Coutances, in respect of the right of his see in the churches of Cherbourg and Tournelville; and in 1154 he witnessed the charter of Richard de la Haie and his wife Matildis de Vernon, founding the abbey of Blanchelande for monks of the order of Prémontré in the vicinity of their castle of La Haie-du-puits. Engelger de Bohon was himself a benefactor to that abbey, giving the terre de Bohonet, and conceding in 1164 his share in the advowson of the church of Ravenoville in the Côtentin. When, in the year 1172, the Barons of Normandy assembled at Caen on the feast of the Nativity of the

¹ In the Observations on the History of Adeliza, sister of William the Conqueror (Archæologia, vol. XXVI. p. 349), an inference has been drawn from the terms of a contemporaneous charter in proof that the Comtesse of Aumale, wife of Comte Odo of Champagne, was the niece and not the sister of King William the Conqueror. The supposition is, however, erroneous, as is shewn by another subsequent charter to the collegiate church of Auchy, written by command of Adelidis the most noble Comtesse, sister, to wit, of William King of the English, confirmante viro suo, videlicet, Odone comite una cum filio suo Stephano. By her first husband Engerrannus, Comte of Ponthieu, she had an only daughter Adelidis, her other daughter Judith being the fruit of a marriage with Comte Lambert of Lens (if we may credit the testimony of the writer of the Life of Waltheof), born about the year 1055 and married to Earl Waltheof in 1070. The Comtesse Adeliza did not long survive her brother King William, after whose death her children the Comtesse Adeldidis, daughter of Comte Engerrannus, and Stephen, son of Comte Odo, shared the inheritance in Normandy, which had constituted her marriage portion and dower. The latter, by his deed bearing date 14th July 1096, and by the title of Comte of Aumale, gave to the church of the monastery of St. Lucian of Beauvais, out of his inheritance held by his predecessors, the church of St. Martin of Auchy with every thing belonging to it heretofore granted or hereafter to be granted, as free and quit as his mother the Comtesse Adelidis and as he himself had hitherto held it since her death, so however that monks may always be there serving God for the soul of William King of the English, and for the soul of his mother Adelidis, and of all the rest of his deceased kindred, and for the remission of his sins, with the consent likewise and corroboration of his sister Adelidis, and by the counsel and suggestion of his barons, Robert Prince of the Normans favouring and confirming this act. In another muniment of the same abbey it is expressly set forth that Adeldidis, daughter of the said Engerrannus and Adeldidis, after their death, in imperio successit; but eventually Comte Stephen had also this succession, for the whole inheritance of the Comtesse Adeliza was of the patrimony which descended to his issue.

Blessed Virgin Mary by the King's mandate, in order that recognition might be made of the service due from each, the following returns were contained in the briefs of the Barons of Bohon ; " Engouger de Bohon ii milit. et viii^m partem militis et ad servicium suum vii milit. in Constantino," and " Hunfridus de Bohon ii milit. et vii partem tertii militis et ad servicium suum ii milit. in Constantino." The land of Engelger de Bohun at St. Marcouf in the Côtentin was in the hands of the King's officers in 1180, who in that year accounted for the issue at the Exchequer, the seizure by the crown having probably followed upon his decease. His heir was Savaric son of Savaric, as is collected from a charter of Richard I. dated at Gorron 31 March 1190 in the first year of his reign, confirming to Francus de Bohun, Ford, Climpling, Rustinton, Presteton and Lovinton, with all appurtenances, in the county of Sussex, as his right and inheritance, and Bohon in Normandy with all its appurtenances liberties and free customs, to hold to him the said Francus and to his heirs, as fully and peaceably as Savaric son of Savaric, heir of Enjulger de Bohon, had held the same on the day he died ; and over this, Midhurst and Esburne with all their appurtenances, and all other the lands and tenements which Savaric son of Cana, and Ralph his son, and Savaric son of Savaric, held in Normandy and in England in the days of Kings Henry II. and Henry I. Savaric son of Cana^k was one of the witnesses to the act of Robert son of William King of the English, Prince of the Normans and the Manceaux, by which, for the salvation of his own soul and those of his ^k Cana was the name of the second wife of Ralph, Vicomte of the Civitas of Le Mans [Comté of Maine], Lord of Beaumont and Fresnay in the Archdeaconry of Le Sannois, and of Ste. Suzanne in the Archdeaconry of Laval. His first wife Emma, daughter of Stephen and Adeburga, and niece of Hubert bishop of the Angevins, died 12th Sept. 1058, and was buried in the cemetery of the monastery of Sts. Sergius and Bacchus at Angers ; on which occasion Ralph her husband gave moieties of the domain (curtis) and the church of St. Remy in the pays de Mauge, which he held of the Bishops of Angers, and was of the inheritance he had acquired with her the said Emma, Vicomtesse of the Manceaux, together with a suburban in the suburb of his castle of Montrevault with all his custom and that of his successors, and a mansion in the suburb of the city of Angers. Savaric, son of the Vicomte Ralph, was with Ernald Bishop of Mans (1067—1080) and others a witness to the grant of John de la Wirce of the church of St. Corneille to the abbey of St. Vincent at Mans, and doubtless identical with the Savaric son of Cana who subscribed the charter of Duke Robert of Normandy cited in the text. Hubert, Vicomte of the Manceaux, issue of the first marriage, married Ermengardis, daughter of William Comte of Nevers, and was ancestor of the successive Vicomtes of Beaumont and Ste. Suzanne, whose lands and honours became vested in Agnes de Beaumont, the wife of Lewis de Brienne, younger son of John King of Jerusalem and Emperor of Constantinople, about the middle of the 13th century. From this match sprung the line of the Lords Beaumont, of whom John, sixth Baron, was the first who had the title of " Viscount " in England, an appellation suggested by the descent from the hereditary Vicomtes of the Manceaux.

father and his mother and his ancestors, he gave with the consent of his brother Henry to the church of the Holy Trinity of Caen, and to Cecily his sister and the nuns there serving God, all that was of his right without the wall of Caen so far as the said church, as free and quit as he had held it in his own demesne, viz. the whole Vaugeois (Vallis Gué), and all the houses so far as the wall and so far as the Petit-Orne (Olnula), with all the rents, likewise the piscary of the water of the Petit-Orne in its entirety, as the King had had the same in his demesne, and besides a market in the vill called Oistrehan, and the toll and the whole extent of territory of the said vill. Hujus rei fuerunt testes et liberatores Simon de Camilleio, Savericus filius Cane, Radulfus capellanus de Airi, Rogerius Poignant, Rogerius Malacorona dispensator, Toraldus Hostiarius. Ralph the son of Savaric was a witness in the reign of King Stephen to a charter of Earl William of Chichester confirming the gift of the church of Bilsington, in the county of Kent, made to the abbey of L'Essay in Normandy by Ralph de Haia on the day of his marriage with Oliva, sister of the Earl; and to another of John Fitz-Gillebert, late Marshal of the Court of King Henry I., granting to Hugh de Ralegh his land of Nettlecomb in the county of Somerset. Of the gift of Ralph son of Savaric, conjointly with the mesne-tenants Gernagan and Ralph his son, the Knights Hospitallers of St. John had the land of Paling, otherwise Pooling, in the county of Sussex, the seat afterward of a Preceptory, and in the same county William Earl of Arundel gave him twenty librates of land for his service. He died without issue, and his inheritance was shared between his brothers Savaric and Geldwin, of whom mention is made in the returns of the Sheriff of Sussex 3 Hen. II. 1157, and upon recognition being made of the Knight-service of the Honour of Arundel on occasion of the scutage pro exercitu Walliæ 5 Hen. II. 1159, the name of "Savaricus" was put down as for three knights. In the 6 Hen. II. 1160, Joldewin son of Savaric had remitted to him by the King's brief the sum of fifty marks due pro conventionem terræ, whereupon the Sheriff of Sussex had his discharge entered upon the Roll; which convention was confirmed by royal charter teste'd at Salisbury by Thomas the Chancellor and Warine Fitzgerold and Manasses Biset the Steward and Joscelinus de Baillol and William Fitz-Hamon. The parties to it had been the said Geldwin and Savaric his brother, and it concerned the land which had been Ralph their brother's. By the terms of this convention the manor of Esemburne cum Middehurst with all its appurtenances, and the vill of Rustinton with all its appurtenances, and that his purparty of Prestebrok as it had been parted out for him, and a moiety of the wood of Strodeuica, and the fief of Ralph de St. Georges of Tratinton, and one half hide of the land of Liperinges, and the fief of Gernagodus of Paling and Horemere, and the fief of Richard de St. Georges of the woodland between the new bridge and Latuerpe, and the fief of Newick and of Silescombe and all the burgenses whom his father Savaricus had and held in the time of King Henry I.; and, moreover, the twenty librates of land which William Earl of Arundel had given to Ralph son of Savaricus, his brother, for his service, viz. the fief of Richard de St. Georges of Dedeling with all its appurtenances, and the fief of Richard de St. Georges of Dempford, and the land of the manor of Harting, and the land of the manor of Burne, which William de Cheney and Gernagodus and Richard Ruffus and Thomas de Aseville then held, were to remain to Geldewin, sicut Radulfus filius Savarici eas melius tenuit die quâ fuit vivus et mortuus. This Geudewin son of Savaric conceded to God and Holy Mary and the monks of Boxgrave the mill of Buthesuelle and the land belonging to it, and the land of the said fountain, in perpetual alms free and quit as William de Cheney had given it to them, the lady Estrangia, wife of Goldewin, being a witness to the charter. Their son was named Francus, and upon the death of Savaric son of Savaric, who appears to have left no issue, he as heir general of the family had a right to the lands of his uncle, and to the succession of Engelger de Bohon in England and Normandy previously held by the same Savaric. But Francus and his kindred had incurred the King's displeasure, wherefore he was compelled to compound for his inheritance with Ralph de Arden, the son-in-law of the powerful favourite Rannulph de Glanville, and a fine was passed between them in the presence of Henry II. at Caen. With the successor of Henry he however found favour; the previous fine was not to be to his detriment, and the entire succession was confirmed to him by the charter granted by Richard I. in the first year of his reign. In 1195 Francus de Bohon was deceased, for his land at Merville in the Oximin near Caen had been in the hands of the officers of the crown, who had the custody of the escheats in the district in that year, though restored to his widow prior to its close. In the same year Geoffrey Sirehome paid into the treasury the issues from the view of Bohon in the previous Easter-term, as custos of the escheats in the Côtentin, and Robert Tresgoz, the Bailiff of the Côtentin, rendered accompt of 4 li. of the ferm of the land of Engelger de Bohon in St. Marcouf. The heir [Engelger] was then under age, for Rohais de

Bohon rendered account in the Bailiwick of the Oximin of her fine for having the custody of her land and of her son, and for licence of marrying herself; nearly a moiety of this fine had been paid in 1195, and it would seem that she had been put in possession of the Honour from the commencement of the fiscal year. In 1198 Ralph de Arden was again a minister of the crown and Bailiff of Pont-Audemer; thus in favour with Richard, he commenced a fresh suit against Engelger de Bohon, of which we have notice in the entry already cited from the Roll now commented upon. In the following year a concord was made by chyrograph between the parties at Vaudreuil before William Fitz-Ralph, the Seneschal of Normandy, on Wednesday next before Palm-Sunday (7 April) 1199, that is to say, on the morrow of King Richard's death from the wound received at Chaluz, the witnesses being the Lords, Hubert archbishop of Canterbury, Savaric bishop of Bath, William the Marshall, Comte Robert of Sééz, William du Hommet, Constable of Normandy, Roger de Tony, Ralph Tessun, Robert de Harewecurt, John des Préaux, Peter des Préaux, Fulk Paine, William de Mortemer, Robert de Haie, and many other barons and loyal subjects of the Lord the King then and there present. The terms agreed upon embraced a release from Enjurer de Bohon to Ralph de Arden of the manor of Fordres with all its appurtenances, of Clippinges and a moiety of the vill of Yelesham, of the services of Ralph Sanzaveir and Ylebert de Rakinton for their tenements in Rakinton, and the service of Ralph Kenion, with all other appurtenances; and over this ten pounds sterling worth of land in Lovinton; the remainder of the inheritance, belonging either to Ralph son of Savaric or to Enjurer de Bohon in Normandy and in England, to continue with the said Enjurer and his heirs for ever. Moreover all disputes between them, as well in the ecclesiastical court as in the secular court, are declared to be included within the scope of this agreement, and thereby settled and foregone; an article, which raises the presumption that the ground of the claim on the part of Ralph de Arden had its origin in an alleged illegitimacy of descent from a common ancestor of the line of Bohon. In the reign of King John the suit was revived by Enjurer de Bohon against Thomas de Arden, son of Ralph de Arden, and another compromise effected, whereby Enjurer recovered possession of the manor of Ford with its appurtenances, he quitclaiming to Thomas and his heirs his right in Lovinton and engaging to enfeof him in twelve librates of land in Prescinton and to give him fifty marks.¹ Enjurer de Bohon and his cousin Henry de Bohun, created by King John Earl of Hereford, remained steadfast in their allegiance to that monarch, and their Honours of Bohon and Carentan, as escheats, were yet in the King's hands in 1220, of which date are these entries in the Register of Philip-Augustus; "Karanton, quod habet Rex in manu sua, debet servicium duorum militum et dimidii. Bohon debet servicium unius militis." From Engelger de Bohun descended the line which flourished at Midhurst in the county of Sussex, and held a distinguished place in the Baronage of England.

The ancestors of John de Gisors, whose land in Normandy was this year in ferm as an escheat, were connected with the place from which they had their local surname prior to the acquisition of the crown of England by the Duke of the Normans. Among the muniments of the abbey of Marmoutiers was a Præceptum de ecclesia s'ci Audoeni et ecclesia S. Gervasii de Gisorcio prepared in the name of Hugh, a knight, whereby, with the assent of his wife Mathildis and of his sons Tetbold and Drogo, Hugh and Lambert, he gave to the brethren of that monastery and to their abbot Bartholomew a certain place belonging to him by hereditary right, constructed in honour of St. Ouen, with its endowment; qui locus, habens ab oriente Franciam, ab occidente verò Normanniam, consistit super fluvium Heptam inter utramque patriam fluentem atque alteram ab altera dividentem. With this place he also gave the parochial church of Gisors built in honour of Sts. Gervase and Protase, situate in the pays de Rouen, together with the right of presentation and all other its appurtenances; all which was done at St. Ouen in the presence of numerous witnesses, whose signatures are subscribed to the writing. And the pre-excellent Duke of the Normans and the same who was King of the English, William, in the first year of such his reign, together with the pre-excellent Mahildis his wife, confirmed the act proprio auctoramento at a certain seat of his which they commonly call Leons, on the eighth of the kalends of July, i. e. 24th June 1067. The land so given had been parcel of the ancient possessions of the see of Rouen, but John of Avranches the Archbishop conceded to the cell of St. Ouen at Gisors all it might be possessed of, that was belonging ad casamentum Rotomagensis ecclesiæ, (which property is there specified to be of the gift of Hugh de Chaumont, knight, and of his wife Matildis, de cujus dote est ipse locus, and of his four sons), to the use and behoof of the monks of Marmoutier there serving God, upon the annexed condition; that the said church should acknowledge itself endowed de rebus S. Mariæ by an annual payment of three deniers d'or at an appointed term, to wit, on the 16th of October, to every bishop presiding over the said church for the time being; three services being likewise subjoined, which in each year the monk appointed over the cell should be bound to render, viz. 1. to carry on behalf of the church of Rouen a dispatch to the King of France thrice a year between the two rivers Epte and Oise, if need be; 2. to celebrate a trental for the repose of the soul of each bishop upon being informed of his decease, and 3. to say three masses for each canon deceased, the canons doing the same for the monks. In a subsequent Auctoramentum of Archbishop Hugh, dated 11th July 1146, a further benefaction to this cell of lands, wood, hótes and an oven at Gisors, is set down as the gift of Hugh de Neigesto, an unknown locality, if it be not a misreading for Nealfo, Neaufle, a local surname, which is found elsewhere attached to Hugh, the grandson of Hugh de Gisors, from his holding the fief of Bezu in chief of the crown by the service of three knights, himself being included as one, owing castleward at Neaufle. Thetbald son of Hugh is noticed by Ordericus Vitalis under the name of Tedbaldus-Paganus de Gisortis, among the Norman knights captured in an affray in 1097, whose rich ransoms urged the needy French to fight; and adds that to him Duke Robert of Normandy committed the fortress of Gisors simply because he had once shared his hospitality. Of John de Gisors two acts remain on record in favour of the cell of Gisors, one bearing date in 1181, and the other made in the life-time of Geoffrey abbot of Marmoutier 1197—1210. After the surrender of Gisors he appears to have incurred forfeiture of his land in Normandy by embracing the side of the King of France, in whose dominions in the Vexin-Français he held an extensive Honour; he was with the enemies of King John, 11th May 1203, when by precept of that date William de Mortemer was commanded to deliver over to Richard de Villequier the vill of Tôtes with its appurtenances, quæ fuit Johannis de Gisorciiis. The Register of Philip-Augustus contains a record of divers inquisitions made concerning certain fiefs of the Archbishops of Rouen in the Vexin, when it was found by the jurors of the Vexin-Normand that all John de Gisors had held at Gisors, extending to the water-course and to the elm tree near the Lepers' Hospital, was of the fief of the Archbishop of Rouen, except the rotage, and that he held these fiefs of Hugh de Gournai, who held the same of the Archbishop; on the other hand, the jurors of the Vexin-Français said that all extending from the elm-tree beyond the Lepers' Hospital to the course of the stream, that is to say, of the Epte, was of the fief of the Archbishop of Rouen, the rotage and all beyond the said stream being of the fief of the Lord the King. In 1220 a Hugh de Gisors was tenant of the fief of Bezu-le-long, and the other inheritance of the family in either Vexin. The monies so received by the Vicomtes of Rouen served in part to defray the personal expenses of the sovereign whilst sojourning in the Isle d'Andely, the other disbursements being in the shape of sums remitted to such citizens of Rouen as were fermors of the revenue or supervisors of works, to those who had in charge the fortification of Gamaches and of the castle of the Roche d'Andely, to Peter des Préaux on a mission to Germany, to Master Gislebert des Prés and William de Guines for the carriage of the King's wines throughout the castles of Normandy, to William the Cook for the payment of the wages of the knights and men-at-arms, and to Peter Ruaut for the payment of the wages of the garrison at Gamaches. Makadé had in payment 195 li. 15s. 6d. and for the expenses of the Comte of Flanders at Drincourt (Neufchatel) 100 li. had been set apart; other items of expenditure included the cost of the royal stud at Rouen, and of those who had it in charge, as reported by William de St. Maur, the prices paid for stores sent to the castles of Longchamp and Gamaches and to the castle of Evreux, for armour for the use of the mercenaries, for harness for the King's chariots, and for robes for the officers of the Household, as also the wages paid to Master Geoffrey of Bayonne and three other carpenters for making four gallies, to Roger de Ouville, to Roger de Hugleville, to Robert Rossel and his companions, to the troops in garrison at Tillières, and to others. The deposit in the Treasury was only 4 li. 4s. 6d., thus leaving the accomptants debtors to the crown in the sum of 650 li. 4s. 1d. Below on the Roll Gislebert de Marleiz made return of the residue of his accompt as custos of the escheats in the pays de Caux in the past year, and of 10 li. on behalf of Hugh de Normanville for having a grant of the land of Hugh de Quênai. By reason of the war with France the manor of Berneval belonging to the great abbey of St. Denis was at ferm in that year, and should have yielded 28 li. 15s. to the Treasury, which sum the Comte of Eu had taken.

The issues of the Valley of the Seine from the bridge of Rouen down to Moulineaux were this year rendered accompt of in the name of Richard Brieguerre by Robert his clerk; among the payments made thereout we have to the Hospital of Rouen 3 li. 7s. 6d., which the King gave in the purprestures of the said valley by his charter. Peter des Préaux named above owed 12 li. 12s. 6d. of the residue of the purprestures and 4 li. 4s. for the Bernage of the Valley of the Seine during the current year, as also other sums remaining due for the tallage there and in the Bailiwick of the Lieuvain. The heir of Matthew de Clara (Clères) was likewise a debtor on his father's account for the Bernage of Couronne in the past year to the same amount, and in 16 li. 1s. 6d. of the purprestures of the Valley of the Seine of the third preceding year.

The accompt of Sawale son of Henry, Robert son of Hermer, and Matthew son of Enard, on behalf of themselves and their associates, of their receipts during two years, exhibits payments made to them of large sums from the King's privy purse, from the Treasury at Caen, from money-changers and collectors of the revenue, and from the several Bailiwicks of Normandy, together with other smaller sums obtained from the sale of booty captured in war and from the custom on wines, from vessels, prizes in time of war, from the sale of corn and wine out of the stores of the castle of La Roche and the castle of L'Isle, from the ransom of prisoners taken in war, together with the fine of Ralph de Daubœuf, and from the sale of skins captured from the French in war-time. Nearly the entire amount, being a total of 48,878 li. 13s. 8d., had gone to defray the works of the Bellum Castrum of La Roche, and of the castle of L'Isle, and of the Royal dwellings of L'Isle,—the works of the houses and of the hérissans, and of the ditches of La Couture,—the works of the houses of the vill beneath La Roche, and the works of the bridges and ramparts and hérissans on the side toward Thosny. The items are thus set forth, to wit, in hurdle and palissade, 1700 li. 3s.—to the woodmen who felled and hewed the timber for the said works, 2320 li.—to the carpenters who wrought the said timber after it had been brought upon the spot to make the said works, 3350 li. 3s. 6d.—to the under workmen, viz. to the hodmen with baskets, bags, mortars, handbarrows and tubs, to the carriers of water in barrels, and to the watchmen of the said works, 9730 li.—to the carriers of the timber and hewn planks, 1004 li. 5s. 4d.—to the smiths, and in charcoal for the forges to make the said works, 250 li.—to the warders and porters of the said castles, 543 li.—to the fletchers who made bolts for the engines, arrows and quarrels, 202 li.—to the miners who made the dungeons and cut the fosses of La Roche and the cellars, 1780 li. 19s.—in cartage and in the cost of asses and ass-drivers, and in the harness of the horses and asses, 4040 li.—in the masonry, 5520 li. 1s.—to the quarry-men who won the stone from the quarries, 2600 li. 5s. 6d.—to the cutters of the stone to make the walls, 2600 li.—for ships and boats which brought the timber and stone, 1700 li. 5s.—to the lime-workers who made and brought the lime, 4010 li.—for getting and bringing the sand, 1500 li.—for iron and bars and steel and lead and tin and quarrels, and the iron fastenings of the engines, and for plating with iron the gates of the castles, and for locks and bolts for the doors, 455 li.—for plaster for the chimney-pieces and for plastering the floors of the chambers, 80 li.—for cords and cables, 185 li.—for encompassing the castle of L'Isle with a defence of stone, 1250 li.—for making three wells in the castle of La Roche, 300 li.—for making a bridge over the stream of Ganboon, 30 li.—for making the bridge of Between-the-two-islands, 120 li.—for making the bridge Makadé, 25 li.—for the bridge which passes through the middle of the island of Gardon, 60 li.—for the mill-stones and buildings of the mills of Andely, 100 li.—for making the King's store-pond above Andely, 194 li.—for three vessels bought, 54 li.—to Ralph Berenger 30 li. of the King's gift, and to others severally named smaller sums—to the Lepers of Andely 10 li. of the King's alms—for a garden bought at Vezillon, 12 li.—for seven tuns of wine bought and put in store in the castle of La Roche, 58 li.—to Alan Wastehose and his men-at-arms sojourning at Thosny, 30 li.—for the wages of 890 men-at-arms serving on foot for eight days, 300 li. 9s.—for wine and salt bought and sent as store to the castle of Dangu, 51 li. 10s.—for corn bought and carried to Gournai, 42 li. 10s.—to Elias of the Almonry for the works of the castle of Gamaches, 900 li.—to Franco and Hainnes Lepetit for the works of the castle of Longchamp, 400 li.—for the works of the castle of Clerie, 484 li.—for the works of the castle of Boteavant, 440 li. 10s.—and to Robert de Harcourt 162 li. 7s. of which he owed an accompt. The residue after this expenditure was 196 li. 6s. 4d., of which sum the same parties rendered accompt below; 12 li. 16s. 4d. had been paid into the Treasury, another sum of 153 li. 10s. had been delivered to Robert Fitz-hermer and Robert de Harcourt by the King's brief, and they owed 30 li., which remained charged upon Amauri de Vilers (Villers, a hamlet in the commune of Les Andelys), the money having been paid for his ransom.

Les Andelys is at the present time a commune, which gives name to an Arrondissement of the Département of L'Eure and to a canton in the same; it contains two bourgs, Le Grand and Le Petit Andely, whence the plural epithet. Under the Norman Dukes Andely, Andeliacum, Andelium, had been appropriated to the see of Rouen, and the Bull of Pope Innocent II., dated 6th Oct. 1131, in confirmation of the rights and properties of that church recites, oppidum quod dicitur Andeleium cum villis, sylvis, pratis, aquis, justitiis ac libertatibus, cum portu et navium redditibus. The bourg was at a distance of more than a quarter of a league from the Seine upon the stream called Gambon, and at the junction of this stream with the river was probably situate the port of Andely, to which reference is here made. Between this port and the bourg the land was anciently in cultivation and had hence the name of La Couture, the church of St. Sauveur at Le Petit Andely being described as the church of La Couture (Cultura) in the Register of the Archiepiscopal Visitations made in 1254. To the south-east of this spot the land forms an elevated plateau, abutting on the Seine, and carved out at its extremity into the form of a wedge by deep ravines, which descend rapidly to the level of La Couture on the one side and to the river on the other, the connecting tongue of land being of narrow dimensions, while the area beyond is considerable. At the furthest point the ground breaks off abruptly, the fall of the cliff being perpendicular to the very edge of the Seine, which is here intersected in its course by more than one islet. Such was the locality chosen by Richard Cœur-de-lion for the construction of a barrier against France during the interval of repose, which the treaty of Issoudun, ratified at Louviers in the month of January 1196, had secured to his arms. Having fortified, says a contemporary writer, a certain small stronghold on the river Seine in the place which is called Portjoie [Portus Gaudii], King Richard, proceeding onwards step by step, raised another fort on an island near the port of Andely.

Est locus, Andelii qui nunc habet Insula nomen, Quó secat in geminos se Sequana frugifer alveos;
Hunc Rex Richardus turri muniverat olim,
Et circumdederat vallis et mœnibus altis,
Ædificans intùs penetralia regia, dignos
Principibus summis habitari rite penates, Pontibus erectis quibus utraque ripa petatur.

The works of the royal Palace here described to have been built within the fortified precinct of the Isle d'Andely are noticed in the above accompt, and several charters of Richard I. and John are dated during their sojourn in the Isle d'Andely. Of the bridges, by which either bank of the Seine was gained, the one carried through the islet of Gardon was doubtless that which connected the island of Andely with the left bank, the cost, owing to this interposition of dry ground, being less by one half than that of the bridge between the Isle d'Andely and La Couture, which had the name of the Bridge de Inter duas Insulas. This name is explained by the testimony of the writer above quoted, who describes the site of the bourg of Le Petit Andeli as artificially insulated in the following passage; "and there upon the bank of the Seine on the east side he built a most fair bourg in a place strongly fortified by nature, for on one side the river abovementioned encircled it, and on the other a very wide and deep pond; from which pond two streams, both of which might be called a river, ran down to the river Seine in front of either entrance of the bourg; and over both streams he built bridges, and as well at the entrances as round about he erected towers of stone and wood, battlements and loopholes for the shot of the cross-bows being put in the space between."^m This description explains the position of the royal store-pond de super Andelium, and the large sum expended upon making it is corroborative of the size and depth being such as the words imply; on the other hand the bridge super aquam de Ganboon and the bridge Makadé, having name from the famous leader of Richard's mercenaries, correspond with the bridges here said to have been built over the two streams. This pond, long since dried up, occupied a part of the ground between the old bourg and the new, and at the present day the road which traverses the meadow which has replaced it retains the name of La Chaussée. Of the entrances to the bourg one faced the castle of La Roche to the south, and the other gave access to the country to the north and east. Toward Thosny, on the west bank of the Seine, the approaches to the bridge had been protected by a barbican, and the site itself of Thosny is ascertained to have been converted into a fortress, Roger de Thosny having had acquittance in the next reign for 100 li. money of Anjou, advanced to him by King Richard ad domum suam de Toney firmandam. An advanced fort had also been constructed at Cleri, a hamlet within the commune of Les Andelys, and another in the commune of Portmort at the extremity of the fief of Andely, on the right bank of the Seine, appropriately termed the castle of Boteavant, by contraction for bouté en avant, which signifies pulsus in anteriora, as we are told by a coeval historian. In like manner a vernacular epithet was applied to designate the castle of La Roche d'Andely, which as shewing a saucy front to the enemy had commonly the name of Le Chateau Gaillard, quod sonat in Gallico Petulantiam.^a The castle of Dangu, mentioned in the above accompt, was held as a Vavassorie for the service of one knight by the family of Crispin, barons of Néaufle; its territory extended to the river Epte, and was conterminous with the parish of Néaufle, the castle of which place had prior to the date of this accompt been yielded to the King of France. In 1197 King Richard forcibly compelled William Crispin, who then had this signiory, to deliver up the castle to him, which he put immediately into a fit state of defence, and in the month of September of the following year he was here with his army. On this occasion, Richard, having crossed the Epte on Sunday preceding the feast of St. Michael (27th Sept. 1198), made an assault upon Courcelles near Gisors, and took the castle, with the tower and the lord of the castle, and all the others who were in the castle, and on the same day attacked the fortified mansion of Burriz, and with the house took all that was in it, and late in the evening returned with his army to Dangu. On the morrow the King of France, having heard of what had occurred, came out of Mantes with three hundred knights and men-at-arms and his rout to succour the castle of Courcelles, which he did not believe to have been taken. Richard, as soon as he learnt his approach, sallied forth with a small force, and left the main body stationed upon the bank of the Epte, because it was supposed that Philip would make his attack upon the army of Richard after crossing to the bank of the Epte on the side of Dangu. The French monarch, however, bent his course with his army toward Gisors, and being attacked by Richard before reaching the place the French with their monarch were routed, and so hard pressed at the gate of Gisors that the bridge gave way under them, and it was reported that the King of France had had a draught of the river, and that other knights to the number of twenty had been drowned. These exploits the King himself narrates in a letter dated from Dangu, 30th Sept. 1198; hence it would appear that the capture of this fortress by the King of France, while King Richard was prosecuting the war in Auvergne, has been wrongly classed by Roger de Hoveden among the events of the year 1197, and that it belongs to the close of the autumn of 1198; in which year King Richard held his Christmas at Domfront in Normandy, being then probably on his return from his southern provinces.

Sawale Fitz-Henry next renders accompt singly of 92 li. 2s. from the issues of the Bailiwick of the Vexin, and from the rents of certain lands not subject to feudal tenure during the above two years; his payments were 72 li. for the wages of one knight sojourning in the Isle d'Andely with him the said Sawale for the space of 240 days, and 5 li. to Richard d'Argences dispatched on a mission into France, and 10 li. in wages to Master Ivo Balistarius.

Matthew Fitz-Enard in like manner renders accompt singly on the Roll of 2580 li. 5s. of the prize of vessels during the war, of the chief portion of which sum Elyas Bernardi and Robert Le Clerk, scriba de Camera Regis, William de Guisnes and Daniel the King's butlers, had been the recipients, and to the former the payment was made in the King's chamber; the remaining 50 li. had been included in the preceding accompt of Sawale, Robert Fitzhermer, and the said Matthew.

Walter Marc d'Argent is next an accomptant on the Roll of 984 li. 6s. 8d. received partly from the officers above-named, and partly from the King's Privy-purse through Elyas Bernardi and Robert Le Clerc. In the custody of the royal residence of La Roche d'Orival, and in the expense of the men-at-arms serving there, the cost had been 115 li., while the residue had gone in the works then in progress at the said palace, viz. in the chapel, chambers, kitchen, cellars, stables, walls, and in many other works. Orival (Aureavallis) is upon the left bank of the Seine, a league north-west of Elbœuf and about four leagues south-west of Rouen.

The ferm of the Prévôté of Verneuil, unchanged in amount from the return made in former years, was rendered accompt of by Henry de Gray in this fiscal year; the bishop of Evreux had 70 li. tythe, and 20 li. continued to be paid to certain individuals per cartam Regis, as in 1180. The heir of Gilbert de Tillières^o had 50 li. de feodo as in 1195, and

^o Gilbert de Tillières cum manu valida bellatorum was among the Normans present at the siege of Acre, A.D. 1190; but died in the Holy Land during the course of that year, leaving

William Lestanc 20 li. de feodo; while for a mill, which Magister Guido Balistarius then held, which was in this ferm, 60 li. were abated. The

Gilbert, his son and heir, under age, and two daughters, Juliana and Joanna, being the issue of his marriage with Alianora, daughter of Robert de Vitré, and widow of William Paynell. The ancient surname of the family was Crispin, and from a date anterior to the conquest of England to the reign of Henry II. the heirs of Gislebert Crispin were in possession of the castle of Tillières in hereditate custodiendum; but under Richard the custody of this frontier fortress had it appears been taken into his own hands, and compensation made to Gilbert de Tillières by a grant of 50 li. annually out of the Prevoté of Verneuil. During the minority of the heir the Honour of Tillières was for some time in the hands of Philip de Creully, eldest son of Richard son of the Earl of Gloucester, who renders account on this Roll of the year 1198 of 394 li. 10s. of the residue of his proffer in respect of the Honour of Tillières. Upon his decease the land of his own inheritance was also an escheat; for King John, 25th August 1202, issued his mandate to the Seneschal of Normandy to cause Richard de Reviers to have without delay the land which Geoffrey des Roches had in custody of the inheritance of the heir of Creully. But upon Richard de Reviers soon after quitting Normandy to follow the fortunes of King John, the Honour of Creully was again in the custody of Geoffrey des Roches; at least, a copy of the Roll of Infeudations in Normandy, of the year 1172, written out after the conquest of Philip Augustus, has below the original entry, i. e. Ricardus filius Comitis III milit. de feodo Eudonis Dapiferi et ad suum servicium XI milit. preter predictorum, this note of his tenancy, Galfridus de Rupibus habet. In 1219 this Honour was held by Gilbert de Tillières, who will have obtained it in marriage with the daughter of Philip de Creully, and to whom he had probably been espoused, while yet a ward in the custody of her father; of that date, in the month of May, is a charter of Gillebert de Tillières, dominus de Croleio, granting to Peter de Tilly for his service and homage certain lands in the parish of Maton (Mathieu), and there is also a charter of Richard de Creully, younger brother of Philip de Creully, of similar purport. In the year following we have entered among the holders of fiefs in the Bailiwick of Renaud de Ville-Thierry Gillebertus de Telleres III feoda apud Manerium (Le Manoir) cum pertinentiis, sed pertinentia sunt in diversis Balliviis; and in the Bailiwick of Bartholomew Le Drouais, the lord of Tillières, Dominus Tileriarium, had two fiefs pro Tileris by the service of two knights in the ost du Roi; on the same Register Richard de Creully is put down as holding three parts of one knight's fee at Le Mesnil-Bus and Mont-huchon in the Bailiwick of Coutances de Gisleberto de Croit, antenato suo. Now, of the gift of Philip de Creully the abbey of Longues had a dwelling-house in Creully in front of the gate of his castle, and three acres of land and three virgates and the tenement of Martin clericus of Vienne, at Le Manoir; and in 1212 of the gift of Richard de Creully the see of Coutances had the advowson of Mont-huchon. In England the elder Gilbert de Tillières had held of the Honour of Clare the vills of Headley and Westcote, com. Surrey, and had also inherited twelve librates of land in Compton, com. Berks, which Henry II. had given to his father Gislebert Crispin, all which inheritance vested in the descendants of the marriage with Alianora de Vitré. Juliana, the daughter of Gilbert de Tillières, was the wife of Baldwin Rastellus, an active partisan of King John, to whom, 22nd Jan. 1203, was granted Vignats with the appurtenances, which had belonged to Comte Robert of Sééz; by writ, teste'd at Verneuil 7th Oct. 1202, Robert Earl of Leicester, and all others of whom they ought to hold lands, were commanded by the King to cause Baldwin Rastellus and Juliana his wife to have the land belonging to the said Juliana according to the tenor of the charter of Gilbert "de Tillers," her father. Joanna, another daughter, was the wife of Thomas Malesmains, who is recorded to have had with the daughter of Gilbert "de incidental expenditure for repairing the mills burnt and destroyed because of the war—for conducting prisoners of war from Rouen to Ver-

Tillers," of the gift of King John, Hadlegh, com. Surr.; which same vill is extended as terra Thome Malesmains in the Rotulus de valore terrarum Normannorum inceptus a° regni Regis Johannis sexto. At the date of this seizure by the King of the lands of the Normans in England Malés mains was absent in the Holy Land, having had leave in contemplation of the journey to mortgage his lands for two years, a writ of the King to this effect being on the Roll of Letters Patent of the third year of his reign, teste Willelmo Marescallo at Breteuil, 27 Sept. 1201. Upon his return he embraced the side of King John, and 25 Sept. 1206 obtained his precept to have such seisin of his land as he had on the day he took his journey; nevertheless, in the month of August following, the Sheriff of Surrey was instructed to cause Richard Earl of Clare to have the corn which he had sown in the land of Hadlegh, which the King had restored to Thomas Malemeins. In the same year he and Joan his wife sued Ralph Gernun for two carucates in Compton, who by fine acknowledged the said land to be the right of the said Joan. In March 1209 he accompanied William Earl of Salisbury, the King's brother and the husband of Ela his wife's half-sister, into Germany on the King's service, and subsequently in the wars with the Barons we find him firmly adhering to the royal party. By his Letters Patent, given at Corf 14 July 1216, King John makes known that he has retained in his service Thomas Malesmains, and that he will reckon him as one of his Bachelors, and restore to him his rights, viz. the land which Fulk de Cantilupe holds in Burton, and the land which Ralph Gernun holds in Camtun, with the appurtenances, or else make to him a certain exchange; and that he will give him yearly 60 li. sterling out of his Privy-purse until he should have assigned to him sixty librates of land in some escheat of the lands of the King's enemies, and when this shall have been done, he was to hold them until the King had given him for the advancement of one of his sons or daughters a marriage to the value of sixty librates of land or more, according to the measure of his service, and as to the King shall seem meet. Other Letters follow, dated 29 August following, addressed to all the knights and freeholders and others of the manor of Burton, making known that the King had restored the manor of Burton to his beloved and faithful Thomas Malesmains, as his right ex parte Johanne uxoris ipsius, and commanding them to be subservient to him as their lord. This manor, in the county of Northampton, had been parcel of the barony of Alan de Dinan, whose daughter Emma, sister of Roland de Dinan, was the wife of Robert de Vitré, the younger; for it was on occasion of this marriage, by way of portion, that Comte Conan of Britany gave Cooling, com. Suffolk, and Roland de Dinan Chevelay, with its rights and appurtenances, and all his land, if he should happen to die without heirs of any wife begotten. Andrew de Vitré, the grandfather of Robert, had been married to Agnes, daughter of Robert Comte of Mortain, and had received with her as a marriage portion Tybesta and divers manors in Cornwall; further, the annalist of the family of Vitré records that when Robert, the eldest son of Andrew and Agnes, was born, his grandfather came to Vitré, held him at the font, named him after himself, and gave him in Normandy all he had in Ryes, Trungy, Ducey and Vercreuil. Consequently, in the Register of Fiefs, compiled a° d'ni 1172, we read Robertus de Vitreio medietatem de Ria in Baiucasino, et Trungeium et Caignoles et Duxetium in Boscagio, such being the tenure in Normandy of Robert de Vitré, commonly styled junior, in succession to his father of the same name. He died in the following year, leaving issue Andrew, Alan, who had with the inheritance the surname of Dinan, Robert, Josselin, Martin, and a daughter Alianora; the latter was given in marriage by her brother Andrew de Vitré to William son of Fulk Paynell, and had for her portion a moiety of the said manors of Ryes, Trungy and Ducey, together with 20 li. sterling annually out of the neuil—for the carriage of halberds, pikes, the King's venison and accoutrements for the Balistarii several times from Verneuil and L'Aigle manor of Cooling. William Paynell succeeded his father Fulk in 1182, and he and Alianora his wife jointly gave their moiety of the church of Ryes to the abbey of Longues in the Bessin. The term of their union was short, for in the month of June 1184 William Paynell died, having had issue a son, his heir, three years old in 1185, and then in custody of William Vavasour for the King, but who did not long survive his parent. Alianora de Vitré married secondly the above-named Gilbert de Tillières, deceased in 1190, and thirdly William Fitzpatric, Earl of Salisbury, who dying, 17 April 1196, left issue an only daughter, Isabella or Ela, Countess of Salisbury in her own right, in succession to her father, and afterward Abbess of Lacock. A fourth husband, Gilbert de Malésmains, 10 Ric. I. 1198, held the manor of Cooling in right of his wife, together with the lands in England of her dower, viz. Westcote, com. Surr., Kingsbury and Edgeware, com. Midd., Wootton, com. Oxon, and Gatesden, com. Herts, and of these lands he continued in possession to the year of the conquest of Normandy by Philip-Augustus, when they were in the King's hands as an escheat of the land of the Normans. Richard Earl of Clare had the King's writ, 12 Jan. 1205, for seisin of the manor of Westcote, quod fuit Gilleberti Malemeins, which was of his fief; and the manor of Cowling, before 17 Mar. 1208, had been committed to William Long-espée, Earl of Salisbury; later in his reign, viz. 30 Aug. 1216, King John issued his precept to the Constable of Oxford and Berkhamstead to permit Alianora Countess of Salisbury, mother of Isabella Countess of Salisbury, to hold in peace her manors of Gatesden, Edgeware and Wootton. An extract from the chartulary of the abbey of Hambie, of the foundation of the family of her first husband, ascribes to the year 1206 a charter of Andrew de Vitré, and Robert, Precentor of Paris, his brother, and Alianor, Countess of Salisbury, their sister, for the redemption of William Paynell, in respect of two gerbs of the tythe of Ryes, which John, parson of the church of Trunty, held in the name of the Canons of La Gastine, an abbey in the diocese of Tours; and among those who were feudatories of the Honour of Grandmenil in Normandy at this date, we have Gilbert Malemeins for half a fief apud Chevillac et apud Guernevillam, or, to follow the orthography of another copy of the same list of Infeudations, apud Chevisiacum et apud Gennuevillam. In the Register of Philip Augustus, under the heading Feoda Bartholomei Droguensis et primò de Grantemont, we read Nicholaus Malesmains dim. feud. apud Chevilli et apud Gonoville—Montchauvet dim. feud. super Nicholaum Malésmains; now, as the advowson of the church of Gonnevill-sur-Honfleur was in the gift of the abbey of St. Evroult, of the foundation of the lords of Grandmenil, and Chevaillac is the name of a hamlet on the skirts of the bois de Gonnevill, the site of this half-fief apud Chevilli may best be assigned to this locality, and ought perhaps to be identified with the land of Chevelay, given by Rolland de Dinan as above related. Of the same Honour of Grandmenil Baldoinus Rastel held half a fief at La Boissière near Lisieux, and the name is so given in the copy of the Feoda printed by La Roque; but Duchêne reads Radulfus, and thus names him among the knights of the fief of Grandmenil, who came to the homage of King Philip. In 1218 Baldwin Rastel gave to the Priory of S'te Barbe-en-Auge the right of patronage of the church of S'te Marie-la-Boissière, and in 1220 he is again entered as tenant of the same half fief in the Bailiwick of Bartholomew Le Drouais. To the abbey of Mondaye, Alianora, styled Countess of Salisbury, gave in 1217 a setter of oats, to be received annually at Trunty, and in 1218 a rent from her oven of Ryes to buy waxlights to burn every day at the mass of Holy Mary. In the following year Sir Thomas Malesmains, knight, was dead, leaving Joan de Tillières surviving, to whom King Henry III. restored as her right the moiety of the manor of West Compton, and also committed to her during pleasure the manor of Burton for her support; whereupon, pursuant to writs dated 9th Mar. 1219, to Vandreuil and L'Isle d'Andely, and for the liveries of the five knights of the garrison of Verneuil from the feast of the Holy Cross in Septem-

the Sheriffs of Berks and Oxon were directed to give her full seisin of the same. Her decease had followed before 18th Aug. 1221, by Letters Close of which date the King granted to his beloved uncle William Earl of Salisbury, and to the Countess Ela his wife, the custody of the land and heir of Thomas Malesmains and of Joan his wife, and the Sheriffs of Northampton, Surrey and Berks, were commanded to give them full seisin of all lands which had belonged to the said Thomas and Joan in their Bailiwicks. Prior to the year 1227 the succession to the Honour of Tillières had devolved upon Juliana, then the widow of Baldwin Rastel; for in the Chartulary of the abbey of Mondaye is transcribed a deed, whereby Juliana, entitling herself Lady of Tillières, declares she has chosen the abbey of St. Martin for her sepulture, and has given to God and the Holy convent there 12 li. in the Prevôté of L'Aigle, to be received annually at two terms toward the sustenance of a canon, who should celebrate the divine office there daily for her soul, and for the faithful departed. She was there interred; and in 1227 Alianors, formerly Countess of Salisbury, for the redemption of her soul and the soul of Juliana, her daughter, gave to the said monastery 10s. money of Tours, by way of pittance to the convent on the day of the anniversary of the said Juliana, to be received annually on the feast of St. Michael at Trungy, in her mill of Compigny, at the hands of the miller. In the following year, in the month of January, on the feast of St. Agnes the second, the same venerable Countess, then in her widowhood, gave to God and the church of St. Martin of Mondaye, the advowson of the church of St. Vigor of Trungy, in the presence of the Bishop of Lisieux, Magister William de Pont de l'Arche, at Thiberville. After her daughter's example, she the same year chose her sepulture in the abbey of St. Martin of Mondaye, and added to her former gifts the tythe of all her champart of Trungy and of Ryes, and 7½ li. in her mill of Trungy, payable on the feast of the Annunciation in each year, and all the land held of her by Richard Ledearaine at Trungy, except one setier of oats which he owed to the abbey of Belle-Etoile, the same being for the sustenance of a canon, who should celebrate the divine office in the said abbey for her souls and for all the faithful. Hylaria, Lady of Tillières, and Nicholas Malesmains, son of Sir Thomas Malesmains, at the same time confirmed and ratified by their charters these gifts of Alianor de Vitré, their grandmother, formerly Countess of Salisbury, in her widowhood; the former adding that she did so for the redemption of the soul of Juliana, Lady of Tillières, her mother, whose body lay in the said abbey of St. Martin of Mondaye. The husband of Hylaria, Lady of Tillières, was Sir James de Bovelingham, knight, and in the month of October 1228 they in separate charters confirmed to the abbey of Mondaye the rent in the Prevôté of L'Aigle, previously given by Juliana, Lady of Tillières, and made the Nativity of St. John the Baptist the sole term of payment. Other charters of Alianora, Countess of Salisbury, in favour of the abbey of Mondaye, bear date in 1229 and 1231; and to the same abbey the above rent in the Prevôté of L'Aigle was successively confirmed by Gislebert, Lord of L'Aigle, in 1230, and by Nicholas Malesmains in 1232; by the latter for the redemption of the soul of Juliana, Lady of Tillières, and of his own soul and of those of his father and mother, ancestors and successors. To the nuns of St. Laurent de Cordillon, commune of Lingèvres, Alianor Countess of Salisbury, in her widowhood, gave in 1231 the entire tythe of her oven at Trungy and a setier of corn, and in England, as we learn from a writ, dated 20 Jan. 1234, addressed to Henry de Troubleville or his bailiffs, she had bestowed upon Nicholas, the recluse of Cowling, 20s. to be taken annually forth of the manor of Cowling. The year of her decease is shewn by a writ to the Sheriff of Oxford, dated 18 Aug. 17 Hen. III. 1233, directing him to cause the executors of the will of Alianora Countess of Salisbury to have the chattels and stores which she had in the manor of Wootton, which had been previously seized into the King's hands, to aid ber (14 Sept.) of the past fiscal year to the feast of St. Michael, and from the same feast for a year, had exceeded by a surplus of 160 li. 3s.

in the execution of her will, saving to the King the corn on the ground. In the same year the King had accepted the homage of Sir James de Bovelingham of the portion belonging to him through Hilaria his wife, one of the heirs of Gislebert de Tyleris, of the inheritance which had belonged to the said Gislebert her grandfather, whereupon a writ, dated 6th Aug. 17 Hen. III. was issued to the Sheriff of Leicestershire to give the said James full seisin of the land of the said Gislebert in his balliwick. In the next regnal year, 12th April 1234, the Sheriff of Suffolk was commanded to cause Ela Countess of Salisbury, and Nicholas Malésmains, to have the purparties belonging to them of the manor of Cowling, which had belonged to Alianora late Countess of Salisbury, mother of the said Countess and grandmother of the said Nicholas, reserving to Henry de Trumbleville all the residue of the manor over and above the purparties of the Countess and Nicholas, and over and above the purparty of James de Bovelingham and his wife. Subsequently, the manor of Burton was restored to Nicholas Malesmains as his right, and a writ dated 30 Nov. 19 Hen. III. 1234, issued to the Sheriff of Northamptonshire to give him full seisin thereof. The manors of Gatesden and Edgeware, which had been held in dower, reverted to the Countess of Salisbury as parcel of her barony; but the manor of Wootton was retained in the King's hands. In 1240 John de Plessis made a fine with the King in 100 marks for having the custody of the land, and of the heirs of Nicholas Malemeins, until the lawful age of the same heirs, together with their marriage, and the Sheriffs of Surrey and Dorsetshire had the King's writs, 15 Dec. 25 Hen. III. to cause him to have seisin of the lands of which the said Nicholas had died seised in their balliwicks, together with the said heirs, if they should be found in their balliwicks. In 52 Hen. III. 1268, Robert de Plessis had a fief in Burton, and 29 Edw. I. 1301, a writ issued to Walter de Gloucester, then Escheator south of Trent, to take into the King's hands all the lands and tenements of which Robert de Plessis, who held of the King in capite by the courtesy of England of the inheritance of Ela, late his wife, deceased, died seised; among the lands, as appears by the Inq. post mortem, was the said manor of Burton near Thingdon, com. Northampton, and the manor of Upwymborn Malemeys, com. Dorset. James de Bovelingham eventually withdrew into France and abandoned his wife's inheritance in England, wherefore, by writ, dated 18 Jan. 29 Hen. III. 1245, the Sheriff of Suffolk was directed to ascertain the value of his land in Culinge, when an inquest was taken and an extent made, the jurors affirming that the Seneschal of St. Edmund seized the land into the King's hands on the feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Mary, 28 Hen. III. (25 Mar. 1241), by virtue of the King's precept eo quod dictus Jacobus de Bovelingham esset de potestate Regis Francie. In like manner a precept for an extent of his lands in Headley, dated 10 April, 31 Hen. III. 1247, was issued to the Sheriff of Surrey, and a return made pursuant thereto of the said land, quæ est escaeta nostra de terris alienigenarum. The manor of Headley ultimately vested in the descendants of Robert de Plessis, and it may be safely assumed that he, a younger brother of Hugh de Plessis, son of John de Plessis, Earl of Warwick jure uxoris, had been united in early youth with the daughter or other kinswoman, one of the heirs of Nicholas Malesmains, whose marriage his father had purchased. The history of Ela, Countess of Salisbury, only child of the marriage of Alianora de Vitre with William Fitzpatric, Earl of Salisbury, will be found detailed at length in the "Annals and Antiquities of Lacock Abbey, in the county of Wilts; London, 8vo. 1835;" where, p. 266*, the writer expresses his conviction that Ela had actually two sisters of the whole blood, and that Gilbert de Tillières, dominus de Croleio, was certainly the husband of Juliana. Both statements are here shewn to be incorrect, and, in concurrence with the writer of the Book of the ferm due ; which sum was, however, more than balanced by the receipts of the Accomptant from the ferm of the same Prevôté in value for 20 muids of corn, and from the amercements, proffers, and fines of his Bailiwick of Verneuil, there being a residue owing by him of 216 li. 16s. 4d. Henry de Gray further rendered accompt of the Loan raised in his Bailiwick, which had yielded 1419 li. ; out of which sum payments had been made to Alexander de Lucy of 200 li. toward the works of the castle of Tillières, and to Robert Le Clerc of 150 li. for the works of Courteilles, who both owed accompt of the same. Other 66 li. 13s. 4d. had been paid in wages to 100 men-at-arms serving on foot in the garrison of the castle of Verneuil, leaving the Accomptant a debtor for the residue ; so was he also for 367 li. 1s. 4d. of the Tallage for the maintenance of men at arms in the March set in the Bailiwick of Verneuil. We have next an accompt of Henry de Gray of his Receipts from the Treasury at Caen, and from the Money-changers of Rouen, of whom mention has been made—of 172 li. 10s. from Deodatus, a Jew of Verneuil, by reason of a Tallage of 1000 marks set upon the whole body of Jews in Normandy, and of lesser sums owing by other Jews for an old Tallage, and of 7 li. from the chattels of a murderer who had fled, in all 1180 li. 5s. The whole of this sum, together with a surplus of 29 li. 11s., had been expended in the course of the year, through payment of 596 li. 16s. to Magister Revellus for the carrying on of the works of the King—in gifts and wages to the Balistarii and men-at-arms, among whom Richard Valensis was the maker of the King's balistæ, some were in garrison at Verneuil, others at Tillières and Danville, while three servientes guarded the domus de Cintraio—through payment of the King's gift to a priest, to wit, 5 li.—in covering anew the tower of Danville and making a mill there at a cost of 50 li.—in the works of the barbakan of Danville made of stone at a cost of 144 li. and through payment of 60 li. to William de Boelles to fortify the castle of Foillet. Damville, now a chef-lieu de canton in the arrondissement of Evreux, on the river Iton, is mentioned as a place of strength by the Biographer of Henry II. sub anno 1173 ; and in like manner the firma domus Cintraii has its place in history as early as 1119, when it was held for Amaury de Montfort by Walchelinus de Lacock, we may be assured that “ Guillelmus duxit Alianoram de Viteri, de qua genuit filiam unicam nomine Elam ; ” yet in placing her birth in 1188 this same authority certainly antedates that event a few years, and his assertion that her mother died two years before her father, and that both their bodies were interred at Bradenstoke is unquestionably untrue,—at least as to the fact of any such premature decease, for it is possible that, though she chose her sepulture at Mondaye, she might have died in England, and have been there buried.

Taneio and others of his party, then in league with the French King against Henry I., and who guarded the surrounding country for their lord against the burgesses of Breteuil. Cintrai is now a commune of the canton of Breteuil, where the hamlet of Cintrai-le-chateau probably marks the site of the fortress. The castle of Foillet was, doubtless, situate in the commune of Longuelune, canton of Verneuil, where, near Feuilleuse, the name La Motte is still attached to the locality. In the accompt which follows of the balance owing upon the current year, Henry de Gray sets off 29 li. 11s. the surplus on the preceding accompt, and surplus of the preceding year of no less amount than 2072 li., beside 300 li. laid out by him in encompassing with stone-work the outer ward or bailey of Courteilles, so as to leave a surplus in his favour of 916 li. 4s. 5d. Among the crown-debtors in his Bailiwick we have Robert de la Barre for service not performed at Nonancourt—William de Mortemer for 20 muids of corn of the store of the castle of Verneuil at the time when he was custos—Roger de Thosny for the residue of the Tallage of his fief toward the King's ransom, and for a fief d'haubert recovered on inquest, as well as for 100 li. which the King had lent him to fortify his mansion of Thosny—William Brandran 6 li. 12s. 3d. of the quartum of the Knights of the Honour of L'Aigle, and Dextle-beneie, the Jew of L'Aigle, 400 li. of his fine pro duello, 20 bezants for abandonment of suit versus Meir de Bernai, and one mark of gold for having in his debts.

Ballia de Lexovino per Willelmum de Mara et a tergo.

The Bailiwick of the Lieuvin, in the year to which this Roll is ascribed, had been committed to the charge of William de Mara, whose name has already occurred as an officer of the Duchy on the Rolls of the years 1180, 1184, and 1195, and its issues in their entirety are here accounted for in his name. The receipts from the assised ferm of the Vicomté of the Lieuvin, the annual rents from the demesnes and from the bernagium of the Lieuvin, with the monies received for amercements, proffers and fines, constitute, as in the years above-named, the separate heads of accompt. The abbot of St. Evroult had this year paid 10 li. of the residue of his proffer for having the land of Soligny, of which the entire amount had been two marks of gold, as appears from the entry of the Bailiff of the Lieuvin in 1195, and Peter de Sablé

46 li. the aid of eleven knights' fees and a half, beside other fines de jurea. This personage apparently derived his descent from Guy de Sablé, who in the autumn of 1139 accompanied the Empress Matildis, Comtesse of the Angevins, when she first landed in England to claim the crown as her inheritance. Gacé, now a chef-lieu de canton in the arrondissement of Argentan, Département of the Orne, one of the seven baronies of the comté of the Lieuvin, was the caput of his Honour; for in the Register of Fiefs, ao d'ni 1172, we have this entry, "Amauricus de Sablolo servitium apud Gaceum III militum et ad suum servitium XI milites et dimidiis," and below, in the transcript of the time of Philip Augustus, the annotation Guido de Sablolo habet. Peter de Sablé was apparently son of Lisiard de Sablé, deceased A.D. 1195, in which year the issue of his land was accounted for on the Roll by the Custodes of the Escheats in the Bailiwick of the Lieuvin, and the same noted to have been restored. In 1 John, 1199, Peter de Sablé was impleaded by Simon de Aldermanbury for a debt of 10 li. sterling, in the county of Derby; but he did not appear or essoign himself, wherefore judgment was given that he be attached to be at Westminster in the quindenes of St. John the Baptist. Again, in 2 John, entry is made on the Roll of Normandy, Bailiwick of Caen, to this purport, viz. "that the Earl of Chester gives to the Lord the King 100 li. money of Anjou, for having right of the land of the Honour of Creully and of Saye with the appurtenances and fiefs and knight-service, which he claims versus Peter de Sablé." The Earl of Chester had some portion of the Honour of Creully in pledge, as shewn by this entry in the Register of Philip Augustus, Anselmus de Caberc (Cabourg) dim. feod. de feod. q^a comes Cestrie habebat in vadium de domino Croleii; and which is placed under the heading Isti tenent de feodo Comitiss Cestrie. A writ of King John to Guy de Sablé, 4 Jan. 1203, bids him know "that we have given you and your fief and tenement and your tallage to our beloved and faithful Peter des Préaux;" and another to the Barons of the Exchequer, 26 Nov. 1203, enjoins them to cause Amaury de Sablé to have 40 li. rent in the market of Gacé, which Peter de Sablé, his brother, had given him. The latter was deceased at this time, for a writ to the Seneschal of Normandy, 24 Nov. 1203, certifies him that the King had granted to Reginald du Bois the custody of the land and heirs of Peter de Sablé and the marriage of the said heirs, and commands him to cause the said Reginald to have the custody without delay, together with the chattels and the issues of the land, which have not been already rendered in at the Exchequer. Robert Pantolf, the former Bailiff of the Lieuvin, was yet an accomptant in this year for a portion of the residue of the old ferm of the Vicomté of the Lieuvain, as was John du Hommet for the residue of the aid on his knights' fees; while the heirs of Joscelin Crispin and of Arnulph de Montgomeri respectively accounted for what was owing by their fathers of the debts of Ralph, Bishop of Lisieux. Payments by numerous mainpernors in discharge of the sums for which they were severally bound on behalf of the Bishop of Lisieux, Fulk d'Aunou, Richard d'Argences, Ralph de Montfort, William des Plains and Richard (son of) Landri, who had fined to the King, extend the accompts in this Bailiwick much beyond the usual length, and, along with those of persons otherwise indebted to the crown, wholly occupy the remainder of the membrane on this side, and are continued on the back; among the latter Hugh de Montfort of Gacé rendered accompt of 8 li. 17s. owing for the entrenchments of Bonsmoulins. The next accompt of William de Mara is of the proceeds from the Loan raised in the Bailiwick of the Lieuvain, of which the sum was 730 li.; under the authority of the royal brief the wages of the troops sent to Verneuil for twenty days' service were paid thereout, as also 26 li. 13s. for 500 pikes made and sent from Orbec to Vaudreuil; Sawale son of Henry had 15 li. toward the works of the castle of La Roche, and Geoffrey the money-changer had received 375 li., of which he elsewhere rendered accompt. The Bailiff also successively rendered accompt of the monies obtained of the chattels of fugitives and felons, of 440 li. of the Tallage set by himself and Geoffrey of Argentan of 12d. for the entrenchment of La Roche, of 180 li. which he had received of those who had been amerced in his Bailiwick for retention of the Tallage of the King, and of 1670 li. 10s. of the Tallage of the men serving at arms in his Bailiwick to maintain them in the Marches. The money thus collected had been for the most part paid into the King's privy-purse, 37 li. 10s. had served to defray the wages of the 100 men-at-arms sent to the Marches, and 80 li. 10s. had been remitted to the Earl of Leicester, being the quota of the men of his fief for the last-named tallage. Another head of accompt was the sum received by the Bailiff of the mainpernors of Robert Pantof, who, together with Clarinus Le Despenser, rendered accompt of 98 li. 6s. 4d. of the residue of their accompt of the Tallages, but of which sum they had acquittance by reason of their fine. The accompts of the Tallages set in the vills of Bernai and Corneilles, and in the city of Lisieux, by the King's precept, of which payment had been made only in part by the inhabitants, follow in the name of the Bailiff, as also of the proceeds of the loan raised in the same city, and of the residue of the levy made for the entrenchments of Vaudreuil; which last sum, 69 li. 18s. 9d. had served to defray the wages of Borellus and his company of horse sojourning at Gamaches during the war. Among the crown-debtors in this Bailiwick, of whom a long list follows, may be noted Ralph de Montfort 136 li. 10s. 6d. for misdemeanor in the King's court; Meus, a Jew of Bernai, 500 li. for the fine to have his brother's chattels, and 20 li. for having term of payment of the said money; William Bishop of Lisieux 603 marks 9s. 1d. ob. of the residue of his fine; and Gislebert Malesmains 720 li. 17s. 4d. of the stores of the castle of Falaise, and of the finding of the jury upon him, and of the Tallage set by John de Alençon and Henry de Gray. The last-named debtor had served as Bailiff of the district of Falaise in the Comté of the Oximin in 1195, and it would seem from his owing for stores that he had also been the custos of the castle in that and the following year. At the foot of this membrane is the accompt of Robert Pantol or Pantolf, who had also acted as Bailiff in 1195 for the district of the Lieuvain, of 500 li. of his fine; part of this amount had been received from his mainpernors by the Bailiffs of the Lieuvain and of Bonneville-sur-Touques, 64 li. had been applied in discharge of the wages of certain troops, and other 140 li. had been paid to the King in his Privy-chamber, leaving him still a debtor for the remainder.

Ballia de Cadomo per Willielmum Poignard et a tergo.

The issues of the Bailiwick of Caen in this year were accounted for to the Exchequer by the same officer, William Poignard, who had charge of this district in 1195; his receipts from the aquagium, from the issue of the boats, weirs and fulling-mills, from the assised rents, and from the ferm of the land of the Gaol tally with those of the former year, and the payment for the bernagium of the Bailiwick of Caen was unchanged in amount. The pears of St. Rieul had this year been given to the Seneschal of Normandy, instead of to the Lepers as in 1195, and that great officer continued to have the King's meadows of Caen toward the custody of the castle of Caen along with his other perquisites. The sum received from debtors in his Bailiwick, in full discharge of their amercements, proffers and fines, of which William Poignard rendered accompt, was 213 li. 19s. 9d.; other accompts of those who paid only in part occupy the remainder of the membrane on this side, and are continued on the back. Among the latter Henry de Tilly rendered accompt of 1114 li. 9s. 7d. of the residue of his fine, Philip de Creully of 394 li. 10s. of the residue of his proffer for the Honour of Tillières, and Ralph Tesson 98 li. of the fouage of his land, and of 59 li. for marrying his sister to William de Soliers. In discharge of his debt, beside 10 li. in the Treasury, the sum of 24 li. sterling, worth 96 li. money of Anjou, was certified to have been received at the Exchequer of England pursuant to the writ of the archbishop of Canterbury, and Ralph Tesson was further acquitted of 20s. the balance in his favour on his accompt taken in the Bailiwick of Falaise as mainpernor of Richard d'Argences. This eminent baron, afterward Seneschal of Normandy, held in England the manors of Laughton-in-le-Morthing and Wheatley, parcel of the Honour of Tickhill, Down Ampney com. Gloucest., Burnes and Ryarsh com. Kent; all which he forfeited after the conquest of Normandy, when he withdrew his allegiance from King John. In Normandy he owed ten knights for the aide de l'ost of the Honour of Thury, and had ad suum servitium thirty knight's fees and a half, and for the Honour of St. Sauveur he owed the service of five knights, and had ad suum servitium fifteen knight's fees in the Côtentin. The division of his vast inheritance among his three daughters and coheirs, Petronilla, wife of William Paynell, Joanna, wife of Robert Bertrand, and Matilda, wife of Richard d'Harcourt, was the subject of a solemn judgment at Rouen in Midlent, anno d'ni 1213, before Bartholomew de Roia and William de la Chapelle, the Bishops of Lisieux, Evreux, Coutances, and Séez, John des Préaux, William de Mortemer, Stephen de Long-champ, John de Rouvray, William de Bornez, William des Préaux, Robert de Pinniac, Henry de Neufbourg, Robert de Courcy, Henry de Beaufay, Philip de Vassy, Robert de Poissy, Guy de la Roche, Obert de Rouvray, the Chatelain of Gaillon, Robert le Gros, Richard des Fontaines, Richard Huislikier, Richard d'Argences, John du Bois-bernard, Robert de Fréquiennes, Peter de Tilly, Roger Pescheveron, Renard de Cornilon, Renard de Ville-thierry, William Escuacol, Hugh de Botigny and Geoffrey de la Chapelle. Judgment had indeed been twice previously given at Rouen (the first time before Brother Guerin, of the order of St John of Jerusalem, elected Bishop of Senlis in 1113) that William Paynell should have seisin of the land which had belonged to Ralph Tesson, sicut antenatus; but afterward it was adjudged that the said land should be divided into three portions, and that the second and last born should be parceners. The lot which fell to William Paynell comprised the fief of Percy and its membra loricæ, lying adjacent to the Honour of his father Fulk Paynell at Hambie.^p He had beside Henneville and Tréauville, parcel of the demesnes of the Barony of St. Sauveur, which Barony, with this exception, constituted the portion of the youngest coheir, and was held in 1220 by Richard d'Harcourt.^q Of the Honour of Thury, Robert Bertrand made acknowledgment of the service of nine knights in 1220, but he was as yet unaware how many fiefs were held of him. Ralph, son of William Paynell and Petronilla, assumed the surname of Tesson, and it continued to be borne by his posterity, seated at the castle of La Roche-Tesson.

Præpositura de Cadomo per Willelmum Poignard.
(Residuum Balliæ quære alibi.)

On the back of this membrane the accompts of the crown-debtors in the Bailiwick of Caen, and of their mainpernors, are continued. Philip de Saragoce rendered accompt of the residue of his proffer; in the Treasury were 5 li. and in the receipt of William Poignard from his mainpernors during this fiscal year 6 li., leaving the sum of 35 li. 10s.

^p In 1116 Fulk Paynell, having embraced the party of King John, that monarch, in a charter, given by the hand of Ralph de Nevill at Roche-au-Maine, 25 Jan. in the 16th year of his reign, formally makes known that he had forgiven Fulk Painellus all the rage, rancour, indignation and malevolence, which he had conceived against him in time past, and had received him fully into his favour, and had granted to him all his land and his fief entirely which he held of him in England, and his other tenements in Normandy, with all their appurtenances, as he had them at the time when the King last withdrew from Normandy; and moreover he granted to him and ratified the marriage contracted between his son William and the eldest daughter of Ralph Tesson; witnesses, Ralph Comte of Eu, Ranulph Earl of Chester, William Earl de Ferrars (of Derby and Nottingham), Hugh de Gornay, Henry de Gray, Robert de Mortemer, Enjurer de Bohun, Peter de Maulay, and Philip d'Aubigné.

^q In the Observations on the Great Roll of 1195, p. clixvi. this manor of Henneville, with a portion of the fief of St. Sauveur-le-Vicomte, is erroneously stated to have come through Cecilia, daughter of Letitia de St. Sauveur by her husband Jordan Tesson, and wife of Fulk Paynell, Baron of Hambie at that date, to their younger children; as shewn in the text, it was parcel of the barony of Ralph Tesson, and came to William through his marriage with the eldest coheir. By Cecilia Vicecomitissa Fulk Paynell had no issue, and it was Agatha de Humez, widow of William, son of Ralph, Baron of Fougères in Brittany, deceased 7 June 1187, in the lifetime of his father, who was the mother of Fulk Paynell junior and of the above-named William Paynell. She was the daughter of William du Hommet, Constable of Normandy, sister of Richard du Hommet, deceased 2 John, 1200; in which year William du Hommet gave to the King 200 li. money of Anjou for the relief of the land of his father, the Constable of Normandy being his mainpernor.

yet owing to complete the payment of 260 li. in which he had fined to the King in 1195 for having the chattels and debts of John Belet. Ralph Fitz-Walter rendered accompt in this Bailiwick of 181 li. of the residue of the debts of Stephen de Turnham in connection with the Bailiwick of the Avranchin, as above noticed in the return of the Bailiffs of that district, and had this year paid 40 li. in his behalf. William Poignart further rendered accompt of 13 li. 10s., paid into the Treasury, the issue of the petty amercements of his Bailiwick, and of 1095 li. raised by loan in his Bailiwick of Caen; of this sum 1075 li. were in the Treasury, 3 li. had been paid for four pair of bucklers bought and sent to the King in the Isle d'Andely, and 17 li. remained owing. Richard le Chevalier (Miles) and Jollanus de Garsalle rendered accompt of only 28 li. of the issue of the fair of Le Pré of the year to come, whereas 45 li. had been such issue in 1195, when accounted for by William Poignard, and in 1180 no less than 100 li. was the ferm of the Feria Prati. From the tallage set in the Bailiwick of Caen to maintain men-at-arms in the March, William Poignard rendered accompt of 1420 li. 15s. 9d., and from the loan raised in the town of Caen 2500 li.; out of the latter sum he had made payment of their wages to the knights and men-at-arms sojourning at Evreux, and also to five knights, to the Porter and sentinels and serjeants-at-arms at the same place, as well as to the men-at-arms and balistarii in garrison at Longchamp and Lyons, while of the King's gift the Nuns of Evreux had thereout 50 li. to repair their church, and the Seneschal of Normandy 500 li.: in the Treasury the deposit was 975 li. 19s. 10d. and 697 li. 8s. remained charged upon the inhabitants of the town of Caen. The Bailiff also rendered accompt of 4000 li. of the Tallage set in the town of Caen by the King's mandate for having its freedom, as the King's charter testifies; of which sum 1500 li. had been remitted to Geoffrey the money-changer, Richard Brieguerre and the mayor of Rouen, and the remainder left as a charge upon the inhabitants of the town of Caen. To the same accomptants William Poignart had also remitted, at two several times, 1750 li. out of the sum collected from the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of Caen by the King, leaving but 60 li. due. The men of Langrune rendered accompt of 7s. in lieu of a bezant for a hearing of the act of exemption, which Philip de Creully had made to them of the multure which he required of them, as the charter of Philip, which they had to this effect, testified.

Of the residue of the old ferm of the Prevôté of Caen William Poignard rendered accompt of 733 li. 8s. 11d., which had been wholly expended, together with 98 li. 15s. 6d. in addition, under the King's writ, viz. for defraying the wages of the troops at Lyons and Longchamp, at Tillières, at La Roche d'Andely and Vaudreuil, of the King's falconers at Caen and Bayeux, and others his servants, of nine Saraceni stationed in the forest of Le Passeis to guard it, and of twelve cementarii sent to the King—for making mews in the castle of Caen and a dwelling-house for the keepers of the birds to lie in—for the expenses of Burnell the King's huntsman and his hounds, for a horse bought for his use and for his wages—for fleshmeat for the birds of the Lord the King kept at Caen—in payments to the poor men of Caen of the debt which was owing to them by reason of the works of the castle of Caen—for the carriage of the King's writs and summonses at several times and through divers places throughout Normandy—in payments to Elyas of the almonry of 200 li. for the works of the castle of Gamaches, to William de Kaeu 20 li. of money, which the King had got from the land of the said William, and to Exuperius of Bayeux 7 li. 5s. of the King's gift—and for four tuns of wine bought and sent to Burle-roi for the King's use. Of the new ferm of the same Prevôté William Poignart rendered accompt, as in the year 1195, the amount and the annual charges continuing unchanged, save that for the mill of Gamare the payment was for the whole year, being 62 li. in deduction of the ferm. He had also expended 86 li. 17s. 5d. for the carriage of the King's treasures on more than one occasion from Caen to Rouen, and to Angers and elsewhere, and 10 li. 8s. 8d. in repairing the dwellings and gaol of the castle of Rouen; to the money-changers at Rouen before-named 170 li. had been remitted, and Walter the Falconer had 7 li. 11s. for his wages, leaving as the balance of the two accompts a sum of 655 li. 7s. 3d. to be accounted for in the next fiscal year. Sanson, abbot of Caen, rendered accompt of 1333 li. 6s. 8d. for 500 marks of silver of a gift which he had made to the King; the whole sum was in the Treasury, and he was quit. Below on the membrane are entered three other accompts of debtors in the Bailiwick of Caen, and at the foot this reference, "Residuum Ballie quære alibi;" accordingly, on turning to membrane 13, there will be found the residue of the fiscal entries connected with the Bailiwick of Caen, preceding the accompt of the same William Poignard of the Bailiwick of Condé.

Danfront per Robertum Lesausier.

Gorran. Novum Castrum super Coumont.

Vallis de Moretonio. Vallis de Vira.

Robert Le Sausier rendered accompt in this fiscal year of the ferm of the Prevôté of Domfront, of 21s. assised rent from land and a dwelling, and of the ferm of the forests of Le Passais, Andaine, and Silvedrue; the amount was the same as in 1195, and had been remitted to Queen Alianor, with the exception of the proportion due for tythe to the abbey of Lonlay, and 4 li. 10d. for the livery of the Porter of the Tower of Domfront. By the King's charter the Bailiff had the apicularii of the forest of Silvedrue and the marshes of Rouellé, the water-course and the fisheries, for the render of a pound of pepper, pursuant to a grant made to him by Queen Alianor in these terms; "Alienor, dei gratia humilis Regina, Ducissa Normanniæ, omnibus ad quos presens scriptum pervenerit, salutem. Sciatis nos dedisse et concessisse et presenti charta nostra confirmasse Roberto Salcerio, servitori nostro, les orillons foreste de Damfront in Passaio, et terram quam Walterus de Roili et aquam et piscarias quas idem tenuit." The Apicularii (aureilleurs) were those who had swarms of bees in the forest, and who made renders therefore in money or kind to the lord of the soil; for which issues the Bailiffs of the Passais annually accounted, prior to the charter of King Richard in 1195 in confirmation of the above grant. In like manner the mills of Domfront, and the demesne of La Fontaine Ozent, had been abstracted from the ferm and confirmed by the King to Andrew de Domfront, employed in the service of the Queen of Spain, a daughter of Queen Alianor. For having the serjeanty of the forest with the land of Malherbe, Rossel du Champ-Segré (a commune in the forest of Andenne) rendered accompt of the residue of his fine; and of the residue of the caablage of the forests of Le Passais, i. e. the renders for the right of taking away the trees and branches strewn by the wind, the Bailiff accounted for 32 li. 17s. 6d., out of which sum 20 li. had been expended in repairing the dwellings of the castle and the bridge of Domfront, and in repairing the fences of the enclosures in Andenne and Silvedrue. Among the debtors Reiner Taillator, the Bailiff of Le Passais in 1180, and Robert Le Moine, Bailiff in 1195, both occur, the former for the same amount of debt as he owed in 1195, and the latter for the residue of his receipts in that year. Robert Le Sausier also rendered accompt of 13 li. 1s. from the view of the forest of Andenne, and 11 li. 7s. from that of Silvedrue; of these issues the abbey of Lonlay had the tythe, and for the wages of the viewers and the fees of the foresters there was also a customary payment, but the residue appertained to Queen Alianor.* The issues from the mills of Domfront during the time they had been in the King's hands, from the chattels of those who had fled the country, from the Loan raised in the Bailiwick of Domfront, and from the Tallage set in the same, are next successively accounted for by the Bailiff, who had paid the whole into the Treasury. On the last membrane of this Roll are other accompts connected with this Bailiwick in the names of Robert Le Sausier, Robert Le Moine and William de la Ferté, and to which reference is made on this membrane, at least in regard of those rendered by the two last-named accomptants.

William de Seon rendered accompt for Hugh de Cardonville, his uncle, of 4 li. of the residue of the old ferm of Gorron of the third year past, i. e. of the year 1196, which he had delivered in at the Treasury, and of the ferm of the past year, 1197. Out of the latter tythe had been paid to the Canons of Mortain, as usual, and his customary wages to the Porter of Gorron; Hugh de Cardonville had 80 li. as his livery for the custody of the castle of Gorron, and under the King's writ these sums had been disbursed, viz. 42 li. 3s. for wages to one of the King's Wolf-hunters, 6 li. 8s. for carriage of the King's venison from Gorron to

The charter of King John for the dower of his wife Isabella, Queen of England, bearing date at Porchester 5 May 1204, contains this recital; "et in Normannia Faleisam et Danfront cum pertinentiis, Bonavillam super Tokam, et preterea omnia alia que dilecte matri nostre A. Regine Anglie in dotem fuerunt assignata tam citra mare quam ultra." The same three castles had been previously assigned by King Richard for the future dower of his Queen Berengaria, who, in the same month and year, by charter dated at Paris, published the terms of the convention between her and her lord, King Philip, whereby she quit-claimed to him and his heirs for ever the castle of Falaise and the town with its appurtenances, the castle of Danfront and the town with its appurtenances, and the castle and town of Bonneville-sur-Touques with the appurtenances, and all the forests of the three castles, quæ Richardus quondam Rex Anglorum maritus meus nobis assignavit in dotalitium.

Argentan and for curing the same, 4 li. to a certain monk sent into Brittany, and 5 li. to Peter Norreis, serjeant of the forest. Of the ferm of the current year the same William de Seon and William Grantmoutier and Geoffrey son of Matthew jointly rendered accompt, i. e. of 130 li., out of which Hamelinus de Torchamp had 30 li. for the custody of the castle of Gorron by the King's writ. William de Seon also accounted for the issues of the metairie of Fosse-Louvain during the two past years, up to August 1197, and he was a debtor for 6 li. 4s. of the residue of the Tallage set in the bourg of Gorron for the wages of the men-at-arms going to the Isle d'Andely; also of the Tallage set for the entrenchments of La Roche he rendered accompt of 3 li., paid into the Treasury. Hamelinus de Torchamp, the Castellan of Gorron in this year, was the accomptant of the Loan raised in the Bailiwick of Gorron, and of 35 li. from the tallage set in the same Bailiwick to maintain men-at-arms in the March, of which sum he had himself 13 li. to make up his livery for the custody of the castle; also 2 li. 8s. had been expended in carrying the King's snares from Gorron to Le Mans, and 5s. 4d. upon iron fastenings for the wicket of the gaol of Gorron. William Grant Moutier and Geoffrey above named jointly rendered accompt of 120 li. of the Tallage set in the town of Gorron in this year by the King.

William Geré rendered accompt of 21s. 10d. of the ferm of the castle upon Coumont, paid into the Treasury, and he had been a debtor for the like sum de censis Novi Castri super Coumunt in 1195. The site of this castle has apparently given name to the commune of Chatillon-sur-Colmont, arrondissement de Mayenne, canton de Gorron, on the south side of the river, in the vicinity of the forest of Mayenne and of the bourg of St. Georges-Butavent, an adjunct indicating the extremity of a territory, i. e. bouté en avant. In 1172, in the Bailiwick of the Passais, Oliver de Frollei, William Geré, Hubertus de Val-borel and (Robert) Moruel held between them the fief of a knight, and each one of them owed a month's ward in Le Passais, and without Le Passais they held another knight's fee; that this last-named fief was situate at Chatillon may be assumed from Mont-guerré being the designation of one of the component terres of the Marquisat of Chatillon, derived apparently from the tenure of William Geré. Colmiæ-mons is stated by William of Jumièges, or rather his continuator, to have been one of the castles which King Henry I. built upon the margin of his Duchy and of the conterminous provinces; and that after his death Mathildis, heir of the said King, obtained possession of Domfront, Argentan, and Exmes, castles of her father, and three others, viz. Coumont and Gorron and Ambrières, which she meanwhile granted to Juhellus de Mayenne, upon condition of his faithfully assisting her in acquiring her inheritance. For the said Juhellus declared that these three towns, viz. those which are last-named, were in his land. Robert du Mont, in his Appendix ad Sigebertum, where he notices the restoration of these three castles by the son of Juhellus to King Henry II. in 1162, thus names them, Gorran, Ambrerias, novum castrum super fluvium Colmiae. In the month of May 1199 Arthur Duke of Brittany, Comte of Anjou and Earl of Richmond, restored and granted to Juhellus de Mayenne, and his heirs, the castles of Gorron and of Ambrières and Castellum novum desuper Colmunt, together with the forest of Fossa Lovain, quæ ad castellaniam de Erneia pertinere denoscitur; which grant, at the suit of Arthur, King Philip confirmed. In the month of October 1201 Juhellus de Mayenne did homage to King John at Chinon, and gave as one of his hostages the son and heir of Payn de Roissen, custos of the tower of Coumont. Colmia, the original name of the river, has long been corrupted into Colmont, which should be applied, as its etymology shows, to describe the range of hill in which it is embosomed, the Mons Colmiæ, rather than, as now, the river itself.

Richard Silvain, the next accomptant on this membrane, had been in office in 1195, when he rendered accompt simply of the escheats and the fines of the Knights of the Vale of Mortain; but in this year we have accompts in his name of the amercements, proffers and fines of the Bailiwick of the Vale of Mortain, of the Loan raised in the same Bailiwick (out of which 47 li. 4s. had been remitted for the works of the castle of La Roche), of the Tallage set to maintain men-at-arms in the Bailiwick, and of his receipt from those who ought to send men-at-arms to the host and had not sent them. His jurisdiction was, however, wholly independent of the bourg of Mortain, as he does not render accompt of any Tallage set in it by the King.

The Bailiwick of Vire had been tallaged in 1195, and on the Roll of that year Richard Silvain rendered accompt for himself and Richard d'Argences of 112 li. 10s. of his receipt therefrom; in the current fiscal year he further rendered accompt of the amercements, proffers and fines, and of the chattels of felons in the same district, concerning which no return had been made in the former year. From the abbot of St. Sever he had 30s. de quarto suo, and from William de Montigny 40 li. 11s. de jurea; and among those who accounted in their own names in this district was the heir of Ralph Le Vicomte, then lately deceased.

From the loan raised in the Bailiwick of Vire the receipt was 80 li.—from the Tallage to maintain men-at-arms in the March 298 li. 10s.—from those who ought to go mounted to the host and did not go 96 li.; of these sums the Bailiff rendered accompt, having made payments thereout, under the King's writ, to Sawale son of Henry for the works of the castle of La Roche, and to Peter Ruaut for certain chattels, of which the King had had the price, as well as defrayed the cost incurred in the execution of justice, for which no writ was necessary. He also rendered accompt of the Tallage set in the town of Vire by the King's precept, of which a portion remained owing by the inhabitants of Vire, and of 22 li. 18s. and of nine tuns of wine of the chattels of Peter Ruaut; this last-mentioned sum had been given to the King in his Privy-chamber, who returned it to the offender as set forth above, but the wine was forwarded to Hamelin de Torchamp in store of the castle of Gorron.

Among the receipts of Richard Silvain as Bailiff of the Avranchin in 1195, entered upon the Roll of that year, was the sum of 4 li. from the Bishop of Avranches of the residue of the aid of his knights; this prelate, by name William Burellus, was deceased in 1196, and election made of William de Chemillé, Archdeacon of Richmond and custos of the abbey of St. Mary at York. But on the 14th of Sept. 1197 the said Bishop-elect was suspended from this see by the Archbishop of Rouen, with a view to his being elected to the see of Angers, then vacant by the death of Ralph de Beaumont; for of the Bishops of Angers the land of Chemillé in the pays de Mauge was held as a fief, and his being a canon of the Cathedral, dedicated to St. Maurice, at Angers, sufficiently indicates that this locality was his birth-place. On the eighth day after the suspension of William de Chemillé, the canons of Avranches proceeded to a new election, and, notwithstanding an appeal to Rome then and there interposed by one of their body, chose, on the octaves of the feast of the Holy Cross, William Ptholomeus, a clerk of the Seneschal of Normandy, whom they had caused to be ordained in the interval, he not being in orders at the time of the suspension. It is this prelate whose name is read Will'o Abrinc' electo among the Hiis Testibus in the Charter for the Exchange of Andely, 16th Oct. 1197, and not William de Chemillé, as has been supposed; the latter was assuredly at that date Elect of Angers, and he is so designated by Roger de Hoveden, where he names him among the ambassadors who were to act as proxies for the King at the election of an Emperor, which was to take place at Cologne on the 22nd of Feb. 1198, and whose appointment regards the time of Christmas immediately preceding.* On the feast of the Chair of St. Peter, 18 Jan. 1198, William de Chemillé was ordained Bishop of the see to which he had been last chosen by his metropolitan. This mode of translation was, however, deemed irregular by the Court of Rome, and Pope Innocent III., in a letter to the Archbishop of Bourges, dated 27th Apr. 1198, commissions him to suspend the Archbishop of Tours from the confirmation and consecration of Bishops for presuming to transfer William de Chymileio, Bishop of Avranches, to the church of Angers, and to consecrate him Bishop therein without the authority of the Apostolic see; which said Bishop he was likewise to suspend from the performance of episcopal duty, eo quod episcopatus Abrincensi sacramentali conjugio alligatus, querere solutionem non debuit. The Archbishop of Rouen was subjected to a similar suspension with the Archbishop of Tours. But in another letter, addressed to the same Archbishop of Bourges, dated 3rd Dec. 1198, Pope Innocent directed him to absolve both Archbishops, as having sinned ex simplicitate, non ex malignitate, in making the translation. The legality of the election of William Ptholomeus to the see of Avranches was also a question in the Roman Court, and by Bull, dated 17 March 1199, the proceedings declared null and void, though as to the personal charges against the Bishop elect they were held to be not proven; he was consequently re-elected and had consecration. During the vacancy of the see of Avranches the temporalities had been in the King's hands, and in the custody of the Bailiff, Richard Silvain, who now rendered accompt of the issue of the Bishopric, viz. of 62 li. 15s., clear of the fixed disbursements and the necessary expenses and the corrody of the Archbishop of Rouen—of 10 li. from the fief of Le Homme of the aide de Post, and of like sums for the same from the several fiefs in proportion to their quantity—of 2 li. from Robert de Tiebouville for the ward owing at Avranches, and of 7 li. 10s. of the relief of John de la Freneuse of a fief of half a knight. The sum was 136 li.; in the Treasury were 3 li. 6s., to the Comte of Eu had been remitted 112 li. in payment of the sum which he had borrowed toward the expense of the Comte of Flanders, for the wages of the Welsh at Tillières 8 li., and to Sawale son of Henry toward the works of the castle of La Roche 12 li. 14s. under the King's writ, so that the Accomptant was quit. Below Richard Silvain rendered accompt of 32 li. 13s. of the issue of the abbey of St. Etienne of Caen, which sum he had delivered to the King in his Privy-chamber. Robert, abbot of Caen, died 12th Apr. 1196, and was succeeded by abbot Samson in the following year; hence it will have been during such vacancy that this issue was received by the Bailiff from the possessions of the abbey in the Avranchin, though only accounted for in this year.

* Roger de Hoveden names the ambassadors among the clergy in this order, Philip, Bishop of Durham, Eustace, Elect of Ely, William de Chimeli, Elect of Angers, and the Elect of Evreux (Ebr'); now at this date Guarinus was Bishop of Evreux, having been elected in 1193, and consecrated not later than the year following, wherefore it seems strange that we here find him incorrectly called the Elect of Evreux, and named last on the list of the clerical ambassadors by the historian. The learned editor of the Gallia Xtiana notices the circumstance and declares his ignorance of the cause; but it may be that the text of Hoveden presents a misreading of Ebr' for Abr', Evreux for Avranches, as then the seeming incongruity would no longer exist, and in the person of William Ptholomeus we should have a Bishop-elect who answers to the description in point of time, and who, as having been in the employ of the Seneschal of Normandy as his clerk, was of all others the most likely to be chosen to aid in the conduct of an affair of such importance. The mission of a Bishop-elect of Evreux to Germany is referrible to the time expired during the imprisonment of King Richard, 22 Dec. 1192—4 Feb. 1194, when Guarinus had not been yet consecrated; and in whose absence the Seneschal of Normandy caused a communio to be embodied in the city of Evreux, Johanne episcopo mortuo, electo Guarino Ebroicensi in Alemanniam profecto cum Rege Ricardo, Comite Ebroicensi mortuo, Senescallus Normannia jussit fieri communionem apud Ebroicas.

Richard Silvain, as Bailiff of the pays d'Auge, rendered accompt in this year of the issues of that district; and first of 2 li. 13s. 4d. for one ounce of gold annually due from the Prior of Beaumont-en-Auge for his market of Beaumont, secondly of 64 minæ of oats of the Bernage of Auge, at the rate of 6s. each mina, and thirdly of the amercements, proffers and fines of the Bailiwick of Auge. Under the last head he had himself paid 7s. in lieu of a bezant for a hearing of his fine between himself and one of his kinsmen, sicut carta inter eos testatur, and other sums, whence it appears that he was resident in this Bailiwick; he also rendered accompt as a crown-debtor in this district of 33 li. 6s. 8d. of the residue of his debts by reason of his receipts in his official capacity. Walter de Esseleia, who owed 100 li. for the fine of his land in 1195, had this year paid in at the Exchequer of England, as certified by the brief of the Archbishop of Canterbury, then Justiciary, 96 li. 9s., the residue yet owing, and he was quit; he was a feudatory of William Briwerre, lord of Ashley com. Hants, and had of the gift of Henry II. the manor of Charlton com. Gloucester, which 31 Hen. III. 1247 was the property of his daughter Mabilia Revel, sister and heir of Walter de Esseleghe his son. Jordan du Hommet rendered accompt of the residue of the aid of the clerks of the Archdeaconry of Lisieux, which he then held in his benefice, but resigned prior to his elevation to the see of Lisieux, 10 Jan. 1202; he was a younger son of William du Hommet, Constable of Normandy, and founder of an abbey of the order of Prémontré, in the parish of Jués, on the hill called Aé, otherwise Mont Daé (Mons Auxilii), afterward piously translated into "Mons Dei," when it had become the site of a monastery, through the consonance of the Latin words with the vernacular Mondaye. Doon Bardouf (Bardolph) rendered account in this fiscal year of 500 marks of his fine for having his inheritance, which was then in the King's hands. To Richard de Sanfort he had paid 75 marks, of which the former owed an accompt, to Elyas Bernardi in the King's privy-chamber 25 marks, to Walter de Ely 15 marks to buy corn and to send it to Verneuil, to Walter the Money-changer 68 marks 10s. 4d. of which he had rendered accompt, and to Sawale son of Henry 66 marks for the works of the castle of La Roche, of which he had also rendered accompt. These sums, with 3s. sterling paid in at the Treasury, equalled a moiety of the fine; for the remainder he was a debtor, and would have to account thereof in the next fiscal year. King Henry II. gave (inter alia) to Thomas Bardolf the manor of Halughton com. Leyc. with its appurtenances, to have and to hold to him and his heirs, who should issue of the body of the daughter of Ralph Hanselyn, which said daughter was named Rosa, the manor being parcel of the entire barony which had been of the inheritance of Ralph Hanselyn grandfather of the said daughter of Ralph, viz. that barony which had fallen as an escheat to the said King and remained in his gift, as adjudged by the King's Court. Doon or Dodo Bardolf was the issue begotten of the body of Rosa Hanselyn, whom his father Thomas Bardolf had taken to wife, and, with his brother Thomas, had in 1173 the command of the garrison in the new castle called Drincourt (Neufchatel-en-Bray), when besieged by the young King Henry, Philip Comte of Flanders, and Matthew Comte of Boulogne. Thomas Bardolf was dead in 8 Ric. I. 1197, when his barony in England was in the custody of Hugh Bardolf for the King, and this heavy fine of his son is proof that his wife had predeceased him, and that the latter had this year his livery of the whole inheritance. To the church of Blessed Nicholas of Blanchelande, a Premonstratensian abbey in the diocese of Coutances, Dodo Bardulf gave a rent of four marks of silver in his manor of Fillingham, com. Linc. by the hands of William bishop of Coutances, in the Chapter of Blanchelande, on the day of the dedication of the same church, viz. 14 Jan. 1185, which manor was held by him of Richard de la Haie, the founder of this abbey. In Normandy he had land at Putot-en-Auge, and a charter of Blanchelande notes him to have given the church of Hérouville to Michael chaplain of Thomas Bardolph; but this last-named vill was, it seems, the fief of Henry de La Pomeraiie, the husband of Rohesia his sister. Richard Silvain next rendered accompt of 30 li. of the issue of the land of Hugh de Montfort in the Bailiwick of Auge, paid into the Treasury, and also of his receipt of the knight's fees of Hugh de Montfort for the aide de l'ost, viz. 229 li. 11s. 8d.; out of which sum the deposit in the Treasury was 50 li., and Sawale son of Henry had 175 li. 10s. for the works of the castle of La Roche by the King's writ, leaving 4 li. 1s. 8d. the balance due. In the year 1195 Hugh de Montfort rendered accompt in the Bailiwick of Auge of 60 li. for seven knight's fees and a half; and he was this year indebted to the crown in 40 li. 4s. of the residue, in 28 li. de jurea, and in 100 li. for the custody of the castle of Montfort-sur-Rile in the past year, beside five marks as mainpernor of the Bishop of Lisieux. According to the return made in 1172, the number of knights owing service to Robert de Montfort of the Honour of Cauquainviller was xxxiii et iii et iii milit.; but the fiefs named in this accompt do not exceed xxiii, and the greater number has probably been inserted by mistake in the old Register. By charter, dated at Carentan 30 Jan. 1200, King John gave to Hugh de Montfort for his homage and service in augmentation of his barony of Cocquainvillers 200 librates of land, money of Anjou, in Normandy, or fifty librates of land, sterling money, in England, to hold to him and his heirs by the service of a knight's fee, and the like to his brother Ralph de Montfort, until provision should have been made for him in marriage to the amount of 300 li., money of Anjou, or less, at his pleasure. The same monarch, 27th Apr. 1200, confirmed to Ralph de Bailleul ten librates of land, which Hugh de Montfort had given him for his homage and service and certain gilt spurs to be rendered at Easter, lying at St. Ymer, le Torquesne, Pont-l'Evêque and Les Parcs-fontaines (Esparfonteynes); and 14 Sept. 1202 Richard de Villequier had in command from the King to cause Hugh de Montfort to have 200 li. money of Anjou, received from the tallage of his men of Pont-l'Évêque in payment of his annual pension of 200 li., which the King had given him. After the conquest of Normandy by the French monarch the Honour of Montfort, which had belonged to Hugh de Montfort, was parcel of the royal domain, and in the Register of Philip Augustus is the copy of a grant to Guy d'Auteuil of 100 librates of land in the land which had belonged to Hugh de Montfort at Cocquainvilliers; this last-named barony was yet in the King's hands per eschaetam ex parte D'ni Hugonis de Monteforti in 1220, when a return of the fiefs was made. The Bailiff next rendered accompt of the Loan raised in the Bailiwick of Auge—of the Tallage set therein toward maintaining men-at-arms in the March—of the Tallage set in the town of Pont-l'Évêque by the King—of 36 li. received from individuals because they had not sent mounted men-at-arms to the host—of 4 li. 3s. of the aide de Post of the bourg of Cul-uslé, and of 3 li. 4s. of the Tallage of St. Ymer and of 4 li. 10s. of the Tallage of Cocquainvilliers for the same—of 100 li. which the abbot of St. Lo had given to the King, and of 86 li. 16s. 1d. of a moiety of his rents, which he had received of the Prior of St. Vigor; the monies thus accounted of he had either delivered in at the Treasury, or paid to the King or to his secretary in the Privy-chamber, save 5 li. remaining in charge upon the inhabitants of Pont-l'Évêque. The vill of Cul-uslé was more usually and becomingly designated Dos-uslé (Dorsum uslatum), whence the name, as now read, Dozullé. In the Terrier of the Diocese of Lisieux the Prior of Ste. Barbe-en-Auge is put down as patron of the church of Blessed Mary de Dorso-usto, and it would seem that this church was identical with the Ecclesia Beatæ Mariæ de Plassicio, which Arnulfus bishop of Lisieux confirmed to that monastery at the request of Robert de Montfort. Among those who rendered no accompt of their debts in this Bailiwick occurs the name of Guy de Dives (Diva), who had been Bailiff of Gavray in 1195, and was yet charged with the balance of his accompt in that year, viz. of the residue of the issues of Gavray, and of the Honour and of the residue of the pannage of the forest of Gavray, and of the residue of the chattels of a fugitive felon of the Bailiwick of Gavray; he was again in office under King John, who appointed him to be Constable of the castle of Chinon. For himself and Geoffrey d'Authie, Richard Silvain rendered accompt of 14 li. 12s. owing of the residue of the Tallage set in the bourg of Pont-Audemer; which sum had been appropriated to the purchase of ten thousand herrings, and to the carriage of them to the King in the Isle d'Andely under his writ.

Under the title De receptis suis Richard Silvain next rendered accompt on this membrane of 100 li. which he had of the debt of William de Monbrai at the hands of Ernisius de Falaise, of 114 li. 1s. of the issue of the land of Henry de Ferrières and of Matilda, the mother of his wife, and of 12 li. 1s. of the issue of the land of William de Garlande in Marbeuf beside the grain, of which last he separately rendered accompt. The money had been by him in part paid into the Treasury, and in part to the clerks in the King's Privy-chamber, save an outlay of 6 li. for the King's tables cut in the forest of L'Aigle and for the cost of their carriage to the Isle d'Andely; the grain had been wholly delivered to Robert d'Harcourt to put in store in the castle of La Roche d'Andely. Henry de Ferrières was the eldest son and heir of Walchelinus de Ferrières, who occurs on the Roll of the year 1195, and whose barony was situate partly in the Lieuvin and partly in the pays d'Ouche, extending along the banks of the river Charenton, the limit of the two dioceses of Lisieux and Evreux. Both at Ferrières (St. Hilaire) and at Chambrais (Broglie) were residences of the lords of the fief, but the latter was the place of strength; in 1201 Henry de Ferrières gave to King John 300 marks of silver for the fine of his land in England, and the King awarded back to him the same sum to fortify his castle of Chambrais (Cambresium). In the same year he was indebted to the crown in 92 li. 15s. 8d. of the third scutage of Ric. I., of which return was made by the Sheriff of Devonshire, and in 6 Joh. 1205, his land in England was let to ferm to John du Frênai as Terra Normannorum. Hugh de Ferrières, his brother, married Margaret, the daughter and heir of Hugh de Say, but was dead without issue in 1205, when the land which he had in England of the gift of their father Walchelin, devolved upon his sister Isabella as his heir, then the wife of Roger de Mortemer, and afterward of Peter Fitzherbert. On the Fine Roll 9 Hen. III. 1225, is entered a writ dated 12 Apr. addressed to the Barons of the Exchequer for respite of a claim for fifteen marks which they had made upon Peter Fitzherbert and Isabella his wife, of the debt of Henry de Ferrières, brother of the said Isabella, until the octaves of the Holy Trinity in that year. At Rouen, A.D. 1205, on Sunday after the octave of All Saints (13 Nov.), Henry de Ferrières was one of the barons present, who made oath in regard of the rights of Henry and Richard, Kings of England, and of themselves, in Normandy, as against the clergy, both at Lisieux and elsewhere; and in the register of Philip Augustus is this entry, Dominus de Ferrariis servit pro quinque feodis militum pro feodis Ferriarum; but the parentage of his wife I am unable to trace, nor can I identify their issue. Marbeuf, canton of Neufbourg, was yet an escheat in 1202, when by the King's writ, 14th July, John de Nevill was commanded to cause Roger de Portes to have seisin of the land of Mareboe que fuit Willelmi de Garlanda in Honore de Novo-burgo.

The accompt of the ferm of the chatellenie of Ambrières in the Passais by Hugh de Couterne is next inserted on the back of this membrane; its amount was 50 li., of which the abbey of Lonlay had the tythe, and he had paid 3 li. for the conveyance of a prisoner of war named Forment des Monts from Caen to Ambrières under the King's writ, as also 2 li. 10s. for strengthening and repairing the gaol of Ambrières. The residue, together with his receipts from what was due of the Tallage set in his Bailiwick of Ambrières—from the loan raised in sums of 10 li. each upon Richard Burnof and Ralph de Haslei—from the Tallage set to maintain men-at-arms in the March, and lastly from the Tallage set in the town of Ambrières by precept of the King, of all which he separately rendered accompt, had been by him delivered in at the Treasury, and he was wholly quit.

Richard Silvain is again an accomptant at the foot of this membrane of 750 li. 8s. 5d. of the issue of the land of Walter de Lacy for the space of one year, before the same was restored to him. Under the King's writ he had paid to Brice the Chamberlain 53 li. in the King's Privy-chamber—to Roger d'Ouille 33 li. of his wages whilst he had the custody of the castle of Lyons—to Helyas Bernard and Peter des Roches 106 li. in the King's chamber at Drincourt—to the same Helyas 107 li. in the King's chamber at Vatteville, and to the same Helyas and Robert the clerk 237 li. in the King's chamber at Neufbourg; for the residue he was debtor, as also for four bushels of heavy grain and half a bushel of peas, and for eleven muids and a half of wine, and for 300 eels and 400 herrings of the issue of the same land. Feodum de Lacey cum Campellis II mil. (scilicet, Guilberti et Henrici,) is noticed in the Inquest taken of the Fiefs held of the see of Bayeux, after the death of Richard, Bishop of Bayeux, the son of Samson, A.D. 1133, and in the Chartulary of the Diocese is copied a deed of Robert Fitz-roy, Earl of Gloucester, whereby he quit-claimed to Philip, Bishop of Bayeux, all the fiefs of Ilbert and of Gilbert de Lacy, which they held of the church of Bayeux and of the Bishop at Lassy and at Campeaux, or elsewhere, dated at Devizes in the presence of Mathildis the Empress in the year of the Incarnation of Our Lord 1146, in the month of September. Hugh, son of Gilbert de Lacy, was lord of the province of Meath in Ireland and of an extensive Honour in the county of Hereford, of which the castle of Weobley was the caput; he was assassinated 25 July 1185 at Durrow in Ireland, leaving issue four sons, Walter, Hugh, Gilbert and William, and two daughters, Ægidia, wife of Richard de Burgh, and Elena, wife of Richard de Belfou. Walter de Lacy, 6 Ric. I. 1195, paid 51 li. 10s. in aid of the King's ransom, of which entry is made sub. tit. Herefordshire on the Pipe Roll. The ravages committed by him in conjunction with John de Courcy, lord of Ulster, upon the territory of the King in Ireland, caused the seizure of his lands into the King's hands during the year to which the above account refers, and the condition of his restoration was a proffer of 2000 marks for the favour of the King and the livery of his lands; of such fine he was an accomptant in Herefordshire 10 Ric. I. 1198, and 1 Joh. 1199, when 1200 li. were paid on this behalf. In the following year he married Margaret, daughter of William de Briouze, and on the day of marriage pledged himself to the said William by oath that from that day forward, during the whole term of his life, he would hold in his own hands all his land in England and Normandy, so as not to have it in his power to give or sell or mortgage any part of his land to any one, whereby the heirs of his wife, daughter of the said William, might suffer decrease of their inheritance, unless it should be done by the consent and wish of the aforesaid William. This convention King John, 19 Nov. 1200, confirmed by charter, for which William de Briouze gave 20 marks and a palfrey; and in 1202 the land of Walter de Lacy was committed to William de Briouze in such form, as that he was responsible therefore to no one save to the King. His brothers, Hugh and Gileberte de Lacy, were both tenants of fiefs in Normandy. William de Briouze abovenamed obtained the King's writ to William des Préaux, dated 6 Feb. 1203, to cause him to have the whole land of the Honour of Le Pin with its appurtenances in his Bailiwick, which had belonged to Hugh de Lacy; and by charter, drawn up at Evreux in the same year, King Philip Augustus gave of the land, concerning which dispute had been formerly between Richard de Garençières and Gilebert de Laci, that portion which the latter had had by agreement, to the same Richard and his heirs for the accustomed service. Subsequently the French monarch gave to Andrew Porpensee and his heirs the land which Gilebert de Laci had held at Lassy (Laceium) and at Campeaux; and this grant he confirmed in May 1219 to John de Mara, son of the said Andrew, and to the heirs of John. The son of Gilebert de Lacy was a hostage for Walter de Lacy in 1215, and in December 1222 the former was dispatched by the King into Ireland to Hugh de Lacy, his other brother, on a special mission. Of the two elder brothers the following history is related in Grace's Annals of Ireland sub anno 1210: "Johannes Rex cum classe in Hyberniam venit et ingenti exercitu, filiosque Hugonis Lacii, Gualterum dominum Midiæ et Hugonem regione expulit; hi enim in plebem tirannidem exercuerunt, Johannemque de Coursey, dominum Rathenii et Kilbarrock, quoniam is eos Regi accusaverat, interfecerant. Illi autem in Galliam fugientes in monasterio S. Taurini, illiberalium laborum ministri, in horto, videlicet, fodiendo et luto lateribusque parandis, diu incogniti vixerunt. Tandem vero ab abbate ejusdem agniti, ejus precibus Regi reconciliati sunt; soluta tamen in restitutionem magna summa pecuniæ, revertuntur ad pristinam in Hiberniam auctoritatem. Gualterus in Hyberniam secum adduxit Johannem Aluredy, i. e. Fitzacori, filium fratris Abbatis, eique dedit dominium de Dengio et alia multa; monachos etiam nonnullos, utrique quos ditarunt." John de Martigny was Abbot of St. Taurin of Evreux at this date, and at Foure in Ireland was a cell to that Norman abbey, where the monks, whom the two brothers enriched, will have had their abode. Leave to come to the King in England had been granted to Walter de Lacy, 1 June 1213; and by writ teste'd 29 July following, Engelard de Cygoiny, the custos, was directed to give Walter de Lacy full seizin of all his land, except Ludlow, which was soon after also restored. In the spring of the following year he was with the King in Gascony, and on his return covenanted with him at the Tower of London, 15 Mar. 1215, to give 4000 marks for having back his land in England and Ireland, his son Gilbert to be delivered to the King to remain as his hostage, until the said sum should have been satisfied. Pursuant to this agreement Gilbert de Lacy was placed in the custody of the King, 8 Jul. 1215, and was, with other youths, in ward at the castle of Devizes until 30 Jul. 1216, when the King directed him to be removed to the March of Wales. This Gilbert de Lacy, son of Walter, married Isabella, daughter of Ralph Bigot, but died in the life-time of his father, leaving issue only two daughters, Matilda and Margeria; his widow remarried John Fitz-Geoffrey, who had with her, 18 Hen. III. 1234, in right of her dower of the land of her husband, the castle and honour of Ewyas-Lacy com. Hereford. About Easter, 24 Hen. III. 1240, Walter de Lacy, being then blind and afflicted with divers bodily infirmities, died, having had issue, beside Gilbert, a daughter, Katharine; his heirs were his grand-daughters, Matilda, then the wife of Peter de Geneva, afterward of Geoffrey de Geneville, and Margeria, wife of John de Verdon, between whom partition was made of the lands of his Honour in England and Ireland.

Membrane 6.

Baillia de Bonavilla per Phylippum Mimecan.

Escaete Ballie de Ponte Audemari per Galfridum de Argenthemo.

Philip Mimican (Mimecan, Minecan), one of the King's Foresters in 1195, was this year an Accomptant of the ferm of the Vicomté of Bonneville-sur-Touques. After entry of the amount of the ferm, follow the customary annual payments charged upon it in former years; but they had now been put down in error, and are inclosed between brackets on the membrane to denote a cancel. The accompt is reinserted below; to William, uncle of the Comte of Flanders, the entire ferm, 160 li., had been transmitted of the King's gift, and the Bailiff was quit. The sum of the receipts from the assised rents, with 2s. for a load of salt from William Costentin, was 44 li. 17s. 7d.; and in this year William Almoner (Elemosinarius) had the rent of the Terre Jafarin, which the Queen, the King's mother, had given him—William, uncle of the Comte of Flanders 10 li. 6s. 3d.—the nuns of Lisieux, the monk of St. Arnoul, the chaplain of Bonneville, and the herdsman of Canappeville, the alms and fee which they were wont to have in the ferm of the same Vicomté, and Queen Alienor 10 li., leaving 19s. 4d. the sole deposit in the Treasury. A confederacy between King Richard and Baldwin, Comte of Flanders and Hainault, and their successors, had been arranged by Hubert, Archbishop of Canterbury, in the last month of the preceding fiscal year, as is apparent from a charter of John, Lord of Ireland and Comte of Mortain, simultaneous with the treaty, which has at foot Apud Rothomagum octavo die Septembris, anno regni regis fratris mei octavo, i. e. 8th Sept. 1197, according to the calculation elsewhere remarked upon, that the regnal years of Richard were frequently made to coincide with the length of the year of the Lord, and to be reckoned onwards to Christmas. In this fiscal year 100 li. had been paid for the expense of the Comte of Flanders at Neufchatel (Drincort), then, doubtless on his way back to Flanders, and In expensa nunciorum Flandriæ 3 li. 14s. 7d. per idem breve is an item of Geoffrey the Moneychanger of Rouen on the second membrane of this Roll. These nuncii were Siger, Castellan of Gand, and Nicholas de Condé, who had been sent into Normandy on the part of the Comte of Flanders, to be present when the Norman barons swore upon their lives to maintain the treaty; at the same time Baldwin Comte of Aumale, William de Hundescote (Hondschoote), and William de l'Etang, were dispatched on a like mission, on the part of King Richard into Flanders.¹ Thus Philip Comte of Namur, brother of the Comte of Flanders, swore to the treaty in Flanders; but not long after he was in Normandy, when Comte John of Mortain entered into a compact of alliance with him, to which they both swore on the Holy Gospels, being witnesses Hubert archbishop of Canterbury, William bishop of Lisieux, and Henry bishop of Coventry, Eustace bishop-elect of Ely, and William bishop-elect of Avranches, Baldwin Comte of Aumale, Earl William Marshal, and William Earl of Salisbury, William de Humet, Constable of Normandy, William Fitz-Ralph, Seneschal of Normandy, Ralph Taisson, John des Préaux, Peter des Préaux, (Normans,) William de Hainault, Philip son of the Comte, Seher castellan of Gand, Baldwin de Comines, Thierry de Beuvrière, Peter du Mesnil, Nicholas de Condé, Hubert de Rumegies, Clarembaud d'Haute-rive, (Flemings,) and many others. William of Hainault was brother of Baldwin V. Comte of Hainault, and uncle of Baldwin Comte

of Flanders and Hainault, and it is probable that when present on this occasion he had a grant from the King of this Vicomté of Bonneville to attach him to his cause, though appertaining of right to Queen Eleanor, as having been included in her dower. Subsequently, A. D. 1203, William, uncle of the Comte of Flanders and Hainault, was ruler in his stead in the Comté of Hainault, during the absence of the latter on a pilgrimage in honour of Our Lord Jesus Christ, which resulted in the Conquest of Constantinople and his Election as Emperor. The same Philip, and John de Canappeville, rendered accompt jointly of 53 li. 6s. 8d. which they had received from the Seneschal of Normandy. In the Treasury were 13 li. 10s. 8d. ; in the cost of the carriage of the King's wines from Honfleur up to Rouen, and for landing them 4 li. 19s. 6d. had been disbursed under the King's writ, while for the execution of justice 13s., for liveries to those who took three sturgeons 15s., and for making a bridge over Lambert's fleet, which Robert de Ros was wont to do as attaching to his fief, 5s., had been expended without such warranty, leaving 33 li. 2s. 10d. due, of which Philip Mimican singly rendered accompt below. Gislebert, the Herdsman, was the accomptant of the rent of the Vacaria of Canappeville again in this year; and below his accompt a notification, similar to those of former years but in the past tense, as to the stores of the castle of Bonneville, with a reference to the Roll of 1176, is inserted in the name of Geoffrey Trossebot. The accompts of crown-debtors in the Bailiwick, of Philip Mimican for the sum obtained from the chattels of felons and usurers, and of two mainpernors of Robert Pantof, are next inserted, and then follow other accompts by the Bailiff of the Loan raised in the Bailiwick of Bonneville, and of the Tallage set in the same to maintain men-at-arms in the March; by the King's writ William, uncle of the Comte of Flanders, had acquittance for the men of his fief of their proportion of the Loan and Tallage. Philip Mimican rendered accompt for himself and William Quarrel, and their associates, of 336 li. 15s. of the sale of the forest of Bonneville, which sum, together with 95 li. 4s. 6d. over and above, had been thus disbursed; viz. for making and strengthening the fences of the King's inclosures (haies) in the forest of Bonneville, 131 li.—for the carriage of fifty casks of the King's wines from Honfleur to Rouen, and for cutting four ship-loads of timber in the forest of Bonneville, and for conveying the same from Bonneville to Caen by sea, to make the King's mews, and other works of the castle of Caen, and for repairing the royal dwellings at Bonneville, 47 li. 10s.—in liveries for the King's hounds, and in wages to two keepers (bernarii), from the feast of St. Peter ad Vincula (1 Aug.) to the feast of St. Andrew (30 Nov.), 27 li. 3s. 6d.—for making four nets to catch hogs, and for five others to catch foxes, 14 li. 16s.—in wages of the knight and of the clerk who effected the sale of the forest of Bonneville, 42 li. 10s.—and, lastly, to the King in his privy-chamber 169 li. The next accompt of the Bailiff is of his debt referred to above, and of 63 li. 18s. 5d., the balance of the accompt of his receipts in the past year; after deducting the surplus due to him on the preceding accompt, he continued a debtor for the residue. He also owed 7 li. 16s. for four muids and four setiers of oats of the customs appertaining to Robert de Ros in the forest of Bonneville, the fief of this baron being then in the King's hands, from his having incurred forfeiture by reason of the escape of Hugh de Chaumont. Among the debtors to the crown in this Bailiwick who made no payment during the year, Robert de Ros stands charged with 8 li. 5s. of the old ferm of Bonneville remaining upon him in 1195, and 17 li. 1s. of the residue of the view of the forest of Bonneville; he also owed 2 li. 4s. 8d. for Geoffrey Trossebot of the residue of his amercement, the same sum as was owing by Robert Trossebot on behalf of his brother in 1195, and 203 li. 5s. 3d. de jurea, the balance of an accompt rendered the same year, beside ten marks as mainpernor of Richard d'Argences. William Trossebot is named by the historian Ordericus Vitalis in the list of those of ignoble parentage whom King Henry I. raised, as it were, from the dust, and by his manifold gifts exalted over Counts and men of the country of illustrious birth. Afterward, in 1138, William, having the surname of Trossebot, castellan (munio) of Bonneville, was successful in putting to flight Comte Geoffrey of Anjou and his Angevin troops, having first set fire to the adjacent bourg of Touques, in which they had taken up their quarters for the night. He married Albreda de Harwecurt (Harrecuria), who was living his widow, aged 50 years, in 1185, and then the mother of four sons; of her frank-marriage she held land in Braunston, com. Northampton, and was in the King's gift. In Yorkshire William Trussebut held an Honour of ten knights' fees, of which Warter in the East-Riding was the caput; and which in the reign of Henry I. had belonged to Geoffrey Fitzpayn. His sons Richard, Geoffrey, William, and Robert, left no issue, and 6 Ric. I. 1195, Hamo son of Hamo (Meinfelin) and Robert de Buvelers, otherwise Bullers, rendered accompt of 300 marks for having their shares of the land of William Trussebut and of Robert his brother; which sum they had in that year paid into the Treasury in two tallies, and were quit. At the same date the Sheriff of Yorkshire, Hugh Bardolf, rendered accompt of 16 li. 16s. 8d. of the rent of the land, which had been belonging to Robert de Ros, quæ fuerat Roberti Trussebut, for the term of half a year, by him paid in at the Treasury; and on the Great Roll of the Pipe of the following year is this entry, sub tit. Everwichscira, "Robertus de Ros redd. comp. de D. marc. pro habenda rationabili parte sua, sicut primogenitus, de terra quæ fuit Roberti Trussebut in Anglia et Normannia, sicut rationabiliter monstrare poterit quod habere debeat. In thesauro cc.m. Et debet cc.m." To a share, as eldest born, of the inheritance of Trussebut, Robert de Ros derived title through his mother, Roesia Trussebut, then deceased; for in 1185 the wife of Everard de Ros, who was daughter of William Trussebut, was of the King's gift, being 34 years of age, and mother of two sons, of whom the eldest was of the age of thirteen years, and his land in the custody of Ranulph de Glanville. The manor from which this family had their local surname was held as a fief of the Honour of Albemarle (Aumale), in the district of the county of York, called Holderness, and has now the name of Roos or Rosse; in 30 Hen. II. Ebrardus de Ross was said to owe 100 marks for having his land which the Comte of Aumale had held, but he was since dead, and his heir in the King's hands, and the land in the possession of Earl William de Mandeville, who then held this seigniorship in right of his wife, Comtesse of Aumale. Robert de Ros, surnamed Furfan, had livery of his land in England 2 Ric. I. 1191, in which year he owed 1000 marks for his fine; and after the acquisition by him of a purparty of the land of Robert Trussebut, as shewn above, he gave thereout to the Templars the manor of Ribston, where they established a Commandery. In Normandy he confirmed to the abbey of St. Georges de Bocherville the alms, which his ancestors had given formerly, viz. the tythe of the mill of St. Cyr and of the mill of Barneville and the meadow called Dicheaus, as contained in the charters of Geoffrey and Robert Trussebut to the same monastery.^u The other daughters of William Trusbut, and coheirs with Roesia de Ros of the barony of Warter, were Hillaria Trusbut, deceased 25 Hen. III. 1241, wife of Robert de Bullers, the heir to whose dower was Robert Ware, and Agatha Trusbut, deceased 31 Hen. III. 1247, wife first of Hamo Meinfelin and secondly of William de Albini; neither of whom left issue surviving at their deaths in extreme old age.

Lastly, on this membrane, Geoffrey de Argentan rendered account of his receipts, viz. of the monies retained by the inhabitants of the Bailiwick of the Lieuvain from the Tallages of the King set in that district—of the issues from escheats in the Bailiwick of Pont-Audemer, i. e. the chattels of felons—and of the monies which the Seneschal of Normandy had delivered to him to purchase corn. The sum was 232 li. 16s. 6d.; in the Treasury were 9 li. 6s. 1d., and in the expenditure under the King's writ were included the cost of 6 muids, 10 setiers and one mina of corn bought at Bernai for the King's use, 26 li. 12s. 6d., the price of the carriage of the same corn conveyed to Verneuil for the store of the castle of Verneuil 12 li. 7s. 6d., and the remittance to the King in his Privy-chamber through Elyas Bernard and Robert le Clerc, 67 li. 9s. 8d.: for the residue, 16 li., the Accomptant was debtor.

Ballia Baiocensis per Willielmum Poignard et a tergo.

The issues of the Bailiwick of the Bessin were rendered account of in this fiscal year by William Poignard, the same officer as had charge of the adjacent Bailiwick of Caen, and was Præpositus of the bourg in 1195 and in this year. The assised rents from the sties and cowfolds of the forest of Montfiquet, and from the demesnes, vary but little from the return made on the earlier Rolls; save that with the price of the setier of corn, which stood at 9s. in 1180, at 14s. in 1195, and at 12s. in the current year, the amount rose and fell in proportion; the house of William de Crissetot had been restored to the cathedral of received from the chapter of St. Georges the privilege of confraternity. (Ib. 113 b.) To the charter of Robert de Ros there were witnesses "Goscelinus presbyter, Gaufridus Tronel clericus, et milites Reginaldus de Gerponvilla, Radulphus de Bailluel, et Symon cubicularius, Petrus nepos Abbatis, Ricardus filius Heberti Portarii et plures alii." (Ib. 112 b.) Reginald de Gerponville was a feudatory of the Honour of Warter in England, and likewise a benefactor to the abbey of Bocheville with consent of his wife Emmeline and son William. When partition was made of the ten knight's fees of that Honour into three shares, Reginaldus de Cherponvilla dimid. milit. and Johannes Burdett quartam partem were allotted to Roesia de Ros.

Bayeux, while rents were this year newly received from the messuage in front of the oven of Rabace, and from that occupied by Cyprian. The issue from the customary render of 10 muids, one setier of oats, i. e. 21 li. 3s. 6d., for the Bernagium of the Bessin had been this year paid into the Treasury by the Bailiff; below which accompt is a list of the occupants of demesnes under the King's grants, as on the Roll of the year 1180. William Bacon had Bauge per Regem, which in the former year was in the occupation of Roger Bacon; it is within the limits of the commune of Planquery, and there was here a Commandery of the Knights Templars of the foundation of Roger Bacon. Among the debtors to the King in this Bailiwick, Thomas Guernon rendered accompt in part payment of 88 marks 7s. 8½d. sterling of the chattels of Robert, abbot of Caen, and of six marks for four drinking-bowls and two marks for one cup of silver; the abbot had died at London in Passion-week A. D. 1196, having been struck with apoplexy, but it is singular to find his chattels confiscate to the crown as if he had died an usurer. Peter de Bayeux and two others are put down as owing 4 li. 5s. of the residue of the ferm of the land of Andrew de Vitré, and Anschetil de Arry, with John Le Roux, had quittance of 26 li. paid into the Treasury of the ferm of the land of Amaury de Tournebu at St. Sulpice; of the tenure of Andrew de Vitré in the Bessin and Le Bocage mention has been already made, and in the return of Knight service in 1172 we have Thomas de Tornebu servitium iii militum et ad suum servitium xvii milites among the entries on the Roll. William de Symilly rendered accompt of 7s. in lieu of a bezant for a hearing of the convention between him and his brother Geoffrey of the inheritance of their father and mother, as the Chyrograph between them witnesseth, and of which he had made payment and was quit. William de Semilly and Geoffrey du Hommet were sons of Enguerrand du Hommet and Cecilia de Semilly, whose fief at St. Georges d'Aunay was a mouvance of the Honour of Hommet and situate in this Bailiwick. The Bailiff himself rendered accompt of 35 li. 5s. 8d. of the residue of the Tallages of 12d. and of 18d. and of other Tallages, and was indebted, jointly with Geoffrey de la Haye, in 7 li. 16s. 5d. of the escheats of the Bailiwick of the Bessin. The Comte of Mortain is put down in this Bailiwick as owing 272 li. de jurea, as also 1312½ marks of silver and 700 li. money of Anjou of the loan which the King had made him, whilst of the debts of William de Calix the Comtesse of Brittany owed 100 li. In right of his wife Isabella Comte John of Mortain held of the Bishop of Bayeux the fiefs of ten knights, sicut de Honore Ebroceii (Evrecy), together with the fiefs of Suhart of eight knights and of Mal-filiatre of seven knights. Two accompts follow of the amercements, proffers and fines, and of the Loan raised in the Bailiwick of the Bessin, the sum of the former being 16 li. and of the latter 855 li.; in the last sum was included the contribution of the inhabitants of Pont-St.-Marie, viz. 35 li. but of which they had afterwards acquittance, because it was found by law-worthy men that they were quit of all Tallages and aide de l'ost. The Earl of Chester was likewise among the debtors to the crown in this Bailiwick for 2599 li. 6s. 9d. money of Anjou, and 700 marks of silver of the residue of his accompt of (his fine). The views of the forests of the Bessin, Vernay and Tronquay, were, as usual, included in the issues, of which William Poignart rendered accompt; by writ 15 li. 2s. 6d. had been laid out upon the repairs of the dwellings of Bur and of the gaol of Bayeux in this fiscal year.

On the back of this membrane William Poignard rendered accompt of 1801 li. 7s. of the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of the Bessin to maintain the men serving at arms in the March, which sum had been wholly paid into the Treasury; and also of 60 li. the amount of the sums taken from those who were bound to send mounted men at arms to the host and had not sent, of which money Peter de la Roche had had 48 li. in the King's Privy-chamber, and 12 li. remained upon Richard Harenc.

William Belet, Præpositus of Bayeux since 1195, rendered accompt in this membrane of 48 li. 17s. 2d. of the residue of the old ferm of the Præpositura of Baieux, and of 300 li. of the new ferm. Beside the customary annual outgoings, 15 li. 5s. had been this year disbursed by writ for the carriage of the royal treasure from the ford of Formigny (Le Grand Vay) to Caen at divers times, and 3 li. for the wages in arrear due to Ansketil de Arry, one of the clerks of the Exchequer; the residue was yet owing. Of 600 li. of the Tallage set in the city of Bayeux by precept of the King, William Poignard rendered accompt below on this membrane, as also of the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of the Bessin in like manner by the King, a sum total of 1470 li.; out of which 800 li. had been paid over to Sawalo son of Henry and to Matthew son of Enard toward the works of the castle of La Roche, and he was a debtor for the residue. There is also an accompt by certain transgressors of 50 li. of their amercements for the forest of Vernay, of which they were quit.

William Poignard likewise rendered accompt of 880 li. for himself and his associates obtained from the sale of the forest of Gavray, of which sum the abbey of Cerisy was paid the tythe, and the remainder, save 20 li., was in the Treasury. The same Bailiff also rendered accompt of 72 li. for himself and his associates of the sale of the Park of Symilly, by him delivered in at the Treasury; and, lastly, Henry de Gray is an accomptant of 7s. in lieu of a bezant for a hearing of the gift and concession which Alan Wastehose had made to him of land at Neuilly, as the charter of the said Alan testified, which sum was in the Treasury and he was quit. By this last accomptant there is also a prior entry of a like payment in this Bailiwick for a hearing of the wardship between him and Richard his nephew, and of him mention has been made on the Roll of the year 1195, as Prevôt of Verneuill. In England, 8 Ric. I. 1197, William Brieguerre gave account of 5 li. of the scutage of Henry de Gray for five knight's fees of the Honour of Peverel of Nottingham; he was also a tenant of land at Ketton com. Rutland, held of the Honour of Hommet, as well as of the manor of Thurrock com. Essex, which he had purchased of Josceus son of Isaac, a Jew, to whom it had been sold by the Earl de Ferrers. For his service of the lands which he held in the counties of Nottingham and Derby, both he and his wife Ysolda had attorned by the King's precept to Robert Earl de Ferrers, as long as he should hold the castles of Peak and Bolsover in his hands during the King's pleasure, so that upon the death of Henry de Gray the Sheriff had the King's mandate, 16 July 3 Hen. III. 1219, to let the said lands abide with his widow in peace. Ysolda de Gray was daughter of Hugh Bardolf, sister and one of the coheirs of Robert Bardolf, deceased 9 Hen. III. 1225; she was apparently remarried to one Reginald de Meandre and living his wife 19 Hen. III. 1235, being then in possession of the fief of Codnor, com. Derby, and of her purparty of the manor of Hoo in Kent, the latter of the inheritance of Robert Bardolf. In 30 Hen. III. 1246, the King received the homage of Richard de Gray, son and heir of Isolda de Gray, of all the lands and tenements which the same Isolda held of the King in capite, and the Sheriffs of Nottingham and Derby and of Kent, by writs teste'd at Winchester 13 July, were in that year commanded to give him full seisin. From Henry de Gray were descended the Lords Grey of Codnor and Wilton, and from a branch of the same family, settled in England since the Conquest, the line of the Lords Grey of Rotherfield. The sale of the Park of Symilly by the King's officers in this year is a proof that the fief with its appurtenances, which the Bishop of Bayeux held of the King's gift in 1180, had since been re-annexed to the demesnes of the crown in this Bailiwick. In the year following the castle of Similly was in the custody of Thomas Maufileâtre, who was commanded by the King's Letters Patent, dated 23d Sept. 1199, to deliver it to the Earl of Chester, who was to hold it during the King's pleasure, and for the performance of which condition the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of Ely, and John des Préaux, were his mainperners. Accordingly, on Friday in Easter week, 11 Apr. 1203, upon a suspicion of treason, he surrendered it into the King's hands at the castle of Vire; whereupon, along with Robert de Tresgoz, Hugh de Chaucombe was sent to take possession, who was instructed to remain in it and fortify it strongly. In 1199 William de Symilly, son of Enguerrand du Hommet, confirmed to the abbey, founded by Richard du Hommet the Constable on his fief of Aunay, inter alia, the church of St. Ebremond de Similly, with all the chapels and their appurtenances; in which grant was included the church of the commune of St. Pierre de Similly, in the bourg by the castle, for after the canons of St. Lo were enfeoffed of the Barony of La Barre de Similly by King Philip-le-Bel, we find an arrangement was made between them and Abbot Godefroi of Aunay concerning the church of St. Ebremond de Similly and the chapel of St. Pierre de Castro. William de Similly had letters of safe conduct from King John, dated 28 Oct. 1215, and the King received him into his favour; from which time he continued in England till his death. On the 18th Jan. 8 Hen. III. 1224, William his son and heir did homage and had the King's Letters Close to the Sheriff of Bucks for livery of his lands, which lay at Risborough (Risemberga), one of the demesnes of the Honour of Giffard, Earl of Buckinghamshire, granted by Henry II. in 1173 to Richard du Hommet, his Constable, grandfather of William de Similly.

The first accompt entered on this membrane is by Robert de Ste. Mére-eglise of 50 li. 1s. 1d. of the issue of the land of Baldwin Wac in the Island of Guernesey, whilst it was in the King's hand; which sum was in the Treasury and he was quit. Baldwin Wac was deceased in this fiscal year, leaving his heir a minor; wherefore, till grant had been made of the custody or the land set to ferm, the issues had in the interval been received by the Bailiffs of the districts, where his possessions lay, both in the island of Guernesey and in the Côtentin.

Drogo de Trubleville and Gislebert de Paris rendered accompt of their receipts during the past fiscal year, viz. from Geoffrey de Say 400 li.—from William de Martigny 2030 li. 16s.—from William de Trubleville 705 li. 2s.—from Geoffrey Ridel 129 li. 10s.—from Laurence de Donjon 8 li. 15s.—from the Privy-chamber of the King 748 li.; also from Geoffrey de Say in this year 300 li.—from Geoffrey the Money-changer 404 li.—from the burgesses of the bourg of Eu of the sale of the grain belonging to the King 496 li., being a sum total of 5122 li. 3s.; in the Treasury were 17s., and in the works of the town of Eu for its walling 5121 li. 6s. had been disbursed and they were quit. Up to the date of the treaty of Issoudun the bourg, which had grown up round the ancient castle of Eu, had apparently been left wholly unenclosed; for not only have we here the proof in the expenditure of so large a sum of money in the course of two successive years for the purpose, but there had been likewise a general Tallage ad fossata de Augo set in the Bailiwicks of Normandy. One gate of the town, flanked by two thick towers, is still remaining and has the name of Porte d'Empire; another was called Porte de Gland, and stood in the suburb, now called La Chaussée d'Eu, across the Bresle, having name from the parish, anciently S. Riquier de Gland, in the diocese of Amiens, which had been annexed to the Comté of Eu. The vicinity of Ulterior Portus and the traditions of its Roman origin are explanatory of the name Empire in the sense of Emporium.

Ralph Labe (Abbas) rendered accompt of 500 li. of the ferm of the

Prevôté and Vicomté of Alençon, inclusive of the demesnes and what had been restored by verdict, and of 100 li. of the ferm of the forest of Escouves in this year, he having been one of the accomptants of this ferm in 1180, and Bailiff of Argentan in 1195 ; on the Roll of which last year there is no return made of the Bailiwick of Alençon, save of the Tallage set ad fossata castrorum Regis facienda among the receipts of Warin de Glapion. In the Treasury were 8 li. 4s. 2d., the Nuns of Almenêches had 4 li. de elemosina statuta as in 1180, and the Lepers of Alençon 3 li. 10d. ; in the execution of justice 5s. had been disbursed, and payments had been made under the King's writ to Stephen du Perche of 360 li. and to Guérin de Friaize of 220 li., while for the carriage of the King's venison from Alençon to Verneuil the cost had been 4 li. 10s. Stephen du Perche was brother of Geoffrey comte of Perche, and was among the missing in the defeat of Adrianople, A. D. 1205, when the Emperor Baldwin was taken prisoner. Guerin de Friaize was elder brother of John de Friaize, who perished on the same occasion, and who in May 1202, after he had assumed the cross, conferred upon the abbey of St. Pére at Chartres whatever right he had in the Viaria of Mittainvilliers, concedente donum meum carissimo fratre meo Garino et plurimum approbante, illis idem concedentibus ad quorum feodum eadem vicaria spectare videbatur, viz. Roberto de Veteri Ponte, et Stephano fratre nobilissimi viri Gaufridi comitis Perticensis. In June following Stephen du Perche, knight, confirmed another grant of the same John de Friaize to the church of Notre Dame de Chartres of all the voirie the latter had in the land of the said church, volente hoc et concedente fratre suo Garino ; he, moreover, at the same time assigned for the keeping of his anniversary each year in the same church of Chartres 50s. money of Chartres, to be received out of the rent of Louvilliers after his death, and granted and approved of the institution of the anniversaries of his most dear brother Geoffrey, comte of Perche, and of the Comtesse Mathildis, wife of the same Geoffrey, and the assignment of rent for the celebration of the same, as contained in the charter of the said Comtesse. Friaize, Département of Eure et Loir, arrondissement of Nogent-le-Rotrou, was situate in La Beauce near the confines of Le Grand Perche and of the district called Le Petit Perche, or Le Perche Gouet, at no great distance from the castle of Montlondon, which Stephen du Perche held in the comté of his brother at this date ; the parish was in the deanery of Courville, of which place the family of Vieuxpont were lords, and of whom the fief of Friaize was held. Ralph Labbe had the King's meadow, park and garden, as custos of the castle of Alençon in like manner as they were held by Fulk Paynell in 1180 by reason of such custody. Of the residue of his debts in regard of the Bailiwicks of Argentan and of Alençon, Ralph Labbe rendered accompt of 716 li. 16s. and of 50 li. of the sale of the Haye d'Exmes, and of 166 li. 18s. 6d. of the residue of his Receipts from the Jews; in the Treasury were 13 li. 17s. 8d., the King's falconers and Morellus de Hodenc had 109 li., and for the falcons of the King kept at Argentan and Chambois the expense had been 93 li. 10d., leaving 916 li. 16s. 1d. still due, which remained charged upon Hugh de Gornai as of the monies which the same Ralph had advanced him by the precept of the King. This Baron, who held the fief of Ecouché in the Bailiwick of Argentan, had returned to his allegiance to King Richard after the treaty of Issoudun. In the next place Ralph Labe rendered accompt of his receipt of the amercements, proffers and fines of the Bailiwick of Alençon, and of 5 li. 6s. of the view of the forest of Escouves; then follow entries, as usual, of the separate accompts of the debtors in this Bailiwick. Among these is one in the name of Ranulph Malherbe of 445 li. 9s. 9d. which he had from Brunville, St. Amand and Parfuntru; but this sum had been remitted to Richard Malherbe, his heir, and he was quit. Durand de Alençon, one of the Bailiffs jointly with Ralph Labe in 1180, rendered accompt of the residue of the old ferm of Alençon, having now made payment of 20 li. on that score. Comte Robert of Sées owed 8 li. of the residue of the quantum of his knights, and the heir of Robert de Moire the fourth part of his rent de feodo Régis; of the quantum of the Bishop of Sées the Bailiff had received 10 li. The parson of Occagnes owed 14s. of his tythe, and Ranulph, the vicar of Orgères, 3s. for the same. Of the Loan raised in the Bailiwick of Alençon by himself and others his associates, Ralph Labbe rendered accompt of 360 li., which, save 10 li. each from four of those charged with it, had been paid into the Treasury. He also rendered accompt of 860 li. of the Tallage set by himself in his Bailiwick to maintain the men serving in the Marches; to Elyas Bernard, in the King's chamber, 805 li. had been paid under the King's writ, and Roger de Thosny had had 100 li. for a loan, being a surplus of 45 li. beyond the receipt, for which the Bailiff had credit below. His last accompt comprised the sums of 533 li. 6s. 8d. for 200 marks of silver, which he had exacted of the inhabitants of Alençon and Sées, who had not come pursuant to his precept, of 40 li. of the issue of the land of Robert de Vieux-Pont in Chailloué, of 400 li. of the Tallage set in the town of Sées, and of 300 li. of the Tallage set in the town of Alençon. His disbursements were to Geoffrey the Money-changer 400 li., of which he owed accompt, to Sawale son of Henry, and Matthew son of Enart, 160 li. for the works of the castle of La Roque, to William, brother of Comte Robert, 50 li. of the King's gift, and to Walter de Ely 500 li., of which he owed accompt; of the residue over the surplus of the preceding accompt, 100 li. remained charged upon the inhabitants of Seez, and 18 li. 6s. 8d. upon those of Alençon. William, brother of Comte Robert of Sées or Alençon, had the fief of La Roche-Mabile at this date, and entitles himself lord thereof in his charters to the abbey of La Perseigne in the Saonnnois; he died in 1203 without leaving any issue by his wife Cecilia, and was interred at Perseigne.

The ferm of the island of Guernsey (Guerneroil) was rendered accompt of by Robert de S'te Mère-eglise above-named, and its amount, with that of the rents from the escheats, had undergone no change since the return made by the same Bailiff in 1195; the annual charges were the same as in that year, but the surplus revenue had been delivered to the Comte of Mortain without any special writ. The islands of Jersey and Guernsey were, in fact, part of the appanage of Prince John, Comte of Mortain, who had in this year by his charter, dated at Tinchebrai 8th Feb. 9 Ric. I. 1198, given to the abbey of St. Nicholas of Blanchelande, and the brethren there serving God, in pure and perpetual alms, the church of St. Laurence in Insula, as it had belonged to his right and to his presentation, entirely and fully, with all its appurtenances, which Geoffrey the priest and dean had held, ita quod in predicta abbatia quamdiu vixerō memoria mei habeatur, et post decessum meum solemne et perpetuum anniversarium pro me celebretur, et ejusdem loci conventus in die obitūs mei in victualibus celebriter procuretur.^x Robert de S'te Mère-eglise held a prebend in the church of Cherbourg, which was endowed with land in the island of Guernsey, and having subsequently resigned it into the hands of King John, that monarch, 5 May 1200, bestowed it upon the same abbey of Blanchelande, save an annual payment of 8 li. money of Anjou to the vicar, serving in the church of Cherbourg on that behalf, whose presentation was to rest with the abbot as a perpetual vicarage.

^x The witnesses to this charter were John Abbot of Lonlay, Ralph Prior of Plessis, Ger-vase canonicus, Nicholas capellanus, Richard de Fontenay, Reginald de Vire, William de Enla, Hubert de Burgh, Magister Henry de Haia, and it was given under the hand of John de Gray. Vide Pl. de Quo Warranto, Lond. fo. 1818, p. 831.

sale of the Haie d'Exmes ; of this sum Ralph Labe had 50 li., of which accompt is rendered above, and under the King's writ the Accomptant had 10 li. for his livery whilst engaged in selling the said forest ; the remainder having been by him paid into the Treasury, as well as 4 li. 15s. 4d. which he had received of the pannage of the forest of Bonsmoulins, and of which there is a separate accompt.

Ralph Labe rendered accompt in this year, as in 1195, of 700 li. of the ferm of the Vicomté and Prevôté of Argentan, and of 10 li. for the mill of Gravelle ; in the Treasury the deposit was 50 li. 8s. 2d., while the remaining surplus, over and above the customary and annual charges, had been paid to the Comte of Mortain, who likewise in this year received the whole ferm of the forest of Gouffern, except the tythe and the sum of 8 li. 10s. paid into the Treasury, together with the assised rents in the Bailiwick ; nor were these payments made under the King's writ, wherefore it may be inferred that they accrued to him as parcel of his appanage. Ralph Labe rendered accompt of the proffers, fines, and amercements of the Bailiwick, and inter alia from Ralph Fitzherbert of 6 li. 13s. 6d. for the expense of the King's hounds, whom he was unwilling to lodge ; the sum received, 35 li. 8s. 2d., had been paid into the Treasury, along with the whole issue of the view of the forest of Gouffern, after payment of the wages of the viewers. Among the debtors in this Bailiwick, the heirs of William Seignore rendered accompt of 305 li. 6s. 10d. of the old ferm of the forest of Gouffern, of 2 li. 1s. of the pleas of the same forest, of 7 li. 18s. of the view of the same forest, of 10 li. because their father had not come to the Exchequer, of 5s. for breach of the royal precept, and of 26 li. 17s. 6d. de jurea ; which sums had been in course of liquidation since 1195, and the same remark applies to the accompts of Durand Le Bigre and Robert de Tornai of the residue of the sale of the forest of Gouffern, of Robert de St. Loyer of the residue of the issue of the land of Fulk d'Aunou in Flers and St. Julien-le-Faucon, and of Ralph Labe of the residue of the Loan made in the Bailiwick of Argentan by John d'Alençon.

On the back of the membrane Fulk d'Aunou rendered accompt of the residue of his fine ; at the Treasury his payment was 8 li. and he had credit for the sums received from his mainpernors by the Bailiffs of the Lieuvain and of Argentan, leaving 62 li. 19s. yet owing. The father of Fulk d'Aunou was already deceased in 1195, as in that year we have two separate entries in respect of the aide de l'ost of the barony, one in the name of Fulk d'Aunou in the Bailiwick of Falaise, and the other in the name of the heir of Fulk d'Aunou in the Bailiwick of

Auge; whereas in this fiscal year Stephen du Perche is a debtor in this Bailiwick of 32 li. of the aide de Post of the fief of Fulk d'Aunou, which had doubtless been committed to his custody in the interval. Fulk d'Aunou and Mulierdis, his wife, as also their two sons Fulk and Hugh, gave and confirmed to the abbey of St. André-en-Gouffern their land of Chaumont in the Lieuvain, and the right of pasturage upon the demesne; and both on the Roll of 1195 in the Bailiwick of Falaise and on the Roll of this year in that of Argentan, William Filoc is entered as owing 2 li. for surety on behalf of the wife of Fulk d'Aunou. By writ to the Barons of the Exchequer, 11 Oct. 1203, King John made known to them that he had remitted to Fulk d'Aunou 12 li. money of Anjou of the sums required of him at the Exchequer, and directed them to acquit him of the same; but, having no lands in England, after the conquest of Normandy he transferred his allegiance to King Philip, and in the Register of Fiefs A. D. 1220, we read Fulco de Alnou tenet baroniam suam per servicium iiii militum Domino Regi. The caput of the Barony Aunou is in the immediate vicinity of Argentan, and, as well as St. Julien in the pays d'Auge, retains the adjunct of Le Faucon. Ralph Labe also rendered accompt of the Loan raised in the Bailiwick of Argentan, of which the sum, 360 li., had been paid by him into the Treasury; and of 468 li. 5s. 4d. of the Tallage set in the same Bailiwick to maintain men-at-arms in the March. The several amounts due from the Earl of Leicester, and from the abbots of Cerisy and St. André, of the men of their fiefs, had been abated to them under the King's writ,—Geoffrey the Money-changer had had 300 li. of which he rendered accompt,—for making a dwelling in the donjon (mota) of the castle of Argentan 4 li. had been expended—to the King in his chamber 100 li. had been paid, and the accomptant owed 4 li. 15s. 4d., the residue; he also owed 50 li., as of a fief of five knights, of the fief of the Bishop of Sées in the Bailiwick of Argentan. The abbey of Cerisy in the Bessin held the fief of Marcei-sur-Baise in this district from a date anterior to the acquisition of the regal title by the Dukes of Normandy; “I Turstin Haudub,” is the recital of a charter, “in the presence of my lord, Comte William, and of all his nobles, for my own soul and the soul of my wife, or of our ancestors, award to God and St. Vigor, and his monks, of the inheritance of my wife, she, to wit, assenting, whatever I possess in Marcei and in Le Val, and in Corday, and in Florigny, and whatever in them is or may right.” Likewise Geoffrey son of Wesman, with Mathildis his wife, gave to God and St. Vigor of Cerisy that portion which they had in the church of Marcei of the inheritance of Hervey, brother of Surchaer Malherbe, father of Mathildis his wife. The entire service due from the Bishop of Sées was for six knights, and Episcopus Sagiensis vi mil. is the return made in 1172; but one of these knight's fees was without the Bailiwick of Argentan at St. Fulgent-des-Ormes and at Igé in the Bellémois. The same Ralph Labe rendered accompt of 400 li. of the Tallage set in the town of Argentan by the King's precept; in the Treasury were 300 li. and 100 li. were owing. But of the said 100 li. he again rendered accompt below; to Henry the falconer for a horse for his use, and for his livery, and for the wages of his fellows the King's falconers, from the feast of St. Michael to the feast of St. Martin of the ensuing fiscal year, i. e. from 29 Sept. to 11 Nov., 50 li. had been paid, and he owed the like sum. A list of the crown-debtors in the district closes the return of the Bailiff, none of whom had made any payment during this fiscal year, and several owed for the same sums, when the Roll of the year 1195 was made.

Ballia de Falesia per Robertum Reinnart.

The issues of the division of the ancient Comté of the Exmesin or Oximin, comprised within the limits of the Bailiwick of Falaise, were this year rendered accompt of by Robert Reinnard, a resident at Falaise, who paid an assised rent for his dwelling to the Exchequer. The sum of these rents was 15 li. 3s. 1d. showing an increase since 1195 by reason of the payment of 12d. by Norman de Condé pro platea sua and of an improved issue from the Marsh of Percy; save 6 li. for the mesuage given to Bigot by the King, the whole amount was in the Treasury. Of the Bernage of the Oximin the Bailiff rendered accompt of 13 li. 16s. 3d. in this year for 4 muids, $7\frac{1}{4}$ setiers of oats, at the rate of 5s. the setier, whereas in 1195, the mina or half-setier being reckoned at 3s. 6d., 7s. was the price of the setier; and of the amercements, proffers and fines of the Bailiwick of Falaise he rendered accompt of 84 li. 17s. 8d. as the sum of his receipts. From the abbot of St. Evroult (Sancti Arnulphi) he had 7s. in lieu of a bezant for hearing of his fine concerning the tythe of Grand-mesnil (Grente-maisnil) versus Matthew de Merlai and his brothers, as the charter between them testified, and from the Prior of Sées a like payment for hearing of the concord between him and Johanna, daughter of Roger de Carrouges, of the church of St. Sauveur and of the church of St. Margaret, as the

Chyrograph between them evidenced. The Honour of Grandmesnil belonged at this period to Robert Earl of Leicester, son of Robert Earl and of Petronilla Countess of Leicester, who, in a charter made by him in favour of the abbey of St. Evroult, thus mentions the tythe here noticed; he grants ecclesiam de Grentemaisnil . . . et cum tota decima, quam Willielmus de Merlayo, concedentibus omnibus filiis suis, sancto Ebruffo per concordiam reddidit. In a list of the Feoda de Grentemenil of the time of Philip Augustus, De Matheo de Melleo i. feodum is the reading as printed; but in the Register of 1220 we find under the title de Grantemont as follows, Matheus de Merlaio dimidium feodum apud Grantemesen. et apud Noereum, and again in the list of those who held of the Escheats, Matheus de Merlai tenet apud Barou de escaeta Johannis de Erleia quartam partem feodi, de quo auxilium vadit apud Grante-mesnil. In 1203 the tenant holding of John de Erleia or Erlée (Early com. Berks) was Ralph de Merlay, as appears from a writ of King John, dated 26 July, addressed to the Bailiff of Falaise, commanding him to sue the said Ralph for a debt of 50 li. money of Anjou, which he owed pro terra quadam de Baro, and to send 25 li. thereof to “Us for our use,” and to cause John de Erlée to have the other 25 li. In the Bull of Pope Innocent III. for the Chapter of Sées, dated 25 May 1199, he enumerates as parcel of its endowment in pago Holmensi the church of St. Sauveur, the hermitage of Mont-thoard, the church of S^{te} Marguerite, together with the chapel of St. Jacques of Carrouges (Quarroq), with all their appurtenances; and in the Chartulary of the abbey of Longues are copies of two charters of Joan, Lady of Carrouges, to the monks of S^{te} Marie de la Chainé (Cathena), a cell to Longues in the vicinity of Carrouges, one dated in 1204 giving the church of St. Martin des Landes for the soul of Richard de Vilers her husband, and the other in 1216 giving the church of St. Hilaire du Menil Scelleur. This last grant Ralph Sanson her second husband confirmed, and it was ratified in 1217 by Silvester Bishop of Sées. Richard de Vilers was one of those who joined with Comte Robert of Sées in his defection from King John, after the death of Prince Arthur; whereupon a writ was directed to the Bailiff of Falaise to give Richard de Harcourt seisin of ten librates of land of the fief of Robert de Harcourt at Potigny, which had belonged to Richard de Vilers, and which land the King had committed to his custody. Of the Loan made in the Bailiwick of Falaise Robert Reinnard rendered accompt of 1840 li., which sum had been thus distributed; in the Treasury were 20 li. 15s. 8d.—to the King in his Privy-chamber 649 li. 13s. 4d., and in the cost of the carriage of the said money to the King 10 li. 11s.—again to the King in his chamber 200 li.—to Richard de Gisnei 12 li. of the King's gift—again to the King in his chamber 293 li.—to Walter Luiz and his fellows, milites and servientes, for their wages at Tillières 120 li., and there were owing 34 li. The Bailiff next rendered accompt of 1610 li. of the residue of the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of Falaise to maintain the men-at-arms in the March, and of 650 li. of the Tallage set in the town of Falaise by the King's precept, and of 300 li. of the Tallage set in like manner in the vill of St. Pierre-sur-Dive by the King's precept, and of 100 li. of the Tallage set in like manner in the vill of Trun. To the King in his chamber payment had been first made of 880 li., and afterward of 1743 li.—to the Earl of Leicester of the men of his fief 137 li. 19s. had been remitted, and to Hugh de Gornai of the men of his fief 56 li.; so that the accompt was overbalanced by 156 li. 19s., which were reckoned to Robert Reinnard below, in his accompt of the monies levied upon those who were bound to send mounted men-at-arms to the host and had not sent them. But the receipts on this score were only 120 li., wherefore, in the following accompt of 1100 li. of the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of Falaise by the King's precept, the Bailiff had credit for the surplus, 36 li. 19s.; the remainder, save 4 li. for the execution of justice, and 51 li. 14s. expended in repairing the dwellings of the castle of Falaise, had been deposited in the Treasury. He also rendered accompt of 408 li. of his receipt from Tallages kept back, and from the amercements of those who withheld them, and of 20 li. of the fine of the wife of Geoffrey Poupart for having the debts and chattels of her husband, and of 15 li. of the chattels of William Gaipri dead in the practice of usury; of which sums the amount was in the Treasury and he was quit. At St. Pierre-sur-Dive Lescelina Comtesse of Eu, after the death of her husband Comte William, converted their dwelling into a church in hoc ipso prædio quod dotali jure cum appendiciis suis ad eam pertinebat; which site was eventually bestowed by her on Ainar-dus, a monk of La S'te Trinité du Mont-de-Rouen, to found a monastery, and he was ordained its abbot in 1046. After the defeat and captivity of Duke Robert Courte-heuze, King Henry I. made this a royal abbey, and by his charter, given at Argentan A.D. 1108 under his signature, and those of William Archbishop of Rouen, Serlo Bishop of Sées, Robert de Courcy and Fulk de Aunou, he made known to all his liege-men that it was liberrima ab omni subjectione sicut proprium dominium meum, and therefore granted and confirmed to the same whatever Lescilina, wife of Comte William, and his own ancestors, had given toward its construction, viz. the burgus and villa, which is said to be at St. Pierre-sur-Dive, with all its appendages and revenues, and the whole centenarius, which is adjacent to the same vill, and whatever is contained within that centenarius, to wit, from the river Dive to another river called the Vie (Vicia), in churches, in tythes, in wood and plain, in mills and meadows, in men, their rents and services, and in some other things. The only placita, of which the final adjudication was reserved, were those de expeditione sua, i. e. of attendance on the host, and, if wager of battle should arise, the plea de moneta, i. e. of Fouage; which indeed should be adjudged in the court of the Abbot, but terminated apud arcam monetæ, i. e. at the Treasury. The abbot and monks were likewise to have warren throughout the whole centenarius and per omnia confinia centenarii. It is curious to find in the time of Henry I. this trace of the ancient subdivision of the Comté of the Oximin into Hundreds, which dates back from the Merovingian period; for to the abbot of Fontenelle a certain noble-man named Bertus gave a certain portion of the vill Digmaniacum, which was situate in pago Osismensi, in centena Alancionensi, and that property which is called Wanda, in centena Saginsi, and this grant was made in the eleventh year of King Theodoric, father of Hilderic, at length last King of the race of the Merovingians. We also collect proof from this charter that the comté of the Oximin extended to the river Vicia; and hence the portion of the pays d'Auge between it and the Dive is found comprised in the Bailiwick of Falaise, though a considerable portion of this tract was of the Diocese of Lisieux, of which the river Oudon was the boundary from its source to its confluence with the Dive, and at the same time the limit of the Deanery of Mesnil-Mauger in the Archdeaconry of Auge. Beyond was the Deanery of Vimoutier in the Archdeaconry of Gacé, bounded by the river Vie in its early course till it reached the parish of Guerquesalle, after which the limit of the Diocese was a line drawn from that river to meet the point of departure at the source of the river Oudon. In the space so enclosed between the river Vie and this boundary was situate the fief of Montgommery, in the pays d'Auge, from which Roger, son of Roger the Great, Vicomte of Exmes, had his local surname; and beyond on the banks of the Dive in the same pays, but in the diocese of Sées, was situate the bourg of Trun, also parcel of his Honour. William of Juniéges, in describing the events which followed the death of Duke Robert during the minority of his heir, Duke William, relates how Osbern, chief steward of the Household, son of Herfast, brother of the Comtesse Gunnoris, was murdered in his bed by William, son of Roger de Montgomery, whilst sleeping with the Duke in his chamber at Vaudreuil, and adds Rogerus enim pro perfidia sua tunc exulabat apud Parisios et quinque filii ejus Hugo et Robertus, Rogerius et Willelmus atque Gislebertus in Normannia summopere inserviebant diris facinoribus. Of these five sons two, William and Hugh, perished by violence; Roger succeeded to the possessions of his father in Normandy, and in 1050 ejected from Troarn the twelve canons whom his father Roger had established there, and converted it into a monastery under the rule of Gislebert, abbot of Conches: of the two remaining nothing is known. A charter of King William, of the year of the Incarnation 1068, secunda vero ex quo in Regem inunctus est et coronatus, enumerates among the possessions of St. Martin of Troarn, which Comte Roger willed to be specified in writing, and to be presented to be ratified by the royal signature on the day of the feast of All Saints, when he was about to cross the sea with the King, ecclesias etiam de Trun S'ci Petri et S'ci Germani et Vulfranni cum terra presbiteri et decimam molendini et thelonei et nutrimenti. Ecclesiam vero de Croceio cum tota decima terre et molendini et nutrimenti et decimam totius redditionis de Gulferno; et de Montgomerio decimam thelonei et molendini. In another deed belonging to this monastery, which commences thus, Ego Rogerius ex Normannis Normanus, magni autem Rogerii filius, made shortly subsequent to the death of his wife Mabilia, who was assassinated 2 Dec. 1082, we have this recital of the gifts made by the founder at Trun and Montgommery, decimam quoque de teloneis meis, nominatim viz. de Montgomerio, et decimam de molendinis ejus et de pecudibus, si fuerint, et fructu earum. Et de Trun decimam telonei et molendini et ecclesias ipsius et terram presbiteri sicut ego tenui. Et ecclesias de Croceio ex integro, cum terra quam Osbernus tenuit in S'co Germano, et quam tenuit Radulphus in servitio S'ci Hylarii, et decimam molendini, sed et decimam de nutrimento meo et fructu ejus, quod erat in Vitreyo; decimam etiam de foresta Gulfert in denariis, qui consuetudinaliter inde exeunt. In the next place Roger de Montgomery, the liege-man of his lord, William, King of the English, Prince of the Normans and of the Mançeaux, for the love of God and of his said lord, and for the salvation of his own soul, delivered up to the monastery, which had been constructed by his lord in the bourg of Caen in honour of St. Stephen, the bourg of Trun, together with the forest of Auge, and together with the lands and wastes and all belonging to the said bourg, except the mills and the lands and the tythes which he had already granted to other churches, with this reservation, viz. that as long as he or his said Lord, or his wife, should live, he was to be entitled, if he chose, to keep the said bourg in his demesne, but, after his death, or that of his Lord, or of his wife, the bourg to fall into possession and to become the right of the said monastery, so as it might be free to the abbots and monks there serving God canonically to dispose thereof, to give, to hold, and to do whatever they should deem for its advantage, regularly and as suzerains. Further, as a token in this behalf for the future, and to remove all doubt, he then and there gave the house of Aiulf Guirellus, with all the customs of the said house belonging to him, as well from native as from foreign merchants buying or selling any thing in it, or contracting for any thing, whence profit was customarily derived. This gift his said Lord confirmed by his authority, and in memory of the said donation he gave his consent for the road, which had its line without the bourg, to pass through the bourg. Witnesses, Henry son of Roger de Beaumont, Haimo, Gislebert Haretel, and many others. Afterward the same Roger, at the dedication of the church of blessed Stephen (A. D. 1077), delivered upon the altar this grant, King William and his son Robert giving their consent. Witnesses, Lanfranc Archbishop of Canterbury, Odo Bishop of Bayeux, Roger de Beaumont, and many others who were present at the dedication. The deed recording the above acts is signed with crosses, superscribed, "Signum Willelmi Regis Anglorum. S. Mathildis Regine. S. Roberti Comitis. S. Willelmi Comitis. S. Rogerii Comitis de Montegomerico. S. Hugonis Comitis. S. Aucensis Comitis. S. Enrici de Bellomonte." Below on the same instrument are three other crosses, and these names written over, Robertus de Belesme, Willelmus Paganellus, Guiferius de Vilereit; and this memorandum, homines Roberti de Belesme qui cum eo firmaverunt. Testes qui huic firmationi interfuere Robertus comes de Moritolio, Bernardus de Novo-mercato, Hubertus de Portu, Radulfus Suhardus, et alii plures. Roger de Montgomery died in 1094, and was succeeded in his Norman possessions by his eldest son, Robert de Belême, whose confirmation is here appended on the original instrument; his other sons were Hugh, Roger, Philip, and Arnulf, by Mabilia his first wife, and Ebrard by Adelaidis. Of these Philip apparently left issue, whose descendants retained the local surname, for in the receipt of the Bailiff of Falaise in this year were two sums of 10s. each from Hugh de Montgommery pro concordia duelli and pro disseisina. Matildis, daughter of Philip, succeeded her aunt Emma as Abbess of Alme-nêches in 1113; and, although alone upon record, she was probably not the only child. The bourg of Trun having been thus conferred upon an abbey of royal foundation, it was subject to Tallage by precept of the King in like manner as the bourg of St. Leonard in the Avranchin, also the property of St. Etienne de Caen, the amount of the Tallage being the same in both. Among the debtors to the crown in this Bailiwick, who newly accounted after the close of the fiscal year at Michaelmas 1195, were William de Cesny (de Chierneio) of 20 li. 15s. 8d. of the residue of his old accompt of the Vicomté of the Oximin of the fourth year past, i. e. 1195, and who likewise owed 27 li. of the residue of the same Vicomté of the third year past,—William de Montbray (Monbrai) of 36 li. of the residue of the aide de l'ost of five knights fees pro servicio Regis non facto—the Abbot of Tréport of 20 li. of his tythes of Bazoches-au-Houlme—the Abbot of St. Pierre-sur-Dive of 267 li. 13s. 4d. for breach of the royal precept—Richard Le Veneur of 13 li. of the residue of the old ferm of the Vicomté of Le Houlme—Robert de Courcy of 45 li. of the residue of the Vicomté of the Oximin, and the Bailiff, Robert Reinnard, of two sums of 4 li. and 8 li. of the chattels of a thief and an usurer. In the Roll of Knight-service in 1172 we find Nigellus de Mombrai servicium v militum de honore de Montbrai et castro Gonteri, et ad suum servicium xi milites, quartam partem et septimam militis. Château-Gontier was built in 1093 by Robert de Bellême upon the bank of the river Orne at La Courbe, per quod Holmetiam regionem (le pays du Houlme) sibi, licet injuste, penitus subjugare putavit; this usurpation of the site was but temporary, and in the reign of Henry II. its two fiefs were, it seems, united with the Honour of Montbray, which had considerable extension in the Bailiwick of Falaise, for in this district in 1220 the service for 10½ fees was due of the tenants, and only for half a fee in the Bailiwick of the castle of Vire. The Honour of Montbray was then in the King's hands, having escheated from the time of the Conquest of Normandy; but Dominus Engerrand de Hommet held in frank-marriage on the part of a sister of William de Montbrai two fiefs at Ecouché. Among the debtors who rendered no accompt residing in this Bailiwick, Matthew Cornet owed 39 li. 13s. of the residue of the old ferm of the Exmes—Amaury de Tournebu 14 li. 2s. 8d. of the issue of his land of the fourth year past—Robert de Gouviz of 116 li. 15s. 8d. of the residue of his debts—Robert Marmion of 13 li. 8s. 4d. of the residue of the Bernage of the Oximin, and 4 li. 13s. of the same Bernage of old, and of 37 li. 10s. as mainpernor of Richard d'Argences, and 100 li. as mainpernor of the Constable, and 13 li. 9s. of the residue of the ferm of the Vicomté of the Oximin, and 334 li. 8s. of the balance of his accompt of his Receipts, and Fulk de Vieuxpont 40s. of the residue of the money which the Seneschal had lent him, and 16 li. of the residue of the fiefs of his knights. The caput of the Honour of Robert Marmion in Normandy was the castle of Fontenay in the Bailiwick of the Oximin or Hyémois near the river Laize, and he had likewise large possessions in the pays de Cinglais, together with a fief in the Bessin held of the see of Bayeux. Before the conquest of England, in the time of Hugh Bishop of Bayeux, Ralph Tesson gave twelve acres in pago Baiocensi, adjoining the river Orne, and opposite the west front of the abbey, to the monks of Fontenay, which land he had exchanged with William Marmion; and in the same pays in the year in which Henry, King of the English, reduced Normandy under his subjection, Hadeguisa, the wife of Robert Marmion, upon being made a nun in the church of the Holy Trinity of Caen, gave to that church, and to the sisterhood, the land which she had in St. Georges and in Jurques, and the mill of La Hoiste and the Parket in its entirety, as Robert Marmion had held it on the day that he was alive and dead, by the concession of her sons, namely, Roger Marmion and Helto and Manasses, who, at the same time, together with their mother, placed the gift upon the altar. On her behalf were witnesses of this gift William Marmion, Herluin de Fonteney, Roger de May, Godfrey Fitz-Robert, William d'Ouffieres, Robert Aguilon, Hamo Fitz-Robert of Mesnil-Ursin, Robert son of Robert Fitz-Erneis, and Gersenda his mother, whilst on behalf of the Holy Trinity the witnesses were Gislebert de l'Aigle, William d'Apres, Richard de Gray, and others. Gersenda named above was the daughter of Robert Marmion, and with her husband affixed her signature to a charter in favour of the abbey of Fontenay in the time of William the Conqueror. In Domesday Book the surname "Marmion" does not occur, and we first meet with it in England in a List of Tenants of lands in the county of Lincoln of the time of Henry I. compiled between the years 1106 and 1120. At that date Robert Marmion was tenant of two carucates in Wintringham, held of the fief of Walter de Gant, whilst in the same list Roger Marmion is put down as holding in capite one carucate in Wintringham and one carucate and six bovates in Willingham. Also Picot held certain land of him in Foulstow; between Langton, Butyate and Gautby were two bovates, and in Tathwell Turolde de Bolebec, his mesne-tenant, had one carucate. Again, between Scrivelsby, Thornton, Roughton, Dalderby, Coningsby and Holtham, there were 17 carucates and two bovates, whereof Roger himself held in demesne 11 caru-

cates and six bovates, and Ulviet, Turoid and Alsie were his tenants of the remainder. Except of the lands in Willingham and Wintringham, parcel of the fief of Gant, this tenancy, at the time of the survey in the reign of William the Conqueror, had been that of Robert Le Despenser, whose holdings at Barston, and other places in the county of Warwick, were also subsequently those of the family of Marmion. Moreover, that the Honour and castle of Tamworth in the last-named county, of which there is no survey in Domesday, in like manner were in the holding first of Robert Le Despenser and afterwards of Roger Marmion, is evidenced by the charters adduced below. To Herbert, third abbot of Fontenay, Roger Marmion gave the adjacent church of May-sur-Orne, and of his gift the abbey of St. Mary of Grestain had the tythe of all his demesne at Berewic in the county of Sussex. He was deceased 31 Hen. I. 1131, in which year Robert Marmion was an accomptant on the Great Roll of the Exchequer sub. tit. "Lincoliescira" for the relief of his father; and in the same shire Roger de Lascellis rendered accompt of 5 li. not to plead concerning his land until Robert Marmion were a knight, thus affording proof of his being then barely of age. Toward the close of his reign, Henry I., being at Cannock, issued a writ, addressed to the Earl of Warwick and to his sheriff and barons of Warwickshire, setting forth his concession to Robert Marmion to have warren in all his land of Warwickshire in wood and plain, as his father had, and especially at Tamworth.⁷ After the death of Henry I. at the time when Waleran Comte of Meulan had the chief direction of affairs in Normandy on the part of King Stephen, Robert Marmion, he being a vassal of the Comte, had the custody of the castle of Falaise, and successfully held it against Geoffrey Comte of Anjou, who in revenge besieged and afterward destroyed the castle of Fontenay in the Oximin, a place of the greatest strength, both by art and nature, of which Marmion was Lord. This defence of Falaise was in 1139; but in the following year it was surrendered by the Comte of Meulan to the Angevins. Subsequent to that date we find him in England, still the partizan of King Stephen, and we are thus told by the chroniclers the circumstances of his death in 1143: "Robert Marmion, a warlike man, who had expelled the monks of Coventry from their monastery and had made a castle of the church, whilst contending with his foes, was alone among his troops slain in front of the said monastery, and had eternal death for his lot as being excommunicated." Yet was he a benefactor to religious houses in his lifetime, and with Milisendis his wife restorer of the nunnery at Polesworth, which had flourished under St. Edith and her successors before the conquest; thither he transferred Osanna, the prioress of St. Leonard at Oldbury, and constituted her first abbess. Shortly after his accession King Stephen, for the soul of King Henry, his uncle, and for the redemption of his own soul, and of Mathildis the Queen, his wife, and of his boys, confirmed to God and the church of St. Edith of Polesworth, and the nuns there serving God, that gift which Robert Marmiun had made and given to them, and the gifts of others made or to be made, as well in churches as in lands and all other possessions; witnesses, Matildis the Queen and Eustace son of the King, and William de Hosa, and Robert de Ver, and Henry de Essex, at St. Alban's.* This gift of Robert Marmion and Milicent his wife to the nuns of Polesworth, comprised the church of St. Edith with its appurtenances, the whole vill of Polesworth, and the whole of their demesne in Waverton, as also the church of Queinton, com. Glouc. To the abbey of Bardney, com. Linc., founded by Walter de Gant, Robert Marmion, with Milisent his wife and Robert his son, gave the vill near it called Butegate, upon condition of a monk being received into the church of St. Oswald to serve God for the souls of his father and mother, and of his wife, and for his own soul, and the souls of his heirs, in the presence of Odo the Chaplain, Robert de Fontenay, Roger de May, Odo the clerk, and Robert de Falaise, from whose names it is apparent that this charter was made in Normandy. Robert Marmion was also the reputed founder of the college in the church, also dedicated to St. Edith, in the bourg of Tamworth. In Normandy Robert Marmion had intended to found an abbey of the order of Savigny, and had set apart with this view all the lands excepto feodo militum which he had at Barbery, designing to add other possessions to these, if divine providence should permit him to live the longer. The war consequent upon the decease of Henry I. and eventually his premature demise will have prevented the accomplishment of what he had proposed ; certain it is that for many years, and until 1176, Barbery was simply a grange of Savigny, though reckoning as a daughter-abbey in the list of her progeny. The Empress Matildis, about the year 1141, by Letters Patent bearing date at Oxford, did give and restore to William de Beauchamp the castle and honour of Tamworth, to hold as freely as Robert Le Despenser, brother of Urso d'Abetot, enjoyed the same, and all the lands and inheritances of his next ancestors, which had been in arms against her, and that could not make fine with her for the same, unless some of their nearest kindred had served in war on her part. But after the pacification in 1153 King Stephen, by his charter dated at Southwell, restored and granted to Robert Marmion all the land of Roger his grandfather, and of Robert Marmion his father, of whomsoever they held the same, with all immunities, and as the charter of King Henry testified for him on this score. In 1167 the fief of Robert Marmion in England was certified at eleven knights, a fourth and a fifth part of a knight of the old feoffment, and at five knights and a fourth part of a knight of the new feoffment ;^a at the same date of old feoffment he held six fees under Comte Symon, who

^a Among those who held of the new feoffment was Galfridus Marmion feodum i militie. He was younger son of Roger Marmion, uncle of Robert, who enfeoffed him of the manor of Arrow, com. Warw. ; in consideration whereof the same Geoffrey released unto him all his right that he had in the fief of Manasses Marmion, as well in England as in Wales, according to the tenor of the charter of King Henry II. ; his heir was his daughter Albreda, married to William Camville, of Clifton, com. Derb. Another Geoffrey Marmion, living 18 Joh. 1218, and in possession of lands in Checkendon and Stokes, com. Oxon., was, it is presumed, son of William, younger son of Robert Marmion and Milicent ; which William was chosen in Michaelmas term 1 Joh. 1199, one of the twelve knights on a grand assize between Nicholas de Brudicote tenant, and Andrew de Hertemere claimant, for three virgates of land in Stokes aforesaid, fixed for the quindenes of St. Hillary next following. Also in the same term the Abbot of Thame claimed against William Marmion 40 acres in Bensinton, com. Oxon., as those which King Henry, father of the Lord the King, had given to the monks of Thame in pure and perpetual alms, and King Richard had afterward confirmed to them ; whereupon William came and called to the warranty thereof Robert Marmion. The latter made default, and his land in Checkendon was consequently seized into the King's hand, which he petitioned to replevy on the eve of the Ascension of our Lord, 17 May, 1200. In 56 Hen. III. 1272, Adam de Stratton, custos of the land and heir of William Marmion, recovered against the Prior of Coventry the advowson of the church of Checkindon, the latter claiming by virtue of a fine between Geoffrey the then Prior of Coventry and Geoffrey Marmion, grandfather of the heir, and also under a grant of Robert Marmion to the church of Coventry of this advowson by charter. In the Testa de Nevill, among the fiefs in com. Oxon., which William de Cantelupe then had in ward, was a knight's fee in Checkindon, held by Geoffrey Marmion of the Honour of Tamworth, and a fifth part of a fief held by Jordan de Bideford of the same Honour in the said vill.

then held the barony of Gant, two under the see of Worcester, and one under the Earl of Warwick. In Normandy in 1172 Robert Marmion was one of the defaulters who made no return of their fiefs; and it seems that his tenancy in capite of the Duchy was only a quarter of a knight's fee, subinfeudated to be held of him as an entire fief; but as mesne-tenant he owed the service of four knights at Beaumont-le-Roger, the caput of the Honour of the Comtes of Meulan in Normandy. Under the rule of Joscelin, abbot of Savigny, in the year 1178, a convent was at length sent to Barbery, of which Ralph was made abbot, and to him, by bull dated 28 Jan. 1177-8, Alexander III. confirmed the site in which the monastery was constructed with all its appurtenances, and of the gift of Robert Marmion and by the concession of his son Robert, the site of Barbery, which had been hitherto a grange of Savigny, with all its appurtenances. In his charter of endowment Robert Marmion recapitulates the project of his father to found an abbey, with its subsequent suspension, and sets forth his purpose to bring the work to completion, as his son and heir; he, therefore, gives in perpetual alms, free, quit and exempt from all service, for the redemption of his soul, and of those of his father and mother, and of his wife, and of his children, and of all his ancestors and successors, to God and Blessed Mary, and to the abbot and convent of monks of the abbey of Barbery, all the land which his father had given to God in Barbery. For a site to build the abbey upon, he mentions as of his gift the land lying between the Little Wood and Barbery and La Haie, which land was in the parish of Bretteville, viz. the land of John de Fontenay, for which he had made his sister a nun at Polesworth, late in the tenure of Ralph Hericé as to part, and the land of John d'Asnières, for which he had given him a bordagium in Bretteville, that Ralph Savières had held, and the land of William Tosar, for which he had given him 50s. money of Anjou. He also granted franchise and exemption utterly in all things to the monks and lay-brethren of the same abbey in all his land of Normandy and of England. Robert, his son, and his wife, and his daughters, and his knights and liege-men, also conceded the endowment, no claim being interposed in any shape; and it was appointed that he and his wife, and his heirs, should have burial in the cemetery of the monastery.^b The charter of Robert Marmion is dated in the month of October 1181; and at Rouen

^b The editors of the Gallia Xtiana (vol. xi. col. 458) tell us that Robert Marmion the first founder, slain in 1143, was buried medius in Anglia, medius in capitulo Barberii, subtus stallum abbatis; if so, the other half of the body was at Polesworth.

in the same year Robert, comte of Meulan, ratified the above, adding permission for such as held of his fiefs to make valid gifts of rents and lands to the said abbey, but with a saving of the service which Robert Marmion owed him of the fief held of him. A charter confirming the foundation was also obtained from King Henry II. dated at Rouen, being witnesses Seffridus of Chichester and Ralph of Lisieux, bishops, Richard Brito, clerk, William clerk of the Privy-chamber, Earl William de Manneville, Robert comte of Meulan, Rannulph de Glanville, William Fitz-Ralph Seneschal of Normandy, Hugh de Creissi, Walchelin de Ferrières, Hugh de Gurnai, Roger de Mortemer, William de la Mare, Richard Selvein. A monastery will, indeed, have been constructed at this period on the site chosen, but the building of the church of the abbey was not yet begun in the following reign, or even later, as the same was not dedicated till the year 1247. After the separation of Normandy from England Robert Marmion, for the health of his soul and of Philippa his wife. and of all his ancestors and successors, and for absolution of his pilgrimage to Jerusalem, gave to B. Mary of Barbery and the monks there serving God, to build and construct their church, 500 li. money of Anjou; and he gave besides for the same absolution all his lands of Checkendon and Stoke, saving the service of his tenants and a render of 2 lbs. of wax to the monks of Thame. This gift he made to them in exchange of 10 li. sterling annual rent, which he had assigned to them in his manor of Berwic to find them in clothing each year; and was done with the consent of William Marmion, clerk, his son, to whom he had before given the same lands.^c The first wife of Robert Marmion, yet living in 1181, was named Matildis, daughter of William de Beauchamp, of whom mention has been made above as the grantee of the Castle and Honour of Tamworth, and sister of William de Beauchamp, Lord of Elmley, com. Worc. By her he had issue an only son, Robert, and two or more daughters, one of whom, Mabilia, was wife of Hugh de Say of Richard's-Castle, com. Heref., and another of William de Lizures. By his second wife, Philippa, he had two sons, Robert and William, the latter in holy orders. Among the muniments of the abbey of Fontenay were two charters of Robert Marmion confirmatory of the grant of the church of May-sur-Orne made to Herbert, third abbot, by Roger Marmion, his grandfather, and one other of Robert Marmion, eldest born son and heir of Robert Marmion, ratifying the gift of a site in the territory of Fresney-le-Puceux by Richard de Toschet. Robert Marmion junior also made known by his charter that at the prayer of William, then a boy, he had become his bondsman, that when the said boy should arrive at age, he shall confirm to God and the abbey of Barbery the alms and gifts which had been made to them belonging to his fief and domain; his seal, attached to this deed, has the impress of an armed knight on horseback, with the legend Sigillum Roberti Marmion, and on the reverse the figure of an angel with Secretum Roberti. To distinguish himself from his half-brother of the same name his maternal descent is at times set forth in his charters; Robert Marmion, son of Robert Marmion and of his wife Matildis de Bellocampo, at the request of the abbot and convent of Fontenay, gave leave to the knights and liege-men of his fief to give and sell to them of their tenements, so that sufficient remained in the hand of the grantors to answer the service due to him and his heirs; and again Robert Marmion, nephew of William de Beauchamp, confirmed by his charter an exchange made between the abbot and convent of Barbery and Robert d'Ouffières of certain land for tythe at Fontenay-le-Marmion. To Robert, son of Robert Marmyon, King John, 16 July 1200, confirmed the grant which Robert Marmyon his father and Robert Marmyon his brother, had made to him of the land of Winttingham with all its appurtenances, as their charters testified. Robert Marmion, the elder, the same whose debt is entered on this roll, survived through the reign of King John, dying 2 Hen. III. 1218, when he had numbered more than fourscore years. He was, it seems, at the time of his death, resident at Scrivelsby, for a writ issued to the Sheriff of Lincolnshire, dated 11 May in that year, by which he was enjoined et defendere. Quod ut ratum et inconcussum teneatur in perpetuum presentis scripti testimonio et sigilli mei appositione confirmavi. (Ex originali.)

to cause the Escheators of the county to have all the land which had belonged to Robert Marmiun, senior, who had died in his Bailiwick, to keep for the King's use, and to restore to them without delay whatever he had taken since the decease of the said Robert.^d On the 15th of the same month Robert Marmiun, junior, made a fine with the Lord the King for 500 li., for having the custody of the castle of Tamworth and of the lands which had been those of Robert his father, of which he was seised on the day he died, until the lands of the English and Normans should be common to both, so that the English have their land in Normandy and the Normans their lands in England; and if, perchance, before the said lands should be common in the manner abovesaid, Robert his elder brother should come to the King's peace, so as he were to recover the lands in England of which his father died seised, then the said Robert senior to render back to the said Robert junior as much as he shall have paid of the said fine to the King before the recovery of the said land, the issues of the said lands, which Robert junior shall have previously taken, being reckoned to the said Robert senior in the said fine; and the said Robert to pay the residue of the fine to the King, and through such fine to recover his land. In case of the death of the said Robert junior before the said Robert senior shall have made peace with the King, William, brother of the said Robert junior, to hold the said lands through the said fine in like form. Moreover, if the said Robert senior should recover his lands in England, then their lands of which they had seisin before the said Robert their father died, shall remain to the said Robert junior and William his brother, viz. to Robert junior the vills of Winteringham and Coningsby, com. Linc., the vill of Quainton, com. Glouc., and the vill of Berewic, com. Sussex, and to the said William the vill of Thornton, com. Linc.,^e and ten librates of land in the said vill of Berewic, of which they have the charters of Robert their father. However, after a lapse

^d Robert Marmion was apparently interred at Polesworth, the abbey of his father's foundation in Warwickshire, inasmuch as Rannulph Earl of Chester gave for the redemption of his soul, and of the souls of his ancestors and successors, and of the soul of Robert Marmion, the elder, to the nuns of Polesworth ten marks per annum out of his revenues in Coventry.

^e In the year 1222 William Marmiun, clerk, went away to the King of France without the King's licence, when an extent of his land of Thornton was directed to be made by the sheriff of Lincolnshire, by writ dated 8 Apr. 6 Hen. III.; which being done, this officer was to commit it to Ranulph Earl of Chester and Lincoln. In 1238 William Marmion, clerk, son of Robert Marmion, son of the founder of Barbery, gave to that abbey divers parcels of land for the souls of his father and mother, and his brother Robert Marmion, junior; his seal attached to the deed has the impress of an angel, erect and holding a censor, with the legend, "S' Willelmi Marmiun clerici."

of nearly two years, Robert Marmion, the first-born son, came over from Normandy, and King Henry III., having received his homage, by writs dated 20 Nov. 1220, forthwith directed the Sheriffs of Warwickshire and Lincolnshire to give him seisin of all the lands of the inheritance of his father in their bailiwicks, except what was included in the convention made between the said Robert and Robert Marmion junior, his brother, before the Barons of the Exchequer. Philippa, relict of Robert Marmion the father, in the same year arraigned an assize of novel disseisin versus Robert Marmion senior, son and heir of the said Robert, in regard of the tenement in Tamworth cum Middleton, and in Scrivelsby, of which Robert Marmion had died seised, in name of dower; but, by writs dated 6 Jan. 5 Hen. III. 1221, process was stayed by reason that the Bishop of Winchester, to whose custody Robert Marmion had committed the aforesaid lands, had promised to satisfy her reasonable claim, to which end Robert Marmion junior was commanded to come to the King's court, and to bring his mother with him to receive her dower from the said Bishop. In 17 Hen. III. 1233, he passed over the estate of all his lands in England for seven years to the same Bishop of Winchester, together with the guardianship of Philip his son and heir, to marry where he should think fit without disparagement; which wardship, 24 Hen. III. 1240, was assigned by the Bishop to William de Cantilupe, with the consent of the said Robert and Philip. In this manner Robert Marmion contrived to retain the suzeraineté of the fief of Marmion in England, whilst for the most part resident at Fontenay in Normandy, as a subject of the King of France. His wife was Juliana de Vassy, with whose consent, in 1226, he confirmed to the abbey of Aunay two gerbs of the tythe of Vassy, which Philip de Vassy her father had formerly given; and in 1236 he, likewise with her consent, exempted the monks of that house from customs and toll in his demesnes of Bretteville-sur-Laize and Vassy. Of several charters of Robert Marmion knight, Lord of Fontenay, to the abbey of Barberie, yet in the archives at Caen, one dated A. D. 1241 is the last in point of time, and he was certainly deceased in 1243; for in that year his sons Philip and Roger were the only parties in a suit with the church of St. Sepulchre at Caen, to which he had formerly confirmed certain grants made of tenements in his fief of Fresnay-le-Puceux. Matthew Paris, sub anno 1241, notes the death of Robert Marmion at that time, and by Dugdale and others he is supposed to indicate the elder brother; but I apprehend that Robert Marmion junior, he being resident in England, was in fact the baron deceased to whom the historian alludes. By writ, dated 23 Oct. 1242, the Sheriff of Yorkshire was directed to obtain security for payment of five marks from Avicia, who had been the wife of Robert Marmiun, given to the King by her for a certain breve ad terminum; and in a list of fiefs held of the Honour of Gilbert de Gant, 27 Hen. III. 1242, William, son of Robert Marmion, is named as the tenant of three knight's fees in Wintringham. Avicia was daughter and heir of Gernagan, son of Hugh Fitz-Gernagan, Lord of Tanfield in the Honour of Richmond, and for license to marry her Robert Marmion gave to King John, in the sixteenth year of his reign, 300 marks and five palfreys, he having at that time in his custody the land, with the said heir of Hugh Gernagan, and which the King had been enabled to commit to him by reason of the Honour of Richmond being then in his hands. Subsequently, by writ dated at Runnimeade 22 Jan. 1215, Robert Marmion was commanded, if so it were that the land of Hunmanby were of the fief of Gilbert de Gant and not of the said Honour, then to cause the said Gilbert to have seisin of the aforesaid land tanquam de custodia ad eum pertinente, and a similar writ was sent to him in respect of half a knight's fee in Tanfield in favour of Eustace de Vescy, if so it were of his fief; nor was his fine yet acquitted, 8 Hen. III. 1224, in which year, at Bedford, on the 29th of July, Robert Marmion paid in at the King's wardrobe to the clerks 10 li. toward its discharge. William Marmion, son and heir of Robert Marmion, was under age at the death of his father in 1241, and during the ten years next following; he subsequently made himself conspicuous as an adherent of Simon de Montfort, fought on his side at the battle of Lewes, 14 May, 48 Hen. III. 1264, and had summons to Parliament 24 Dec. in that year with the other barons of the party. Roesia de Dover, the wife first of Richard, natural son of King John, surnamed de Chilham, and secondly of William de Wilton, gave to William Marmyon and Lora his wife, and to their heirs, the manor of Ludyngton, in the county of Northampton; but at the date of the battle of Lewes he was the husband of Sibilla de Mares, relict of Robert de Mares of North Ashby, otherwise Meers Ashby, com. North. After the fall of Montfort he was one of the barons disinherited by the Parliament of Winchester, the severity of which measure was soon afterwards condemned, and by the King's charter, dated 30 Jan. 1267, he obtained his pardon along with others. He died 27 July, 3 Edw. I. 1275, in the lifetime of his mother, leaving John his son and heir, upon whom, after the death of Avicia Marmion, the castle and fief of Tanfield devolved; and being summoned to Parliament in the reign of

Edw. II. was ancestor of the English barons of this surname. Philip Marmion, son and heir of Robert Marmion senior, succeeded to the Honours of Tamworth and Scrivelsby, and on the 7th of Feb. 1244 King Henry received his homage of the land which had belonged to Hugh de Kilpeck as husband of Joan, the younger daughter and coheir, in respect of the purparty belonging to her; whereupon the Sheriff of Hereford was commanded to make partition of the said land, and to give the said Philip and Joan seisin of their share, upon receiving security for payment of their relief. Afterward, by charter dated at Winchester 24th Jan. 1249, the same monarch, upon inspection of the charter which King Henry his great-great-grandfather had made to Robert Marmyon, great-grandfather of Philip Marmyon, of having warren in all his land in the county of Warwick, and especially at Tamworth, and likewise of the charter of King Henry (his uncle^f) which he had made to the said Robert of having warren in all his land of Lindesay, ratified and confirmed the said grants for himself and his heirs in favour of Philip Marmion. In the civil war he was steadfast to the royal party, and 50 Hen. III. 1266, was rewarded with a grant of the royal demesnes at Tamworth for his life. He was deceased 20 Edw. I. 1292, having had issue by Joan de Kilpeck three daughters, and by his second wife, Maria, whose lineage is unknown, and who was yet living 33 Edw. I. 1304, a fourth daughter, only in her eighth year at the time of her father's death. In a Roll of Arms of the reign of Henry III. we have for the coats of this family, William Marmyon de verree, ung fesse de gules, and Philip Marmion de veirée ove la fece paile; which last distinction of colour^g is also met with in the bearings of the

^f "Avunculus noster" is the reading transcribed on the Rolls, obviously in error for "atavus noster."

^g Paillé is a term of Heraldry synonymous with diapré, and is said of fesses, pales, and other charges, variegated with divers colours. The monument of Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, deceased 5 Hen. III. 1221, in the chancel of the Priory-church of Hatfield Broad-Oak, com. Essex, a cell to the abbey of St. Melaine at Rennes, exhibits the shield curiously diapered. The arms of Vere, as painted in Westminster abbey on the wall, are quarterly gules and or, in the first quarter a mullet argent; but in the Roll of arms, temp. Hen. III. we have Le Conte de Oxford quartelé d'or et de goules, ung molet d'argent ent le quartier devant, the right emblazonment. On the shield of the crossed-leg figure the first quarter is fretty, and in the space between each interlacing is a fleur-de-lis, over all a mullet; on the second and third quarters the roses are enclosed in circles, and the intermediate spaces, shaped as octagons, are ornamented with quatrefoils of long narrow leaves placed cruciform, which last are also observable upon the intersections of the fret in the first quarter. The fess in the coat of Marmion was in like manner from its first assumption diapered fretty, and the assertion of La Roque, that the coat was Vair, which the younger branches differenced by a fess gules, and

Norman family of Tesson, fessé d'ermine et de paesle de six pièces. The fief of Tesson, like that of Marmion, had its chief extension in the pays de Cinglais, and upon a lady of this family the seigniory of Fontenay will have devolved after Philip Marmion had fixed his abode in England; at least in 1256, Jeanne, daughter and coheir of Ralph Tesson, widow of Robert Bertrand, Dame de Thury, confirmed to the abbey of Barberie all the grants and concessions made by her ancestors in the fief of Robert Marmion.

Prepositura Falesie per Heutonem Bertin.

The Bailiwick of that portion of the comté of the Oximin which was limited by the diocese of Bayeux, exclusive of the pays de Cinglais, was in this fiscal year in the hands of Ralph de Rupierre, as in 1194 and 1195. His receipts from the vinagium of Argences, from the land of Billy, and from the fair of Le Gué-Beranger, continued the same in amount as before; but of the issue of the land of Ralph Grandhomme no return was made. After entries of the payments made by the crown-debtors in this district, Ralph de Rupierre rendered accompt of 20s. of the chattels of Sanson, a thief who had been hung, out of which sum he had deducted 10s. for the execution of justice; then follows an accompt of his receipts from the amercements, proffers and fines of the Bailiwick of the Oximin. Of the Loan raised in this Bailiwick, in sums of 10 li. from each person, Ralph de Rupierre rendered accompt of 120 li.; in the Treasury were 114 li., and in wages to sixty men-at-arms sent to Lerie for three days' service 6 li. had been disbursed: which fort was situate between Pont de l'Arche and Vaudreuil on the bank of the Eure. He next rendered accompt of 262 li. 10s. of the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of the Oximin to maintain men-at-arms in the March, which sum, save 17 li. 10s. remitted to the Earl of Leicester of the men of his fief, he had paid in at the Treasury. Of the Tallage set in the town of Argences by the King's precept 214 li. had been delivered in at the Treasury, and 186 li. continued charged to the Bailiff, yet remaining due from the inhabitants; and in like manner of the Tallage set in the town of Troarn 195 li. had been paid, and 5 li. were left in charge. A list of crown-debtors in the district, chiefly mainpernors of the Bishop of Lisieux, who had made no payment in this year, follows; and lastly, Sanson Abbot and the convent of St. Etienne of Caen, rendered accompt of 7s. in lieu of a bezant for a hearing of the agreement between them and William Perdson-âne of the fief of Muta at Allemagne, as the chyrograph between them witnessed; this sum the abbot had delivered in at the Treasury and he was quit.

We have next a separate accompt of Richard d'Argences of the residue of his fine, viz. of 439 marks 7s. 10½d. sterling. No payment had been made at the Treasury, but he had credit for the sums received this year by the Bailiffs from his mainpernors in their several districts, of which they had rendered accompt, and for 2 marks 3s. 4d. or 6 li. money of Anjou, the produce of the sale of his chattels. Deduction was also made of the surplus of his accompt of the Honour of Evreux, in amount 67 li. 2s. 10d. money of Anjou, or 25 marks 2s. 11½d. sterling, and under the King's writ he had expended 3 marks for 2000 quarrels bought and sent in store of the castle of Evreux—2 marks 11½d. for cheeses and salt and a grinding-stone and spikes and darts of iron, and 8 marks 3s. 4d. for 22 setiers of corn bought and sent in store of the castle of Verneuil during war-time, leaving 357 marks 9s. 6½d. for the amount of debt still owing. This fine had been of 1000 marks, and is first entered on the Roll of the year 1195; its enormity is indicative of the vast profits which the officers employed in the collection of the revenue were enabled to appropriate to themselves, and which, when labouring under the royal displeasure, they were compelled in this manner partly to disgorge. Below William Morant and Lambert de Soliers, other residents in the Bailiwick of the Oximin, rendered accompt of 100 li. for having their serjeantries; which sum, under the King's brief, had been disbursed for the liveries of Haino Le Petit and his comrades sojourning at Long-champ in time of war.

The ferm of the Prevôté of Falaise, both of the past and of this year, is next rendered accompt of in the name of Heuto Bertin; in each year the amount of the ferm was 480 li., the exact sum rendered by Odo son of Vitalis when Præpositus in 1180: on the Roll of 1195 this Prevôté is omitted. In the interval since the former year encroachments had been made on the lands of the Burgesses, which had to be compensated out of the ferm; these were now occupied by the King's store-ponds and the store-pond of Bocey. For the loss of their mill

Gervase Cornet and Gerard de Falaise had 2 li.,—to Thierry Malus Catulus for his loss by reason of the ditch of the Porte le Comte 10s. were paid, and 4s. to Richard Fitz-Robert and to Aeliz, daughter of Odo Oissel, for their loss by reason of the street of La Poterne, each of these sums being a payment for the two years. The surplus, over the above rents, and the tythe to St. Vandrille, and the alms to the Canons of Sééz, and the appointments of the Porter, Gaoler and Watchman of the castle, in each year, had been received by the Queen, mother of the King, and the Accomptant was quit. The same Heuto also rendered accompt of the ferm of the mills of Falaise during the two years, and which was likewise of the same amount, viz. 160 li., as in the year 1180; the outgoings were the same as in that year, and the surplus had been in like manner as above paid over to the Queen-mother. In the Register of Philip Augustus is copied an Inquest, taken in 1204, of the value of the revenues of Falaise, which were rendered at the time when King Richard went beyond sea to the Holy Land, upon the oaths of the Mayor of Falaise, Odo son of Vitalis, Bartholomew Talebot, Thomas de Figelois, Vitalis son of Amelot, Thierry son of Amelot, Dion d'Abeville, John du Baille (de Beilio), Thomas Bertin, Robert Talebot, Roger de Falaise, Walter Medicus, Richard Solde. These jurors found that the Prevôté of Falaise, without the plaid d'épée, the escheats the Vicomté and the Branagium, of which reckoning was made at the Exchequer, was worth, on the day on which King Richard went beyond sea, 640 li., which were rendered to the old Queen, save that there was given out of the said money in fees and alms 90 li. 4s.^h With this finding the accompts on this

^h In the Statistique de l'Arrondissement de Falaise par MM. Galeron, Alph. de Brebisson, Jules Desnoyers, etc. mention is made of a copy of this Inquest in the Chartrier of the town (Grande Liasse, 3^e piece), and a translation of its contents are given, but, by a singular blunder, the old Queen, Vetus Regina, is identified with Queen Berengaria instead of Queen Alianor. In the same chartrier (Grande Liasse, 2^e piece) was a copy of the charter of Richard I. given at Liunazon, in the island of Cyprus, by the hand of Philip, clerk of the King's chamber, on the 12th day of May 1191, and on its authority the assignment of the town of Falaise, with its appendages and the castle, to Queen Berengaria for her appanage, is asserted by the writers of the Statistique. Fortunately this charter has been printed by Dom Martenne, Amplissima Collectio, vol. I. col. 995, from a Colbertine manuscript, and we learn from it that the assignment was only in reversion. At that date King Richard assigned to Berengaria his wife, Queen of England, Duchess of Normandy, Comtesse of Anjou, all that he had in Gascony beyond the Garonne, to hold and possess during the lifetime of his mother, the illustrious Queen Alienor, as freely as he then held the same in his own hands. But immediately after the decease of the said lady his mother, if she his said wife should be surviving, she to yield up in peace all the said things assigned to her beyond the Garonne; and from

Geoffrey Ridel rendered accompt for himself and Geoffrey de St. Denis in this year, the same as in 1180 and 1195, of 40s. for two chappes, which he had delivered in at the Treasury and was quit. Next are his own accompts as a debtor for the residue of the Tallage of his Bailiwick, and of the award of the jury upon him, together with those of such debtors to the crown as had made any payment toward their liquidation ; among the latter is one in the name of Walter de Soteville, of 5 li. 6s. 8d. for two marks of silver of the rent of the canons of St. Quintin. The acquisition of property in this Bailiwick by these religious was of very early date, inasmuch as Richard I. Duke of Normandy had in 1015 granted to them in fief two churches, viz. Evrardi ecclesia et Sotavilla, at the request of Dudon, a canon of St. Quintin, who had previously held them of his gift, and who, when dean of their community, wrote three books treating of the lives of the three first Dukes of Normandy ; the bourg where they were established was that time the King assigned to her to hold in England the dower of the Queens, viz. that which his father King Henry had there assigned to his said mother,—in Normandy his castle of Falaise with the town, the castle of Danfront and the town, (the castle of Bonneville-sur-Touques and the town,)—in Touraine the castle of Loches and the town—in Poitou the town of Jarnai, the castle of Mirebaut and the town, and Cleron, each with their several appendages. This charter the King himself attested, along with the bishop of Evreux, Garnier de Napoli, Grand Master of the Hospital, Andrew de Chavenni, Geoffroi du Perche, and Robert de Sablé. Queen Alienor died at the castle of Mirebeau on the 31st March 1204, and was interred at Fontevraud on the 11th of April ; hence it was only from and after her decease that the reversionary rights of Queen Berengaria to the rents of her dower in Normandy came into possession, and their quit-claim was made the subject of a convention between her and King Philip Augustus, in that year.

situate in the pays du Vermandois, on the river Somme. Geoffrey Ridel further rendered accompt of the issues from the chattels of felons executed in his Bailiwick, and of 100 li. of the Loan set therein; in the Treasury were 3 li., to Geoffrey the Money-changer 85 li. had been remitted, of which he rendered accompt in this year; and by reason of the exemption of the Hospital of St. Mary Magdalen of Rouen, under the King's charter, 10 li. had been returned. Of the Tallage set to maintain servientes in the March, the Bailiff rendered accompt of 122 li. 10s., of which sum Sawale Fitz-Henry had 108 li. 10s. toward the works of the castle of La Roche, and the remaining contribution was deducted in favour of the men of the fiefs of Hugh de Gornai and the Earl of Leicester, and by reason of the exemption of the Hospital named above.

Lucas, son of John, rendered accompt of 40 li. of the ferm of the Vicomté of the Roumois, of which no return appears to have been made in 1195. Its assised value was the same as in 1180, and as then 4 li. in tythe to the Treasurer were deducted; by the Bailiff in this year 18 li. were paid into the Treasury, and other 18 li. to the King. His next accompt includes his receipts from the rents of lands and tenements, appendages of the Vicomté, from the amercement, proffers and fines, and from the Loan raised in his Bailiwick of the Roumois, a sum total of 398 li. 4s. 2d.; in the Treasury the deposit was 132 li. 17s. 6d., and under writ 122 li. had been paid to the King in his Chamber, 66 li. 13s. 4d. to 100 men-at-arms for twenty days sent to Gournai, a like sum to 200 men-at-arms for eight days sent into the Isle d'Andely, and 10 li. for the livery of Richard Le Waleis, the King's arblaster. Among the items were 4 li. the ferm of land which had belonged to the Archbishop of York in Le Val Fenilli, 4 li. 4s. for 21 minæ of oats of the bernagium of Couronne, and 16 li. 1s. 6d. of the purprestures of the valley of the Seine, received from the heir of Matthew de Clères; which sums will be found entered as debts of his father in the accompt of Richard Brieguerre, under the head of Vallis Secane, on the second membrane of this Roll. Stephen de Longchamp, who had the office of King's Seneschal in this reign, rendered accompt among the debtors in this district of 73 li. 18s. 8d. of the residue of the old ferm of the Prevôté of Lions-la-foret, and of the ministerium of Brai and of Beauvoir, and had this year paid 7 li. on that behalf. In right of his wife, Petronilla, daughter and coheiress of Osbert de Cailly, Stephen de Longchamp was in possession of a moiety of the Honour of Cailly in the Roumois; and he had also through her the fief of Baudemont, in the Chatellenie of Vernon, which by the treaty of Issoudun in 1195, it was stipulated he should hold of the King of France. In the time of Henry I. Goellus de Baudemont, and Agnes, his wife, sister of Joscelin Crispin, Garnier his brother, and Baldricus his son, were benefactors to the community of regular canons established at Sausseuse on the borders of the forest of Vernon, and the same Goellus and Baldricus, his son, are also named in deeds of the abbey of Mortemer-en-Lions. They likewise held of the Archbishop of Rouen the fief of Bus, adjacent to Baudemont; and hence the surname of the son, Baldric de Bosco, whose descendants appear again under that of Baudemont, an interchange of local designation then common. We have it recorded in the time of King John that Henry I. gave to Baldric de Bosco the manor of Mutford,¹ with Gap-ton and Belton, com. Suff. in augmentation of his barony of "Balde-mund," by way of equivalent for forty librates of land which he had promised to him for his service, the value of Mutford being 30 li. and the other vills 10 li.; and that the heirs of the said Baldric subsequently gave Gapton and Belton in exchange for a vill in Normandy, which was called Gyl (Til-en-Vexin); in corroboration of which statement we find Baldric de Bosco named among those who in 1131 had exemption from Danegeld, in the county of Suffolk. It further appears, from a pleading of the time of Edw. I., that the manor of Mutford once belonged to Goellus de Baldemont, a Norman, and that the same Goellus, at the time that he had seisin of the said manor, held also the half-hundred of Mutford, with right of wreck of the sea; in Nor-

mandy he gave the churches of Briqueville-en-Vexin and Val-Corbon, in 1177, to the Priory of La Sausseuse. From him the inheritance came to the Lady Hildeburgh, who gave in alms, out of the demesne of Mutford, eight acres of land to the church of Blessed Mary of Blythburg; and in a charter of Richard I. in favour of the same church, dated at Caagnes 23 Jan. 10th year of his reign, A. D. 1199, is the recital, ex dono Heldeburc de Baudemunt duas solidatas in Mutford. This lady was first the wife of Osbert son of Roger de Cailly, who on the Roll of 1180 rendered accompt in this district of 100 li. pro consuetudine injuste capta; which sum had been remitted to him pursuant to the King's writ. By his charter, dated in 1189, Osbert, son of Roger de Cailly, for the redemption of his soul and those of all his predecessors, quit-claimed to the abbot and convent of St. Ouen that portion of the forest of Selveison (Le Vert Bois) concerning which there had long been a dispute betwixt him and them. He, moreover, released to the said abbot and convent 60 li. money of Mans, and 10 marks of silver, and returned to them their deed given for the assurance of this debt, by the consent and counsel of his wife, Heudeburgis. We have it also recorded that the said lady Hildeburgh gave to wife to Henry de Vere her daughter (Matildis), whereby the said Henry de Vere, of the right and inheritance of his wife, acquired Mutford, and held it during all his life. Finally, in 1211, Hildeburgh, daughter of Goel de Baudemont, gave with the consent of Robert de Pinkney (Picquigny), her second husband,^k to God and the abbey of St. Ouen, and the monks of the said abbey, all that was held of her in Vau-nigaise (Vadum Nigasi), otherwise Vani, now Gani, and in the parish of Ste. Geneviève. Around Gani the abbey of St. Ouen had an extensive fief, conterminous with the fief of Baudemont, and annexed to the Priory of St. Nicaise de Gani, called also Gani l'Isle, from its site in an island of the river Epte; such their contiguity had been the occasion of a dispute between Baldric de Bosco and the abbot Fraternus, in the time of Hugh Archbishop of Rouen (1129—1164). The latter was about to consecrate a chapel which Baldric had built, when the abbot and monks of St. Ouen intimated to him that the chapel had been erected unjustly on the land of St. Ouen, in spite of their reclamations; whereupon the Archbishop, to whom the decision of the dispute was referred, gave this award, viz. the abbot and his successors to have the presentation of the priest of the chapel, and the monks two parts of the tythe of the whole fief of St. Ouen throughout the extent of the hill belonging to the castle of Baudemont, so that the third part of the tythe might be to the use of the priest serving in the chapel; the parish of La Chapelle-St.-Ouen-sur-Gani probably owes its origin to this arrangement. The families of Longchamp and Lacy had, it seems, intermarried, for to a rescript of his fiefs, addressed to King Henry II. in 1168, Hugh de Lacy adds this postscript, est feodum i militis de feodo antiquo quod oblitus sum, feodum Will'i de Burehopa, quod tenet Hugo de Longocampo in maritagio. Of the gift of Walter, son of Hugh de Laci, Stephen de Longchamp held the vill of Frome-Herbert, com. Heref., having had from King John a charter in confirmation, bearing date at Nottingham 11 Mar. 1201; but not long afterward he transferred the same to his nephew Stephen d'Evreux, de Ebroucis, for his homage and service. By writ, 8 Apr. 1203, King John sent word to Roger Constable of Chester and Henry de Rolleston, to cause Stephen de Longchamp to have acquittance of 40 li. money of Anjou, due for the mal tête of a shipload of wine toward fortifying his house at Denville, where a garrison had been placed, which in that year received the King's pay. The commune of Douville lay adjacent to Radepont, on the opposite side of the river Andelle, and after the acquisition of Lions-la-forêt by the King of France in 1202, its site in the Marches of Normandy made the erection of a fortress at this point needful for their defence. Stephen de Longchamp had accompanied King John into England, when he withdrew from the contest with King Philip, his suzerain; but purposing to return into Normandy, his sons were delivered to the King as hostages, and confined in the castle of Wallingford. Before his departure, however, the King sent his writ, dated 6 Sept. 1204, to Robert Aguilun, constable of the castle, ordering him to deliver to Stephen de Longchamp Baudry his eldest son, retaining his other son, by reason that he had given him leave to take his said son with him into Normandy. Also, on the 22nd of the same month, the King's command was sent to the Sheriff of Suffolk to cause Stephen de Longchamp to have the land which had belonged to Reginald du Bois, de Bosco, in Mutford, if it were not worth more than 12 li., reserving the corn and stock. The brothers Geoffrey and Reginald du Bois had been constantly employed in the service of King John during the year 1203, and received conjointly at that time a rent of 61 li. 4s. in Lothingland, com. Suff., out of the aggregate ferm of that county and Norfolk. The former, indeed, gave to Hugh de Wells, afterward bishop of Lincoln, twelve acres of land in Aldefrith, to build there the church of St. Nicholas of Aldefrith, of which the said Hugh was then the rector; they lay contiguous to the town of Little Yarmouth, and were situate in the manor of Lodingland, as parcel of the vill of Gorleston. The land of Reginald du Bois in Mutford had been held by him in right of his wife, Matildis, relict of Henry de Vere, who at his decease had left a son and heir yet a minor; but the two brothers having now receded from the service of King John, their possessions were in his hands as escheats de terris Normannorum. From whatever motive, the favour shewn by the King to Stephen de Longchamp was of short duration; for by writ, dated 26 Oct. following, the Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk was commanded, immediately upon sight of the royal letters, to seize into the King's hands Mutford, which had belonged to Henry de Veer, and which the King had committed to Stephen de Longchamp, and to deliver it to Peter de Stokes to have in his custody, he undertaking to answer for the issues at the Exchequer. However, by a second writ, dated 25 Nov. following, the same officer was commanded, that in case he had seized into the King's hands the land of Stephen de Longchamp of Mutford, which was belonging to him in right of his wife, to restore that land to him, reserving to Peter de Stokes the portion of the land there which had been in the tenure of Reginald du Bois. In the next year, 28 Nov. 1205, the King's writ was sent to Warine Fitz-gerold, then constable of the castle of Wallingford, ordering him to deliver to Stephen de Longchamp his son William, who was in his keeping as a hostage. After the death of Peter de Stokes the custody of the fief of Henry de Ver was committed, 26 Aug. 1206, to Robert Deverell, and subsequently by charter, dated 9 Jan. 1207, to Robert Fitz-Roger, along with the heir, to have and hold until the heir should be of such age as he might and ought to hold the land according to the custom of England; by the same charter the King also granted to the said Robert the marriage of the said heir, with all its appurtenants, without any reserve. Accordingly, a writ, dated 30 Jan. in that year, was sent to the Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, directing him to cause Robert Fitz-Roger to have the land which had been Henry de Ver's in Mutford and in Cressingham, of which he had been seised on the day he died, which Stephen de Longchamp had afterwards held, for he it was who should answer thereof to the King. In the same year, 10 Nov. following, another writ was dispatched to the Sheriff, with an order for him to cause Stephen de Longchamp to have seisin of the land which he had held in his Bailiwick, to hold as long as such should be the King's pleasure. In the reign of John an inquisition was taken of the tenures in the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, copied into the Testa de Nevill, which sets forth, "that Henry de Vere begot a certain son of his wife, who is the heir of Mutford, and is in the custody of Robert Fitz-Roger, by the concession of the King." In the following reign the land which had been Stephen de Longchamp's in Mutford and Cressingham was an escheat in the King's hands, and by him committed to Walter de Evermue to support himself in his service, as long as such should be the royal pleasure, wherefore, by writ, 27 Jan. 1221, the Sheriff was directed to give him seisin; but not long after the jurors of the county of Suffolk found that a moiety of the manor of Mutford, held in dower, which had been the inheritance of Stephen de Longchamp, was an escheat of the Lord the King, and that Henry de Vere then held that moiety, through whom they knew not, and that it was worth 15 li. Henry de Vere was dead, without issue, before 7 Feb. 1233, when the whole vill of Mutford reverted to the crown, and in a subsequent inquisition the finding was, "that Thomas de Hemmegrave holds the manor of Mutford through the Lord the King, who now is, by his charter, and which had been the escheat of the Lord the King from Stephen de Longchamp and Henry de Vere, and that its value was 30 li." In Normandy we find evidence of a like division of the inheritance between the husbands of the two daughters and coheirs of Osbert de Cailly; in 1172 the return of his service was two knights of the Honour of Cailly, one to serve at his own cost, the other at the cost of his suzerain, and accordingly in the list of Feoda Militaria of the Bailiwick of the Roumois in the time of Philip Augustus, these two knight's fees are found in the tenure of Stephen de Longchamp and of Reginald du Bois (de Bosco). By a charter of a date subsequent to the election of Abbot Roger in 1212, Reginald du Bois and Matillis his wife, daughter of Osbert de Cailly, confirmed to the said abbot and the monks of St. Ouen certain concessions as to their several rights in the forest of Selveisons (Le Vert Bois) and in the Haie Gonnor, appurtenant to the fief of Cailly. Stephen de Longchamp is said to have fallen at the battle of Bouvines, fought 9 Feb. 1214, and in 1220 his relict Petronilla, daughter of Osbert de Cailly, with the assent of Geoffrey du Bois, then her husband, gave to the church of St. Amand de Rouen, and to the nuns there serving God, William a la jambe (ad gambam) of St. Jean (sur Cailly), with his whole fief, for the love of God and for the redemption of her soul, and that of the said Geoffrey her husband, and those of all her ancestors, in free, pure, and perpetual alms. Her eldest son by her first husband, Baldric de Longchamp, was the same year returned, in the inquisitions inserted in the Register of Philip Augustus, to hold, conjointly with Reginald du Bois, the fiefs of the Honour of Cailly and the fiefs of the inheritance of Baudemont in the Vexin-Normand.¹ His brother William left for the celebration of his obit in the cathedral of Rouen 50s. in the transversum of Cailly; and Petronilla daughter of Stephen de Longchamp, was successively the wife of William de Longchamp, knight, and of Robert de Poissy, knight. Another Accomptant in this Bailiwick was the heir of Hugh de Cressie of 358 li. of the residue of the debt of Ralph, Bishop of Lisieux; in its discharge 10 li. had been this year received from him by the Bailiff, and other 10 li. delivered in at the Treasury through Geoffrey de Say. Hugh de Cressie had married Margaret, daughter and heir of William du Quesnay (de Caisneio),^m hereditary Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, and was in her right lord of several manors in those counties. He had by her a son named Roger, and was deceased before 3 Ric. I. 1192, in which year Robert Fitz-Roger was Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk in right of the same Mar-

^k Among the lists of fiefs printed by Duchesne in the Appendix ad Rerum Normannicarum scriptores, is one under the heading Feod. loric. de Ballivia Vernon, where we read Robertus de Pinquiniaco iii milit. singulis diebus apud Vernonum perendinantes. Et quando Rex summonet exercitum suum aliò per xl dies ad sumptus suos. Its compilation will therefore date during the continuance of the second marriage of Hildeburgh de Baudemont, shortly subsequent to the chatellenie of Vernon being annexed to the dominions of the King of France. Another list, severally printed by La Roque and Duchesne, entitled, Feoda Wicassini Normannie, thus specifies his tenure, Robertus de Pinquigny Bascevillam et Baudemont de feodo Vernoni — Robertus de Pinqueni Basqueville et Baudemont de feodo Vern. Baqueville is adjacent to Douville, and its forest extends to the river Andelle.

The sum originally owing of the debt of the Bishop of Lisieux by Hugh de Cressy is on the Roll of the year 1195 charged to the heir in the Bailiwick of Caux, in which district the vill of Cressy was situate, being held of the Honour of Bellencombre, along with La Pommeraie, for the fief of one knight. In this ninth year of Ric. I. on the Pipe Roll sub tit. Norf. et Sudf. Robert Fitz-Roger appears as debtor to the crown in 100 marks pro maritando filio et herede Hugonis de Cressi; but in the end he had not this marriage, and by King John the fine was cancelled at the Exchequer after a lapse of nine years. In 1199 Robert Fitz-Roger gave to the King 300 marks for having the younger daughter of Hubert de Rie, and for marrying her to a certain nephew of his, and Isabella de Rie the same year became the wife of Geoffrey de Cestria, son of John, Constable of Chester, and of his wife Alicia, sister of Robert Fitz-Roger. In the 7th year of King John Roger de Cressy was of age, and 20 May 1205 a writ was directed to the Sheriff of Suffolk and Norfolk, commanding him to cause Roger de Cressy to have full seisin of the land of Reindon with the appurtenances, of which Hugh de Cressy, father of the said Roger, was seised in his demesne as of fee on the day he died, in which Richard de Bleville, who was then the tenant, had no right of entry except through Robert Fitz-Roger, in whose custody the said Roger had been whilst he was under age, as by him was alleged; similar writs were likewise issued to the Sheriff of Sussex for Rottingdean, and to the Sheriff of Lincoln for the land of Harrowby. Not long after Roger de Cressy had incurred the King's displeasure for having contracted marriage without licence with the above-mentioned Isabella de Rie, and writs, dated 10 Mar. 1207, were sent to the Sheriffs of Norfolk and Suffolk, and of the shires of Buckingham and Kent, directing them to seize into the King's hands all the lands of Roger de Cressy, and of the widow of Geoffrey de Cestria, and of William Fitz-Roscelin in their Bailiwicks, and to deliver the same to Robert de Burgate, and to Robert de Bristol, the King's clerk. In the next year he fined in 1200 marks and twelve palfreys for having the goodwill of his Lord the King, and for having his lands, of which he had been disseised for having married the said Isabella; in 13 Joh. 1212, he answered for seventeen Knights' fees and a half of the moiety of the Barony of Rie, which he held in her right. In 16 Joh. his step-father being then deceased, the King by charter, dated 22 Dec. 1214, granted to Margaret his mother, relict of Robert Fitz-Roger, all her own inheritance of which Robert Fitz-Roger her husband was seised on the day he died, also to have her right in his court of her inheritance, which her father had on the day he died, and of all her inheritance which her husbands had given to others, and not to be distrained to marry again, or, if she chose to marry, to do it with the King's consent. Moreover, she was to have respite during all the days of her life from all debts of the Jews which her father owed in his lifetime, and to have dower if her son should refuse to give it to her, according to the custom of the realm of England, save that the castle of Norwich was to be retained in the King's hands during pleasure. This son, named John Fitz-Robert, was of age before 12 Aug. 1212, when he had the King's charter confirming to him the lands and tenements which his grandfather and father had had of the gifts of King Henry II. and Richard I.; and before 1 May, 1215, he had succeeded to the charge of custos of the castle of Norwich. Meanwhile Roger de Cressy had again incurred the displeasure of the King, whose Letters Patent, dated 15 May 1214, addressed to John de Ingworth and the bailiffs of Hubert de Burgh, are to this effect, "that We having been given to understand that you might seize, if such was Our wish, the wife and son of Roger de Cressy, Our enemy, We command you without delay to take the son of the same Roger, but not to take his wife, and to cause him to be kept in safe custody, or else to deliver him into the ward of John Fitz-Robert." In the ensuing reign he returned to his allegiance and had seisin of his lands from King Henry III., who in 1231, having received his homage of the lands which Margaret de Cressy, mother of him the said Roger, whose heir he was, had held in capite, sent his writ, dated 7 Jan., to the Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, to cause him to have seisin of the same; upon which occasion it was ascertained that he owed relief for eleven knights' fees of his mother's barony. He died 30 Hen. III. 1246, having had issue by Isabella de Rie four sons, Hugh, Roger, John and Stephen, who all died without issue in the lifetime of their mother, before 48 Hen. III. 1263, when this elder branch of the family of Cressy became extinct. Roger de Mortemer follows as an accomptant in this Bailiwick of the residue of his debts; in the receipt of the Bailiff were 58 li. 10s. and he owed 67 li. 14s. 8d. The caput of the Honour of Roger de Mortemer was his castle at St. Victor-en-Caux, and in the Scriptum de servitiis Militum quæ debentur Duci Normanniæ, compiled in 1172, we read, Hugo de Mortuo-mari v mil. et ad suum servitium xiii mil. et dim.; in copies of this Scriptum, made after the conquest by the French monarch, the words Rex habet are subjoined, it being then in the King's hands as an escheat. In another list, of date subsequent to the acquisition of Normandy by Philip Augustus, under the heading Feoda militaria de Ballia Rothomagensi, this tenure is thus designated, De honore S. Victoris v feoda. Rex habet. Mortemer, Mortuum mare, the locality from which the surname of this family was assumed, is also situate in the pays de Caux, at the source of the river Eaulne, and a Roger de Mortemer had the castle there anterior to the invasion of England. The occasion of its being transferred to the family of Warren has been incidentally related by Ordericus Vitalis, who puts these words into the mouth of William the Conqueror on his death-bed, "Quondam nimis contra me inflammatus ingentem exercitum Gallie in duas partes dimisit Rex Henricus, ut nostros opprimeret fundos geminis irruptionibus. Ipse unam phalangem in Ebroicensem diocesim ut usque ad Sequanam omnia devastaret, introduxit; aliamque Odoni fratri suo, ac Rainaldo de Claromonte et duobus consulibus Radulfo de Monte-desiderii atque Widoni de Pontivo commendavit, ut per vada Eptæ Neustriam cito introirent, Braium et Talogium atque Rothomagensem invaderent ferro et flamma, necne rapinis usque ad mare penitus devastarent. . . . Robertum vero Aucensium comitem et Rogerium de Mortuomari aliosque milites probatissimos misi contra Odonem eiusque legiones. Qui, dum penes castrum, quod Mortuum mare dicitur, occurrissent Francis, utriusque partis agminibus paratis terribile prælium commissum est. . . . Tunc Wido Pontivi comes captus est et Odo, cum Rainaldo aliisque, qui velocitate viguerunt, fugatus est. Rodulfus quoque Comes pariter caperetur, nisi Rogerius princeps militiæ meæ illi suffragaretur; hominum enim jamdudum illi fecerat.ⁿ In tali ergo necessitate pulchrum illi et competens servitium impendit, dum in castro suo illum triduo protexit et postea saluum ad sua reduxit. Pro hac offensa Rogerium de Normannia ejeci, sed paulo post reconciliatus illi ceterum honorem reddidi, castrum tamen Mortuimaris, ⁿ Hadvisa, the wife of Roger de Mortemer, had of her own inheritance the vill of Mers at the mouth of the river Bresle, in the diocese of Amiens, in the district called Le Vimeu, whose gifts to the abbey of St. Victor at this place were confirmed in 1192 by Theobald Bishop of Amiens. Mont-Didier is in the same diocese, and it may be that Roger de Mortemer had done homage to Comte Ralph by reason of these lands, as held of his fief and given to him in frank-marriage with his daughter. Ralph de Mortemer, son of Roger, had likewise inherited lands in this diocese, which he bestowed in marriage with his daughter Havise upon Stephen comte of Aumale, who subsequently gave to the church of St. Martin-des-Champs, a Cluniac priory in the suburb of Paris, concedente Havisa conjuge mea et patre ejus Radulfo de Mortuomari, ex eorum enim hereditate erat, whatever he had in the churches of Airaines for the redemption of his own soul and of his wife, the aforesaid Havisa, and of the aforesaid Ralph, and of Milesendis his wife now deceased, and of all mine and their ancestors.

in quo inimicum meum salvavit, illi jure, ut reor, abstuli ; sed Guillelmo de Guarenna, consanguineo ejus, tyroni legitimo, dedi." From this date the castle of Mortemer remained annexed to the Honour of the house of Warren in Normandy, Earls of the county of Surrey in England from the time of William Rufus ;^o thus, in the treaty made between King Stephen and Henry Fitz-Empress, Duke of Normandy, in 1153, it will be found stipulated, that the latter should put William, son of King Stephen, in possession of all the lands, vills and burgh, belonging to the Honour of the Earl Warren, and especially of the castle of Belencumbre and that of Mortemer. Also, in a charter of Reginald comte of Boulogne in 1204, Mortemer is spoken of as previously the fief of the Earl Warren, quod fuit comitis Garenniæ. The vill of St. Riquier, between Eu and Foucarmont, together with half a knight's fee at St. Beuve-la-rivière and Epinay, places in the immediate vicinity of Mortemer, were, however, still of the inheritance of Roger de Mortemer at this date, and held by him of the Honour of Mortemer, of which the castle alone, with its demesne, had been appropriated to William de Warenne, as the accurate historian above quoted testifies. At St. Victor had been established a priory, as a cell to the abbey of St. Ouen, by the incumbent of the church, about the year 1055 ; which priory, upon the petition of Roger de Mortemer and Haduisa his wife, was erected into an abbey in 1074, and sumptuously endowed by him and the successive lords of the fief, the abbots being prescriptively chosen from the monks of St. Ouen. According to an entry in the Register of Philip Augustus, the abbot of St. Victor owed the Lord Roger de Mortemer one hackney to use as a sumpter-horse whenever he went forth in the host, but when he returned he had to restore the hackney to the abbot. In the History of the foundation and founders of the Priory of Wigmore, com. Heref. the Lady Milesaunt, daughter of Earl of Derby, is stated to have been the first consort of the Lord Roger, the second founder of the abbey of Wygemore ; which Roger died 24 Jun. 1215, leaving two sons, Hugh and Ralph, successively heirs, viz. Hugh by his first wife Milesaunt, and Ralph by his second wife Isabella, daughter of the Lord de Ferrers of Leche-lade, together with Robert and Philip. This date is incorrect and should be read 1214 ; in which year, 19th day of August, King John ^o William de Warrenna, first Earl of Surrey, introduced the Cluniac monks into England, and established them in the church of St. Pancras at Lewes ; at Mortemer was also a priory dependant upon Cluni, and, though direct evidence is wanting, there can be little doubt but that it was of his foundation.

sent his command to Peter Bishop of Winchester, Justiciary of England, to cause the issues forth of the lands of Roger de Mortemer, from the time of their being seized into the King's hands on occasion of his death, to be allowed to Hugh de Mortimer in the fine which he had made with the King for the said lands, and further to cause to be allowed to Isabella, mother of the said Hugh,^p in the fine made with the King for the land of Watkin (Walter) de Beauchamp, the issues of the said land, and the issues of her own land, forth of the same since they had been seized into the King's hands on the occasion aforesaid. Of Isabella de Mortimer, daughter of Walchelin, and sister of Henry, Lords of Ferrières and Chambrais in Normandy, mention has been made in a former page of these Observations; "her own land" had come to her of the inheritance of her father in England. In 6 Joh. Isabella de Mortimer proffered to the King 300 marks and a palfrey, to be rendered within a year, for having seisin of the manors of Lechelade and Longborough, com. Glouc., which had belonged to Hugh de Ferrières her brother, of the gift of Walkelin their father,^q whose heir she is ut dicet, so that she may stand to her right in this matter if any one should incline to question her therefore; and the Sheriff was commanded to cause her to have seisin of the said manors without delay, retaining the stock on the said lands for the King's use. At this period Roger de Mortemer was a prisoner in the hands of the French; for on the Close Rolls is a writ, dated 18 Aug. 1205, requiring the Treasurer and Chamberlains to deliver out of the Treasury to Isabella, wife of ^p This express mention of Isabella as mother of Hugh, can hardly be understood in the sense of stepmother, and it is more than probable that the writer of the History quoted had in view Milesendis, wife of the first Ralph de Mortemer, and that he has brought her down two generations and wedded her to Roger de Mortemer in error. An instance of similar confusion of persons by the same writer is hereafter noticed in the text; his narrative is, nevertheless, extremely curious, and no doubt faithfully preserves the traditional story, which had come down from mouth to mouth, and had necessarily more or less been disjointed and perverted in its passage.

^q The manor of Lechelade, com. Glouc., was the land of Henry de Ferrières at the time of the compilation of Domesday, and a second Henry de Ferrières had acquittance for Danegeld in that county, 31 Hen. I. 1131. That the latter was the son of William de Ferrières, who succeeded to the barony of his father, the first-named Henry, at Ferrières, and who was living 1090—1106, may be inferred from the mention made of a Henry de Ferrières in 1136 by the historian Ordericus Vitalis among the partisans of King Stephen in Normandy, and whom he notes to have been taken prisoner by William Talvas in an engagement with the forces of Gislebert de Clare. Walchelinus de Ferrières here spoken of, the father of Isabella de Mortimer, was undoubtedly the son of this second Henry, he being a minor when he succeeded to the barony of Ferrières and to the land of his father in England, and not deceased till 3 Joh. 1201, when his son, a third Henry, fined to have his land in England.

Roger de Mortemer, by the hand of her third messenger, 200 marks, which the King had lent her toward the ransom of the said Roger her husband. A writ of the same date was also sent to the Sheriff of Salop, with a precept for him to permit Ysabella, wife of Roger de Mortemer, to collect through him her scutage of the Knight's fees which the same Roger, her husband, held of the King in capite in his Bailiwick, which scutage the King had lent her toward the ransom of the same Roger. The legendary writer above quoted notices this captivity of the Lord of Wigmore, but by a strange anachronism refers it to the year 1221, 5 Hen. III., instead of 1204, 5 Joh., and tells the story of Ralph de Mortemer, son of Isabella, forgetting, however, to make a like substitution of name in regard of the sovereign reigning at that date. Tempore etiam istius domini Radulphi, Anno viz. Domini MCCXXI. Hugone fratre suo superstite, Johannes Rex Angliæ perdidit Normanniam, eò quod pluries vocatus ad faciendum homagium Regi Franciæ pro dicta Normannia, renuit omnino venire; in qua quidem Normannia iste dominus Radulphus existens ad defendendum, quantum in se fuit, justiciam dicti Johannis Regis Angliæ, prout moris est progenitorum suorum, a rege Franciæ, manu centupliciter fortiori captus est. In 9 Joh. 1207, Roger de Mortemer and Isabella his wife made proffer of 700 marks and seven palfreys for having the manor of Oakham, com. Roteland, with its appurtenances, and the Sheriff was directed to cause them to have seisin thereof without delay, saving to the Earl of Hereford such chattels as he had put there of his own. The manor of Oakham had been of the inheritance of the Norman branch of the family of Ferrières from the time of Henry I.,^r and in the Rotulus de Valore ter-

^r The manor of Oakham, with five berewicks, was ancient demeane of the crown in the time of the Conqueror, and had belonged to Queen Editha; in 1131 Henry de Ferrières had remitted to him under the King's writ 12s. of the new Danegeld of Rotelanda, and to him may be ascribed the building of the castle of Oakham, which in the year 1138 was held against King Stephen by the Welch chieftain Morgan, according to Ordericus Vitalis; if it be not, as I apprehend, confounded by him with the castle of Oakhampton. In the reign of this King, or early in that of his successor, Hugh de Ferrières, brother of Henry, designing to give the land of Broc, in the soke of Oakham, to the canons of Kenilworth, applied for the consent thereto of his nephew Walchelinus, through his guardian (Robert) de Neufbourg, afterward Seneschal of Normandy. In the chartulary of that monastery this letter is transcribed: . . . de Novoburgo et Walchelinus de Ferrariis Hugoni de Ferrariis dilecto suo, salutem. Notum sit vobis nos concessisse donum quod fecistis canonicis Keningwordiæ de terra de Broc, et cum prædictus nepos vester sigillum habuerit hoc donum libenter suo confirmabit sigillo, et nos interim cum quibuscunque sigillis vobis placuerit hoc donum firmabimus. Sciatis autem, quod omnia, quæ nepos vester habet, vellem ut essent in manu vestra. Another instrument follows testificatory of the concession of the gift which Hugh de Ferrarum Normannorum, begun in the sixth year of King John, the land of Henry de Ferrières, with the stock, is found valued at 100 li. per annum, and at 80 li. without the stock; in which year John de Freney had received of the ferm of St. John the Baptist 49s. 2d., and to the full amount of the term of Easter last past. The heading on the Roll does not specify the locality, but an inquisition taken in the reign of Henry III. identifies the land with the manor of Oakham,^a as shewing the family of Freney resident in its soke. In the Testa de Nevill we read, sub tit. "Com. Rotel." as follows, Henricus filius Reginaldi de Freney vendidit Hugoni de Mortuo-mari centum solidatas terre in Benton. Modo Isabella uxor ejus tenet. Eadem tenet manerium de Okham per Regem Johannem; valet centum libras—heredes sunt ultra mare, where indeed the name of Hugh has been manifestly put in error for Roger, as it will not apply to the husband of Isabella. Henry de Ferrières, or his issue if dead, were in fact the heirs-at-law of both manors, acquired by his sister; but as he and his line continued in Normandy, Isabella on that ground alleged herself to be heir of Hugh de Ferrières, brother of Henry, and also of Henry himself; which defect in her title is, however, partly insinuated in the fine for livery of the manor of Lechelade, as above extracted.^b In both cases her right of possession rières had made to the Prior and canons of Kenilworth by William de Ferrières, his brother, as far as concerns him; and in the charter of Henry II. the gift is granted and confirmed in these terms, concedo etiam et in elemosinam confirmo supradictis canonicis terram de Broch cum bosco et exartis, sicut Hugo de Ferrariis eis divisit et concessit assensu Walchelini nepotis sui et Willielmi fratris sui, sicut in eorum cartis continetur. At Brook a priory was established, dependant on that of Kenilworth, to which both Walchelin de Ferrières, his son Henry, and Isabella de Mortemer, were subsequently benefactors.

^a Walkelinus de Ferrières gave to God and the church of St. Mary of Broch, and to the Canons there, in pure and perpetual alms, the homage and service of Jordan de Saxonia, and whatsoever right he had in him and his tenement, and also the tithes of the profits arising from the fair of Okeham, held at the feast of the Decollation of St. John the Baptist, and of the mills of the said town of Okeham and of Langham.—Witnesses, Simon the priest of Okeham, Gilbert his brother, Hugh de Ferrières, William de Frenes, Geoffrey de Carento, Master John the Physician, &c. This deed was afterwards confirmed by Henry de Ferrières, son of Walkeline, and after that by Isabel de Mortuo-mari sister (and heir) of the said Henry de Ferrières. In the Black Book of the Exchequer is this entry, sub tit. "Norhamte scire." Hocham Walkelinus de Ferrariis defendit per unum militem et dimidium, being a return made preparatory to the levy of the scutage, 14 Hen. II. 1168, to marry the daughter of the King to the Duke of Saxony.

^b Isabella de Mortemer had, beside these brothers, a sister named Margaret, upon whom Walchelinus de Ferrières, her father, settled a rent of 100s. in the Prévôté of Chambrais for her marriage, out of which she gave 10s. rent to the priory of Val de Friardel; William de Ferrières, one of the witnesses to the deed, was apparently her nephew, and Lord of Ferrières at the date of the grant.

was through the King, by whom the tenure was, it seems, limited to the term of her life in defect of proof of her right of heirship, in as much as after her decease the entire Barony of Walchelin de Ferrières reverted to the crown as an escheat of the Normans. Isabella de Mortemer, as already noticed, was re-married to Peter Fitz-Herbert, to whom she was second wife, and having in her right the manor of Lechelade he had licence, 12 Hen. III. 1228, to build a gate at the foot of the bridge, in front of the hospital there founded by him. Hugh de Mortemer, eldest son of Roger and Isabella, died in her lifetime, 10 Nov. 1227, without issue of his wife Annora, daughter of William de Braose, and was succeeded by Ralph, his brother, in the lordship of Wigmore. Peter Fitz-Herbert was also deceased 19 Hen. III. 1235, leaving Isabella, his wife, still surviving, who, doing her fealty, had livery of the lands of her inheritance, and in particular of the manor of Lechelade. Ralph de Mortemer died 6 Aug. 1246, and in the following year Roger de Mortemer, his son and heir, had livery of his lands, Isabella de Mortemer being yet alive. Before her death she sent for her grandson and gave up to him as to her next heir, son of Ralph, her elder-born son and heir, her manor of Lechelade;^u but immediately upon her decease the King caused the lands of the succession of the Norman family of Ferrières to be seized into his hands, and forthwith by charter, dated 31 May 1252, settled them upon Richard, Earl of Cornwall, as parcel of the dower of Sanchia his wife, daughter of Raymond Comte of Toulouse. This venerable lady, who had seen two generations pass away, had burial in the Hospital of St. John at Lechelade, of which, conjointly with her second husband, she had been the foundress. Lucas Fitz-John further rendered accompt of 1054 li. 15s. of the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of the Roumois to keep men serving at arms in the March;

^u Vide Abb. Placitorum, 43 Hen. III. p. 145, where is a copy of the proceedings on an assize for the recovery of two parts of the manor of Lechelade, brought by Roger de Mortemer, who made title as heir of Isabella, viz. filius et heres Radulphi de Mortuomari, filii ante nati et heredis predictæ Isabelle, the phrase ante natus being used in contradistinction to primogenitus, to denote an eldest surviving son and not the first born. One of the points raised was the tenure of the manor, which Ralph alleged that his ancestors held of the Earl of Derby, and a reference was had to the Rolls of the Exchequer, where this enrolment was found, Hugo de Mortuomari tenet decimam partem feodi unius militis in Lechelade de feodo comitis de Ferariis. The monkish writer quoted in the text marries this Hugh de Mortemer, father of the elder Roger, to Matildis Longespey, daughter of William Longespey, Duke of Normandy, and this astounding alliance, despite of all chronology, has been coolly admitted by Dugdale into his pedigree of "Mortimer;" whatever the name of the wife of Hugh de Mortemer may have been, certain it is that such parentage is a fabrication to enhance the nobility of the founders of the priory of Wigmore.

the deposit in the Treasury 77 li. 11s. 8d., with the remittances to Sawale Fitz-Henry for the works of the castle of La Roche, 881 li.—to the Earl of Leicester from the men of his fief 56 li. 17s., and the expense of conducting Henry de Minères from Rouen to Lyons 12s., left a debt of 38 li. 14s. 4d., of which the Bailiff again rendered accompt, and made another payment of 12 li. at the Treasury: of the issues of lands seized into the King's hands are other two accompts, on which he was quit. In 6 Joh., after the separation of Normandy, the lands of Lucas Fitz-John in England, viz. the manors of Teignweek and Woburneford, com. Devon, and Wallington, com. Surr., were in the King's hands as lands of the Normans, until Eustachia, his wife, made proffer to the King of 15 marks for having the land, which had belonged to Lucas her husband in England when he withdrew from the King's service, to ferm; wherefore the Sheriffs of Devon, Yorkshire, and Surrey, by writ dated 24 Aug. 1204, had in command from the King to cause her to have all her land in their bailiwicks, which belonged to her in right of dower from her former husband, or was her own inheritance, of which Lucas her husband was seised in right of her the said Eustachia, on the day that he so withdrew and adhered to the King's enemies in Normandy. In the following reign the land of Lucas Fitz-John, then deceased, was seized into the King's hands as an escheat, and 7 Feb. 1218 committed to ferm to Henry de Pont-Audemer; but upon the petition of the Vicomte of Thouars the King restored to Eustachia de Curtenay 100s. in name of her dower, to commence from Michaelmas, 5 Hen. III. 1221; which sum she was each year to receive as long as she lived by the hand of Henry de Pont-Audemer, on whose behalf a writ, dated 8 May 1222, was sent to the Barons of the Exchequer to acquit him to this amount at the Exchequer. In 7 Hen. III. 1223, a claim was made upon her by the Sheriff of Yorkshire in regard of debts owing by William Fitz-Ancelin, her first husband, to the Jews, which, by writ, 8 Sept., was respited for further enquiry, as she held nothing of his lands except in right of her dower. She was probably deceased 19 Hen. III. 1234, in which year, by writ, 20 Nov. Theobald de Englescheville, who then had the manor of Teignweek, was discharged of the annual payment of 5 li. hitherto received by Eustachia, the widow of Lucas Fitz-John, at the hands of the Sheriff of Devon. Among the crown-debtors in this Bailiwick, who had made no payments during the fiscal year, may be noticed Henry de Ver, of whom mention has been made above, owing 100 li. of the relief of the land of Osbert de Cailly, 14 li. which he had abstracted from Henry Veisdie, 11 li. de jurea, and 13 li. 15s. 1d. which he had of the land which was belonging to Henry de Longchamp—Geoffrey de St. Denis, who had been an officer of Baldwin de Chanteloup, 200 li. money of Chartres, of the debt of Ralph Bishop of Lisieux—Ralph Le Mercier of Cailly 3 li. 4s. because he refused to surrender up the castle of Cailly to the King's serjeant-at-arms—Robert Fitz-Roger 11 li. 15s. which the Seneschal delivered to him for the provisioning of Fontaines-les-Guérard—Gislebert des Prés and Hugh de Fresquienne 1033 li. 10s. 8d., which they had of the Tallage set in the Roumois—Richard Brieguerre and Gislebert des Prés 414 li. 8s. of the Tallage set in the same Bailiwick—Hugh Le Portier 19 li. 12s. 5d. of the residue of his receipts—William de Longchamp, the Chancellor, 843 li. 7s. 1d. of the sum of his debts—Seher de Quincy 7 li. 7s. 9d. which he had received from Henry de la Heuze of the pannage of the forest of Lillebonne—William le Chien 225 li. 17s. 7d. of the residue of his accompt of the issue of Bellencombre—the Commune of Eu 1000 li. which the King had lent them to fortify their town—William Le Meunier, and two others, 100 li. of the issues of the Prevôté of Drincourt, and 10 li. of the King's wines sold—Ralph Burnel 350 li. of his fine—the Comte of Eu 417 li. 7s. de jurea—the Earl de Warenne 36 li. 17s. for the same, and 2 li. 2s. of the King's ransom—Richard de Eskekeville (Equiqueville) and Richard de Mareuil 75 li. of the fourth part of the rent of the Forest of the time they held it. Fontaine-Guérard was a site in the vicinity of Pont-St.-Pierre, Radepont and Douville, intersected by the river Andelle, where on its left bank a fort had been constructed, which in the reign of King John had its name from the commune last mentioned, and was of the fief of Stephen de Longchamp in the Vexin-Normand. On the opposite side of the river, beneath the brow of the hill, stood a small priory of nuns dedicated to Our Lady, which had been founded by Robert Earl of Leicester, at the request and by the advice of Walter Archbishop of Rouen, who for the redemption of his soul, and that of the Countess Petronilla his wife, gave to God and S. Mary of Fontaine-Gerard, and the nuns there serving God, that site which is called Fontaine-Guérard, and in the essart of Le Pin, and on the side of the hill near their house, one carucate, and half a muir of corn to be annually received each month from his mills of Pont-St.-Pierre.* In the Register of Philip Augustus we have "Fontana la Girart, which Girard de Maucanchy had held, 1 feodum, then in the tenure of Walter Le Chambellan of the King's gift;" from an ancestor of this more ancient possessor, seated also at Blainville-sur-Ry, the fountain probably had name. Hugh Le Portier had a fief at Periers and Peruel, in the Bailiwick of the Roumois, which in 1206 he sold to the abbot and monks of St. Ouen for 230 li. money of Tours, his wife also receiving from them 5 li., and Enguerrand, his eldest son, a like sum; his receipts were probably from the issues of the forest of Lions. Our finding the name of William de Longchamp, the Chancellor, entered for the sum of the debts he owed to the crown, though deceased 31 Jan. 1197, was in conformity with the practice at the Exchequer of making such return from year to year until payment was had from the heir or representative, or too long an interval had passed to expect that any portion could be recovered. Henry de la Heuze was, it seems, bound by the tenure of his fief to perform the office of Butler to the King in the Duchy of Normandy; in the Register of Philip Augustus we read Henricus de la Hosse tenet terram suam de la Hosse et de Kevilli et de Rothomago et de Fiscano et de Lahuie et de Hubervill-en-Costentin de Rege, pro qua debet servicium Boutelerie, unde debet habere suas liberationes quando servit. The name of the forest is omitted in the above entry of the debt due from Richard d'Equieville and Richard de Mareuil; but as they, conjointly with William Le Chien, owed to the crown 29 li. 8s. de jurea, this connection with him refers us to the issues of Bellencombe during the time of that Honour being in the King's hands, as comprising the rent of a portion of the forest of Eauy.

The next accompts on this membrane regard the Vicomté of Arques and the issues of the great forests of Eauy and Alihermont, concerning which there is no mention on the Roll of the year 1195 from the circumstance of the castle of Arques being then in the power of the King of France. By an article of the preliminary treaty of Issoudun, of the 5th Decembér 1195, Arques was parcel of the conquered district that it was agreed should be restored to the King of England; consequently, after the mutual ratifications of the same at the conference held on the 18th Jan. following between Gaillon and Vaudreuil, the Vicomté of Arques returned under the rule of the Normans. In this fiscal year the usual contracted form of writing Legrec for Legrecestrie. The editors of this work ascribe the foundation of this priory to about the year 1198, out it must have been of earlier date; for Robert, Earl of Leicester, husband of Petronilla, was already deceased in 1191, having been taken ill after setting out for Acre, and dying at Durazzo in Greece on his journey.

Geoffrey de Say rendered accompt of 317 li. 6s. 10d. of the residue of the old ferm of the Vicomté of Arques and of the Forests; under the King's writ his disbursements were 29 li. 6s. 8d. for furnishing two ships with sailors and divers stores, and sending them to Tréport (Ultiores Portus)—13 li. 15s. in the cost of the wines, which the King had made a present of to the Comte of Flanders, for their carriage to Flanders, and 496 li. 13s. 8d. for the corrody of the King's niece, daughter of the Comte of Bretagne, and of her ladies-in-waiting sojourning at Arques, being an excess of 222 li. 8s. 6d. over the receipt, which sum was accounted to him below. Alianora, daughter of Geoffrey Comte of Bretagne, was apparently detained as a hostage for the performance of the covenants entered into between King Richard and the barons of Bretagne in this year, under which Constance, mother of Alianora, was restored to them, and an offensive league made with them against the King of France; whereupon Richard had appointed the strong castle of Arques to be her place of abode. Of the new ferm of the Vicomté of Arques and of the forests Geoffrey de Say rendered accompt of 1100 li., the sum at which the ferm was assised also in the year 1180, when it was in the hands of Richard, Chaplain of Arques; in the Treasury were 80 li., and the several sums for alms, liveries, and rents, had been paid as in that year, as well as 100 li. to the Archbishop of Rouen for the manor of Bouteilles, which he had, and 177 li. for the forest of Alihermont, which the same Archbishop had in exchange for the forest of Andely—5 li. for ten acres of meadow, which William de Kaeu had—6 li. 15s. 4d. in executing justice—222 li. 8s. 8d. in discharge of the balance of his preceding accompt, and 35 li. 2s. 7d. under the King's writ for the works for the repairs of the dwellings of the castle of Arques: and he owed 375 li. 17s. 4d. The same Geoffrey further rendered accompt of 45 muids of wheat of the rent of the forests of Eauby and Alihermont; the abbey of St. Amand de Rouen had 4 muids and a half in tythe, of which three were due from the Archbishop of Rouen of the 30 muids which he had of the forest of Alihermont, and he owed 191 li. 12s. in this year for the remaining 40 muids and a half, valuing the mina at six shillings. He also rendered accompt of 25 muids of oats of the rent of the same forests; the same abbey had 2 muids and a half in tythe, of which the Archbishop of Rouen ought from henceforth to render 1 muid, 2 setiers, three boisseaux, of the 12 muids which he had of the rent of the forest of Alihermont; and he owed 67 li. 10s. this year for 22½ muids of oats, the setier at five shillings. Possession of the vill of Bouteilles had with Dieppe been secured to the Archbishop of Rouen and his successors by the charter of the Exchange of Andely, 16 Oct. 1197, and another of its clauses contained this grant of the forest of Alihermont, concessimus etiam eis totam forestam de Alihermont cum feris et omnibus aliis pertinentiis et libertatibus suis sicut eam habuimus; this fiscal year was the first after the transaction, and consequently the ferm of the Prevôté of Dieppe is not among the returns made by the officers of the crown in the Duchy on the Roll. Geoffrey de Say next rendered accompt of the bernagium of the Vicomté of Arques, viz. 10 li. of the residue on the old accompt, and 15 li. 15s. in this year for four muids nine minæ of oats, which sums he had delivered in at the Treasury, as also 2 li. 14s. of the issue of the fief of Wimarc in Bernart-Maisnil (Belmenil) and in Lintot, and 6s. had from Geoffrey le Forestier in Lintot. Among those who made payments of their debts either wholly or in part in this Bailiwick the first on the list is Richard de Bléville, who rendered accompt of 250 li. 3s. 6d. for his father of the residue of the old ferm of the land of Earl Giffard; he occurs also on the roll of 1195, in the Bailiwick of Caux, and was son of Geoffrey de Bléville (Blienvilla), the accomptant of the ferm of this land in 1180 and the year preceding. Hence the family will have had their surname from Blainville in the commune of Longueil, rather than from Blainville-sur-Ry, as suggested in my former Observations, in as much as the debtor is shown to have had his residence in this district. In the time of Philip Augustus Richard de Bléville was himself Bailiff of Caux, as appears from the heading In Ballia Ricardi de Bleville to a list of fiefs in Chauceio (Caux), transcribed in the reign of Philip Augustus from the return made in 1172, occasional notices of the then possessors, and of the escheats in the King's hands, being put in addition. William Rahier, Ranulph Le Martre, and Robert Lotrel rendered accompt of 17 li. 2s. 1d., the sum owing by them in 1195 of the residue of the sale of the Haye d'Arques,—the heir of John d'Auffay of 40 li. of the residue of the relief of the same John, and for which sum he had a discharge through Reginald des Ponts, who had the wardship—Richard de Montigny of 8 li. of the residue of the price of 200 oboli-weight of mace which his son William was appointed to carry into Germany and had not done so—and the inhabitants of Auffay of 29 li. 19s. 8d. of the Tallage set in the vill of Auffay prior to 1195, by Richard de Montigny and Richard Le Breton. Geoffrey de Say further rendered accompt of 27 li. for four muids and a half of wheat which he had received from William de Martigny of the rent of the forests, and 10 li. 14s. 7d. for 4 muids 7 minæ of oats of the rent of the same forests; he had also paid into the Treasury 3 li. 3s. derived from the chattels of felons in his Bailiwick, and 40 li. of the issue of the land of Walter de Denéstanville. Of the loan raised in the Bailiwick of Arques the sum was 337 li., which was by the Bailiff partly delivered into the Treasury, and partly made over to Geoffrey the money-changer, who accounted thereof. Geoffrey de Say likewise rendered accompt of 330 li. 17s. of the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of Arques toward the entrenchments of Eu, and of 614 li. 3s. 9d. of the Tallage set in the same Bailiwick to maintain the men serving in the March, and of 244 li. 3s. 2d. of another Tallage set in the same Bailiwick in like manner to maintain the men serving-at-arms; these sums, viz. in the Treasury 374 li. 5s. 10d.—to Drogo de Trubleville and Gislebert de Paris 300 li. of which they rendered accompt—in wages of 165 men-at-arms during eight days 55 li.—to Sawale Fitz-Henry and Matthew Fitz-Enard, for the works of the castle of La Roche, 246 li. 19s. 1d.—to Hugh de Gornai, from the men of his fief, 34 li. 6s. 10d.—in acquittance of the Canons of Rouen 16 li. 13s. 4d.—to the King in his chamber in the Isle d'Andely 108 li. 6s. 8d. constituted his outlay, leaving a debt of 53 li. 12s. 2d. And next is an accompt of the Bailiff for the sum of 583 li. 15s. 8d. of the sale of the Haye d'Arques, which he had delivered into the Treasury by two separate payments. Among the debtors in this Bailiwick several names recur which are found on the Roll of 1195, in the returns made by the Bailiff of Caux, and the præpositi of Dieppe; thus Ralph de Busca, Walter Cochie, Robert Plome, and Berenger de Kaisneio, who owed divers sums of the residue of the old ferm of Dieppe, which are charged to them in the return of the Præpositi of Dieppe for that year, and whose own accompt of the Prevôté dates back to 1180, are here put down for the like sums, as being now resident within the limits of the jurisdiction of the officer who had the ferm of the Vicomté of Arques. Other inhabitants of Dieppe are in like manner charged in this Bailiwick with the amount of their annual rent due to the crown in bezants, of the five years last past, that is to say, of a term prior to the concession of the Prevôté of Dieppe to the see of Rouen in exchange for the manor of Andely. Roger de Toenie owed 16 li. of the relief of his land of the Honour of Bellencombte, and Richard d'Equiqueville rendered accompt of 500 li. of his fine, toward the liquidation of which 260 li. had been paid in at the Treasury, and in the receipt of Geoffrey de Say of the mainpernors of the said Richard were 36 li. 15s., leaving

260 li. 5s. yet owing. Lastly, Geoffrey de Say rendered accompt of 22 li. 12s. of the view of the forests of Eauy and of Alihermont; in the Treasury were 8 li. 6s., in tythe to St. Amand de Rouen 2 li. 5s. 2d., and in wages to the viewers 6 li. 6s. had been paid, leaving 5 li. 14s. 10d. due, which sum was chargeable upon the land of the Comte of Eu. In the Register of Philip Augustus a record is transcribed, entitled, Inquisitio Johannis de Roboreto de Ballivia Archiarum, which is here set forth as containing evidence of the capture of Roger de Mortemer, before alluded to, and of the rights claimed by the Bailiff of Arques in Dieppe, subsequent to the Exchange of Andely. "When King Philip obtained Normandy he delivered the Bailiwick of Arques to John de Rouvray, and commanded him to treat the land of that Bailiwick as it had been treated, when it came to his hands. But the same John made enquiry upon this head, together with John des Préaux, William Martel, the Chamberlain Tancarville, Richard de Villequier, W. de Beuzeville, and many others who had held that land. John de Rouvray placed servientes of the Lord the King at Dieppe, and there took Roger de Mortemer, from whom the King had 1000 marks, and from a certain knight of his 50 marks, and from the ship which brought him 35 marks, and William de Wisca, who had conducted him, fled, and John de Rouvray seized his wife, and ransomed her at 2 li., which King Philip had. Moreover, he caused to be searched a certain vessel in which they of Chambly had thirty as well great as little hauberks and coverings of iron, and had them carried in store of the garrison at Arques. Moreover, he caused to be taken a certain fisherman, who was fishing in the river of Dieppe, which is wholly the King's down to the sea. The Burgesses of Dieppe rescued him from the servientes of the said John, who caused to be arraigned by wagers of battle thirty-four burgesses of Dieppe of the richer sort, and because they refused to have their cause adjudged by the said John, he caused a good watch to be put over the well of Dieppe, so that they could not have fresh water, and thereby distrained them so, that the burgesses made fine to the King in 4 li., which he had for the fine. When Archbishop Walter was dead the said John kept the regalia in the hands of the King, and caused him to have from the burgesses of Dieppe 4 li. and in this manner the said John held the land, as long as he had it in custody, without reclamation of the Archbishop or Chapter." William de Wisca, named in the above inquisition, occurs on this Roll of 1198 among the debtors in the Bailiwick of Arques, he owing 3 li. 10s. of the Tallage, assessed upon him as a burgess of Dieppe; and Walter, Archbishop of Rouen, mentioned in it as being then deceased, had died 16th Nov. 1207, which fixes the date of the instrument to a subsequent year.

William Malet rendered accompt in this year of 40 li. of the ferm of the Vicomté of Montivilliers, of which the abbey of St. Ouen de Rouen had 4 li. in tythe, and de consuetudine statuta one pound was set aside for the carriage of salt, and for the livery of a serviens conveying the salt to the Tower of Rouen; the remainder the Comte of Mortain had through the King's writ. It has been noticed elsewhere that the abbey of St. Ouen had tythe of the rent of Montivilliers appertaining to the land of Earl Giffard in 1180, but under whose grant the ferm of the Vicomté was subsequently made tytheable to the same religious house does not appear from existing evidences; in the year just named the Comtesse of Boulogne had the whole sum of 40 li. in the Vicomté of Montivilliers.

Ballia de Caletto per Henricum de Ponte Audemari et a tergo.

Henry de Pont-Audemer rendered accompt of the issues of the Bailiwick of Caux in this fiscal year, and first of 120 li. of the ferm of Le Grand Vicomté of Caux; in tythe to the Treasurer of Normandy 12 li. were paid as usual, and the remainder remitted to the Comte of Boulogne, who at this date was in alliance with Richard, and in right of his wife, Ida, had title to be paid a very large sum of money pro relaxanda pecunia comitatús Moritonii under a contract between King Henry II. and Matthew comte of Boulogne, her father, who had married the sister and heiress of William, son of King Stephen, Comte of Boulogne and Mortain and Earl of Surrey. The same Henry also rendered accompt of 6s. 4d. from Bourville, and 5s. from the terre de l'aumône in Grainville, and of 4s. for twelve capons in Louvetot, and of 25s. of the issue of the purprestures of Fécamp, and was acquitted of the sum at the Treasury. Among the debtors in this Bailiwick we may notice William de Martigny owing 49 li. 6d. of the residue of the old ferm of the Vicomté of the forests of Arques, and 175 li. of the residue of his fine—Richard Le Breton 48 li. of the residue of his fine—William Martel 52 li. of the issue of Epinay during two years, which sum he owed in 1195—Walter de Chanteloup 5 li. 11s. 3d. which he had taken in his land whilst it had been in the King's hands, whose debt is also on the Roll of 1195—the Abbess of Montivilliers 9 li. 6s. 8d. of a fief of two knights and of the third part of a knight, of which Richard de Montigny rendered accompt in the fourth year past, and William de Gornai 7 li. which he was bound to pay to the servientes who went in the King's service, but had not. Mabira Comtesse of Evreux rendered accompt of 380 li. of the residue of her proffer, and of 620 li. of her new proffer for having her land which the Chancellor had taken from her, and of 100 li. of her old proffer, making a sum of 1100 li.; a deposit in the Treasury of 900 li., and a payment to Sawale Fitz-Henry and Matthew Fitz-Enart for the works of the castle of La Roche of 200 li., under the King's writ, covered the whole amount and she was quit. The original proffer of the Comtesse of Evreux, for having the custody of the land of her son, has been already noticed in my Observations on the Roll of 1195, tit. Bailiwick of Caux de escaetis, in which year 500 li. remained due; yet it appears from an accompt entered upon a subsequent membrane that the Honour of Evreux was still retained in the King's hands. This proffer will therefore apply rather to the land of the Comte of Evreux in the pays de Caux, than to his demesne in the Evrecin; of the Honour of Gravenchon-en-Caux seven fiefs were held, of which the tenants owed ward at Evreux, and when they performed their service they sat at table with the Comte. It was in the year 1170 that, after the death of Robert son of William Earl of Gloucester, Amaury eldest son of Simon comte of Evreux, by the command and through the will of King Henry II., took to wife the eldest daughter of William Earl of Gloucester, who, dying in 1182, left his three daughters, the Comtesse of Evreux, the Countess de Clare, and Isabella, then in the King's wardship, his heirs. Amaury, Comte of Evreux, was deceased at the commencement of the year 1191, leaving his son of the same name under age, and Mabel his widow abovenamed surviving; but it is probable she had died before May 1200, at which date, as having inherited her eldest share of the earldom of Gloucester, Amaury, her son, was already invested with that title. Amaury, Earl of Gloucester, died without issue in 1214, and in the Register of Philip Augustus of the year 1220 sub tit. "Ballivia d'ni Gaufridi de Capella" the six knight's fees and a half, the land of the Comte of Evreux in Caux, are severally entered, which were then in the King's hands. On the Roll of Knight-service made up in 1172 the Comte of Evreux was of those who neither came nor sent nor said aught, but we find there this return from the abbess of Montivilliers; Abbatissa de Monasterio Vil-lariensi servitium iii militum et ad suum servitium v milites et tertiam partem militis. Richard de Montigny was Bailiff of Caux in 1195, and among his receipts from proffers, amercements, and fines is the sum of 12 li. from the Abbess of Montivilliers of the residue of the quartum due of her knights; but it would seem from the debt here entered that the contribution was to be levied in proportion to the service to herself over and above that owing by her to the King. A long list follows of such as were still indebted in this Bailiwick for the Tallage set by Richard Le Breton and Richard de Montigny prior to the year 1195, among whom Walter Archbishop of Rouen owed 12 li. 12s. in Cliponville and Envronville. Guérin de Glapion rendered accompt of 10 li. for the same in Roquefort and in Hericourt, and of 7 li. 2s. for the same in Sassetot, and of 2 li. 1s. for the same in Ouainville, and of 4 li. for the same in Craville, and of 14s. de jurea, and of 80 li. of the Tallage of the Honour of Annebecq, in all 103 li. 17s.; in the Treasury were 20s. and he yet owed 102 li. 17s. of which he rendered accompt on another roll, that is to say, on the last membrane of the Roll of this fiscal year, where are entered a few detached accompts of debtors in this Bailiwick. The heir of John de Mara was charged with several debts in this district, to wit, 7 li. of the tythe of Estrutart, 65 li. of the store of the castle of Alençon, 20 li. of the debt of Ralph, Bishop of Lisieux, and 7 li. 10s. of the land of the Parc d'Anxtot, but of which it is noted that he had rendered accompt in Auge; accordingly we find an accompt under that head on the back of membrane 5, in the names of Richard d'Yvetot and of Gislebert Fitz William, of the sum of 99 li. 10s. of the residue of the debts of John de Mara. At foot of the membrane on this side William Martel rendered accompt of 103 li. of the residue of his fine; toward its liquidation 10 li. had been paid in at the Exchequer through Geoffrey de Say, the remainder was still owing.

Item Ballia de Caletto.

Foresta de Romara.

In continuation of the accompts furnished by Geoffrey de Say, as Bailiff of Caux, we have an entry of the debt of Seher de Quincie, viz. 42 li. which he had taken from Symon de Morainville during the war, and Richard des Frênes rendered accompt of 44 li. which he had taken from certain servientes of the King of France; others again owed for horses carried off in like manner. The Earl de Clara rendered accompt of 125 li. 2s. 4d. of the residue of his Knights; in the Treasury were 8 li. and he owed the remaining sum. The family of this surname derived their descent from Gislebert comte de Brionne, at the time of whose murder his sons Richard and Baldwin were infants, and afterward for some time exiles in Flanders. When restored, the former had Bienfaite and Orbec and the latter Meules and Sap, of the inheritance of their parent, and having taken part in the conquest of England were rewarded with ample grants of territory. The castle of Tunbridge, in the shire of Kent, was the chief seat of Richard de Bienfaite at the time of the survey, and both he and his son and successor Gislebert are designated from this locality; but the latter having subsequently made the castle of Clare, in the shire of Suffolk, his chief residence, he and his posterity had name from this caput of his Honour. Roger de Bienfaite, second son, had after the decease of his father the land in Normandy, and having claimed also Brionne, because it had been held by his grandfather, the castle called Hommet was given to him through the advice of Robert, comte of Meulan, not indeed simply in consideration of this his claim being set at rest, but by reason also of a considerable sum of money, which the said Roger had given to the King on this behalf. Having died without leaving any issue, the castle of Hommet fell to the crown, but the patrimony of the family in Normandy devolved upon his nephew Gislebert, second son of Gislebert de Clare, whose elder brother Richard had succeeded his father in the Honour of Clare before 1131; in which year, under the name of Richard Fitz Gislebert, he rendered accompt of 43 li. 6s. 7d. for his land of Wales at the Exchequer. In the first year of the reign of King Stephen Richard Fitz-Gislebert was slain by the Welch, leaving issue, by a sister of Rannulph Earl of Chester, Gislebert de Clare, Roger, and Richard; of these the eldest was in his life-time Earl of the shire of Hertford, and being deceased A. D. 1152, 17 Steph. was buried at Clare, in the cell which Gislebert his grandfather had given to the monks of Bec. Roger, the next brother, was his successor both in the Honour and Earldom, and had to wife Matilda, daughter and heir of James de St. Hilaire-du-Harcouet, already noticed in my former Observations. The elder Gislebert de Clare, son of Gislebert, was for a time an active partisan of King Stephen, and was by him created Earl of the shire of Pembroke in Wales; he also held of his grant the castle of Pevensey in Sussex, which he forfeited in a subsequent quarrel with his benefactor. Dying in 1148, he was succeeded by Richard de Clare, his son by Elizabeth sister of Waleran Comte of Meulan, in the earldom of Pembroke, who had also not unfrequently title from the castle of Striguil (Chepstow) in the shire of Monmouth, the chief seat of an Honour, which after the forfeiture of Roger, Earl of the shire of Hereford, was made the land of Richard son of Comte Gislebert. During the contest with King Stephen, and for several years after the accession of Henry II., the Honour of Orbec had, it seems, been in the hands of Robert de Montfort in disinherison of the descendants of Richard son of Comte Gislebert, for in 1152-3 this Baron, having made prisoner his uncle, Waleran, comte of Meulan, at a conference held not far from the bourg of Bernai, confined him in the castle of Orbec; the same was forthwith besieged by the retainers of the Comte, but it was only after the castle of Montfort had been by him restored to his said nephew, that the Comte obtained his liberation. In 1172 the service of the Honour of Orbec was returned by the same Robert de Montfort at two knight's fees and a half, and ad suum servicium xi mil. vavasoria minus; but that it was ultimately restored to the heirs of Gislebert, first Earl of Pembroke, is manifest from its having devolved on William le Mareschal, who in right of his wife Isabella, daughter of Earl Richard and heir to her brother Gislebert, deceased in tender years, had the earldom of Pembroke 1 Ric. I. 1189. Prior to the reign of Henry II. the elder branch of the family of Clare apparently had no Honour in Normandy, but from the son's possession it may be assumed that a grant of certain land at St. Saens had been made to Earl Roger by that monarch; and such acquisition on his part explains the mistake of an early chronicler, who calls Matilda his wife, the daughter of James de Sancto Sidonio instead of de Sancto Hilario.⁷ Earl Roger de Clare died in 1173 and was succeeded in the earldom of Hertford by Richard de Clare, his son, then the husband of Amicia, daughter of William, Earl of Gloucester;⁸ whose land at St. Saens and Omonville was set at ferm in 1180, and in that year accounted for at the Exchequer by the Præpositi of St. Saens. His mother, Matilda, remarried William de Albini, Earl of the shire of Sussex, called also de Arundell

⁷ Tanner in Notitia Monastica, p. 352, sub tit. Field dallyng, com. Norf. says, "Maud de Harscolye temp. H. II. gave a manor here to the abbot and convent of Savigny in Normandy," where a corrupt reading for Harcouet otherwise St. Hilaire-du-Harcouet may be surmised. (Vide Observations on the Rolls of the Norman Exchequer, vol. I. p. lxxvii.)

from the castle of that name, the caput of his Honour. Richard son of Comte Gislebert, the common progenitor of the Earls of Hertford and Pembroke, had married Rohais, sister of Walter Giffard, Earl of the shire of Buckingham, the caput of whose Honour in Normandy was at Longueville in the pays de Caux; in the reign of Henry II. the issue of Walter failed, whereupon his land was seized into the King's hands, and for several years set at ferm to the King's officers. But in 2 Ric. I. 1191, William le Mareschal named above gave a fine of 2000 marks to the King for a moiety of the lands of Walter Giffard, sometime Earl of Buckingham, as having right to the same through his wife, descended equally with Earl Richard de Clare, from Rohais; and, it seems, the same year King Richard, by his charter, restored and confirmed to Richard de Clare, Earl of Hertford, and to William le Mareschal, and to Ysabella his wife, daughter of Earl Richard, the whole of the land which had been Earl Giffard's in England and in Normandy, so that to Richard de Clare, Earl of Hertford, shall remain the portion, as if eldest, and chief seat in England, and to William le Mareschal and to Ysabella his wife the portion, as if eldest, and chief seat in Normandy, and all other the land to be partitioned between them, and the moiety of the latter to be held in capite of the King and his heirs. This settlement was confirmed to the same parties by King John, 20th Apr. 1200, and pursuant thereto the castle of Longueville came to William le Mareschal, and was in his hands till the period of the conquest of Normandy, when by his deed, bearing date at Lisieux in the month of May 1205, he granted to the King of France the castles of Orbec, to place soldiers therein or otherwise as that King should think fit, and also to Osbert de Rouvray the castles of Longueville and Moulineaux, to be delivered over to the same King upon condition that, if before the middle of that month of May, he should repair to him and perform his homage for the same, then they should be rendered back to him; for which respite he gave 500 marks of silver.* Under this

* From the following charter of William, his successor, we learn that William, Earl of Pembroke, did homage for his land in Normandy to the King of France, and retained it in his possession till his death in 1219: Ego Guilielmus Marescallus, Comes de Pembroc, Notum facio universis quod ego voluntate mea propria donavi et quitavi Ricardo fratri meo minori natu totam terram quam Guill's Marescallus, pater meus, habebat et possidebat in Normannia ea die qua decessit, et requisivi d'n'm Philippum illustrem Francie Regem ut ipsum Ricardum fratrem meum recipiet in hominem suum ligium de tota terra illa, tali modo quod si idem Ricardus sine herede de uxore sua desponsata moriretur terra illa ad me rediret, et ego faciam pro ea d'no Regi Francie hominagium ligium citra mare et quicquid deberem eo modo et in tali puncto, in quo predictus Guill's pater meus fecit ei hominagium, scilicet, afferendo ei lit-

grant Earl Richard de Clare acquired a great extension of land in the pays de Caux, which prior to 1195 had been for a time in the King's hands, for in that year Gillebert de Marleiz rendered accompt of 22 li. 11s. 8d. of the issue of the land of the Earl de Clara, which had been restored, clear of the eleemosynary charges, and had paid this sum into the Treasury; which return is under the heading Item Ballia Caleti de escaetis. Other debtors in this Bailiwick were William de Martigny, William Le Chien, Richard de Mareuil, and Richard d'Equiqueville, in 200 li. for 25 muids, 4 setiers, 3 boisseaux, of wheat from the forests of Eauy and Alihermont, and in 37 li. 10s. for 15 muids, 2 setiers, 1 mine, of oats from the same forests—John de Erle in 100 li. of his fine, and Walter de Chanteloup in 16 li. of the old view of the same forests. Richard de Villequier rendered accompt of 170 li. of the residue of his proffer for having the custody of the boys of Gislebert de Lamberville, and of their land; in the Treasury were 10 li., and in the receipt of the Bailiff 100 li. had of his mainpernors, while of the remaining debt he again rendered accompt below on this membrane. A second deposit in the Treasury of 20 li. reduced the debt to 40 li., of which he once more rendered accompt, by reason that in the receipt of Henry de Pont Audemer written upon another Roll were 20 li. had of a mainpernor of the said Richard, wherefore he owed but 20 li.; this mainpernor was one Durand Filol, whose accompt will be found on the last membrane of this Roll. Lamberville is situate on the left bank of the river Vienne, above Bacqueville, and constituted a fief, held by a family who had the local surname prior to the conquest of England, when Gislebertus bestowed in monacharum S'ci Amandi presidio all the possessions which he had in Lamberville (Lamberti villa) and Saane-le-bourg (Sedana) which had been parcel of the alodium of his wife, when she was made a nun, viz. three churches and the freemen and husbandmen and two mills, lands, waters, and woods: below the memorial reciting this gift were two crosses, inscribed Signum Wil'pi comitis et Normannorum Ducis—Signum Nicholai de Bascavilla, with the names of the witnesses of the act, Seufredus chaplain, Wiger liegeman of Nicholas, Ralph Crispin, Turstin son of Wigrin, Walcherus Malpaisnace, teris Regis Angliæ, sicut pater meus fecit, et reddendo releveia qualia terra debet ad usus et consuetudines Normannie. Si vero terra illa ad me reverteretur, ego jurarem D'no Regi Francie quod ego redderem ei vel ejus certo mandato fortericias tocius terre predictæ ad magnam vim et parvam, quotienscumque ab ipso vel ejus certo mandato super hoc fuero requisitus. Quod ut firmum sit et stabile presentes litteras feci scribi et sigilli mei appositione muniri. Actum Meled'. Anno gratie mcc vicesimo, mense Junio. (*Ex Registr. Ph. and Gillebert the priest. The three churches were those of Lamber-ville, Herbouville, and Saane-le-bourg, and at the latter place a cell was established, which had the title of a priory. The heir of Gislebert apparently had name William, at least in 1220 we find this entry of the tenure, Willelmus de Lambertivilla ad Lambertivillam 1 feodum; in descheio xvs. propter dominium quod D'n's Rex tenet in manu sua. Ralph Martel rendered accompt of 8 li. 6s. 4d. of the residue of his relief, which being paid in at the Treasury he was quit; this baron, it is presumed, was son of Roger Martel, who in 1172 returned his service at one knight in Angerville with its appurtenances. In England Ralph Martel held land at Tattenhoe com. Bucks. and at Lillingston com. Oxon. which was in the King's hands, as an escheat of the Normans, until 21 Dec. 1215, when King John sent his writs to the Sheriffs of the two counties to restore these lands to Ralph Martel, the comrade of William des Préaux, which had been in the King's hands because he had remained with his enemies in Normandy. In the Register of Philip Augustus entry of his fiefs in the Bailiwick of Caux is made as follows: Radulfus Martel 1. feod. de Ducatu apud Angervill, heres Eustachii Portethein tenet de illo per plena arma—Idem Radulfus tenet dim. feod. de eschaeta apud Clevill, et apud Angervill, et apud Limanvill, et apud Tiorvill, et apud Tormovill-as-alloiers, et apud Villers, et apud Daubou, et apud Nevill. Idem Radulfus dim. feod. de feodo de Estotevill, ibidem et apud Hamervill, et apud Wallevill—Radulfus Martel dim. feod. de Abetot, de feodis Camerarii de Tancarvilla. Angerville, which was held by Ralph directly of the Duchy of Normandy, is a commune of the arrondissement of Ivetôt, and retains to this day the adjunct of La-Martel. The Chamberlain of Tancarville rendered accompt of 1168 li. 19s. 4d. of the residue of his debts; in the Receipt of the Exchequer of England were 266 li. 13s. 4d., money of Anjou, for 100 marks of silver, of the sum in which he was mainpernor for Robert de Ros, by writ of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who was at that time Justiciary, leaving a debt of 902 li. 6s. of which a further accompt is rendered on the last membrane of this Roll. Ralph, Chamberlain of Tancarville, was one of the witnesses to the charter for the exchange of Andely, 16 Oct. 1197, but was deceased without issue before the close of the year 1204, in which Philip, King of the French, first had the rule of Normandy. In England Hailes com. Glouc. was belonging to this family, and had escheated to the crown in 1204 as of the lands of the Normans; of this vill the church had been given to the abbey of St. Georges de Bocherville by William senior, Chamberlain of the King, before 1114; when King Henry I. confirmed to the said abbey the church of Hailes, with every thing belonging to it; as Richard, Bishop of London, had held it; and the same as free as William himself received it of the King's gift. In Normandy in 1172 the service of the Chamberlain of Tancarville was returned at ten knights, and ad suum servitium lxxx mil. et xiiii mil. et iii quart. mil.; in 1220, Feoda Camerarii de Tancarvilla, decem feoda de Ducatu, is the entry in the Register of Philip Augustus, and below is this memorandum: Sciendum est autem quod Camerarius tenet in manibus suis, hos, scilicet, Tancarvill cum pertinentiis—Manvill cum pertinentiis—Hallebos cum pertinentiis—Manchouvill cum pertinentiis—Mesedon cum pertinentiis—Oistrechan cum pertinentiis, et de istis maneriis multa dividuntur in pluribus locis. William Malet rendered accompt of 369 li. 7s. 4d. of the residue of his debts; in the Treasury were 20 li. and in the receipt of the Exchequer of England, 266 li. 13s. 4d. money of Anjou, for 100 marks of silver, of the sum in which he was mainpernor for Robert de Ros, by writ of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who was then Justiciary, leaving 82 li. 15s. for the balance owing, of which a second accompt is rendered, and a further receipt of 15 li. sterling for 60 li. money of Anjou, at the Exchequer of England by writ of Geoffrey Fitz-Piers, then Justiciary of England, noted. This change of officers in England occurred during the fiscal year to which these accompts have been ascribed, King Richard having by his charter, dated July 11, 1198, apud Bellum castrum de Rupe, discharged from the office of Justiciary, at his own solicitation, Hubert, Archbishop of Canterbury, and appointed in his stead Geoffrey Fitz-Piers. The Honour of William Malet, in the pays de Caux, was named of Gravelle (Gerardivilla) from the commune so called, near Harfleur, its caput, and had been in the tenure of an ancestor, who bore the local surname, in 1172, the return of the service made pursuant to the Inquisitio in that year, being thus entered on the Roll in the name of a Matthew de Gravelle, Mattheus de Gerardivilla servitium iiii mil. et ad suum servitium xii mil. et dim.^b In the Liber Niger Scaccarii, the Carta Mathæi de Gerardivilla occurs among the certificates drawn up in 1168, by those owing Knight-service in Hertfordshire, where he was tenant in capite of a single fief of the old feoffment, of which no portion had been subinfeudated. This fief was apparently inherited by William ^b Matthew de Gravelle gave to the abbey of Valasse a pound weight of salt at Leure, on the bank of the river Seine in front of Gravelle, as did also Comte Giffard.

Malet of Graville, and identical with his lands in Linlea (Lilley) and Wilya (Willian) in that county; which were set to ferm to Matthew de Lilley for 30 li. by brief of the Justiciary in 1204, as escheats of the Normans. William Malet rendered accompt, on the preceding Roll of the year 1195, in the Bailiwick of Caux, of 5 li. 10s. de quarto due of the land of his mother's dower, when a moiety of the debt was by him paid in at the Treasury; and he is also known as the founder of a priory of Austin canons in the church dedicated to Ste. Honorine at Graville, to whom he gave in perpetual alms all the churches of his lands, as well in Normandy as in England, which belonged to his gift, entitling himself in his charter William Malet de Girardivilla. Beside the fief in Hertfordshire, he had in England other possessions in the county of Lincoln, and the Sheriff of the same had the King's command, dated 3 Nov. 6 Joh. 1204, to cause William de Lunda, a knight of Roger de Mubray, to have fifteen librates of land extended in Coleby, which had been the land of William Malet of Graville, reserving the stock and crops to the crown. This same land was successively transferred by royal grants to Oliver de Albini, Ralph de Trubleville, and William Chaperun, in the time of which last occupier, 27 Hen. III. 1242, the jurors of the wapentake of Boothby found as follows, Wilhelmus Caperun tenet in Coleby tam in dominico quam in homagio xix carucatas terre ex dono d'ni Regis de terris Normannorum, sed nescitur per quod servitium tenet. Sed tenet de Honore Britannie, et data fuit dicta terra antiquitus in maritagio cum Thephania filia comitis Stephani, et iterum data fuit in maritagio cum Oliva sorore Will'i camerarii de Tancarvill. Rabel de Tancarville held lands in Lincolnshire, and the Priory of S'te Barbe-en-Auge had there of his gift ten librates of land in the soke of Grantham, viz. at Colsterworth 5 li., at Oxston and Somerby 4 li., and in the mill of Stokes 1 li.; his son had name William de Tancarville, and to him, it is presumed, this land was given in frank-marriage with his daughter Theophania, by Stephen of Brittany, Earl of the shire of Richmond. Of the issue of this marriage will have been Ralph, his successor, who died childless, William the Chamberlain de Tancarville, Lucia wife of Richard de Vernon, and Oliva named above, who had again this land in frank-marriage. The name of her husband has not been ascertained, but she was doubtless the mother of William Malet of Graville, whose connection with the family of Tancarville is shewn by his making the canons of Ste. Barbe-en-Auge, a priory of their foundation, participants with the residents at Graville in the election of a prior of that house at each vacancy.^c William Malet of Gravelle married Philippa, daughter of John Comte of Alençon, and relict of William de Roumare, by whom she had no issue, and in her son Robert Malet eventually centered the right to the inheritance of a share of the demesnes of the Comte of Alençon. His father died whilst he was yet in tender years, and had interment in the middle of the choir of the church of Ste. Honorine; after whose decease his widow had to her third husband, William des Préaux, in whose custody the Honour of Gravelle continued during the minority of the heir. In a copy of the Roll of Knight-service in 1172, transcribed subsequently to the conquest by the French monarch, after the entry of the service of Matthew de Gravelle, as above extracted, follows the notification

^c The recurrence of the name of Theophania, in the pedigree of the family of Malet, may in some measure be taken as corroborative of the descent of the manor of Coleby through the alliances here spoken of, nor are the details furnished by the record from which this fact has been learnt without interest in illustration of the proceedings respecting property in England after the separation of Normandy. In 25 Hen. III. 1241, Thomas de Pavyly was summoned in the King's court to show by what warranty he held the manor of Wylie, com. Hertf. which ought to be in the King's hands as his escheat, and Roger de Pavyly was summoned in like manner in regard of the manor of Linlegh in the same county. These parties alleged that the King had received their homage, and, moreover, that the said manors were not escheats, because a certain Theofania de Pavyly, their grandmother, and mother of Thomas de Pavyly, their father, had been seized of the same as of fee by right and by the gift of a certain Geoffrey Malet, brother of the said Theofania in the time of King John, father of the reigning King, and had held the said manors until she had been disseised in war time by Payn de Chahurz (Cahore), who had them in his possession, so that when the war was over the said Theophania impleaded the said Payn for the said manors and died before sentence had. The replication on the part of the crown by Giles de Argentan alleged on the contrary that William Malet, eldest brother of the said Geoffrey, which Geoffrey died in the Holy Land, was in seisin of the said manors after the death of the said Geoffrey, so that when Normandy was lost King John seized the said manors into his hands, because the said William remained in Normandy in the allegiance of the King of France; and that the said Theophania was not the heir of the said William, because he had many heirs of his own body, nor, indeed, had the said Geoffrey ever been seized of the said manors, in proof of which allegation a charter of King John was adduced. In their rejoinder the parties reasserted the fact of their homage, and added that the said manors were not escheats because Reginald de Pavyly was heir apparent of the said Theophania, son of Thomas de Pavyly, son of the said Theophania. The sentence passed in favour of the crown, because in the roll of the Chancery it was found that the King had delivered the said manors de ballivio suo during pleasure to the Earl of Lincoln, who re-delivered them to the said Thomas and Roger, to whom the King granted to hold the said manors de ballivio dicti Comitiss, so that they should not be disseised, except by judgment of the King's court; and because, unless the said manors were escheats, neither could nor ought the King to have received their homage, seeing that they were not heirs, living Reginald, their eldest brother.

Guillelmus de Pratellis habet ; and again in a roll of contemporary date we read, Guillelmus de Pratellis viii milites pro Guerarvilla—Guillelmus Malet de Girardivilla iiii mil. quos Guillelmus de Pratellis tenet. Philippa de Romara, daughter of John Comte of Alençon, in the year 1214 in the month of August, gave to the priory of Graville the chapel of Blessed Mary de la Salle (de aula) in the parish of St. Croix de Montaignu in the diocese of Coutances, which she had founded ; and some religious having been there established, Bishop Hugh and the chapter of Coutances, by their deed dated the same year, took this cell under their protection. In the Register of Philip Augustus, compiled in 1220, this fief of Montaignu is twice entered, in the names both of Robert Malet and William des Préaux, as follows, Robertus Malet tenet Montemacutum de Comite Alançon per servicium ii mil. et dim. quod Regi facit per manum Comitis—Guillielmus de Pratellis tenet feodum de Monteacuto de comite Roberto de maritaggio uxoris sue per servicium ii mil. de quo servicio non respondet nisi dicto Comiti. In the same Register this entry is made of the tenure of the lord of Graville ; D'n's de Gerarvill viii feoda et de Ducatu iii feoda, et de istis tenent Radulfus de Kenonvill ii feod. apud Kenonvillam et apud Putot et apud Watetot, que villa est in manu D'ni Regis, et Will's de Esmalevill i feod. apud Esmalevill. Mater Eustachii Torbet dim. feod. apud Hamvill et ibidem dim. feod. quod est in manu d'ni Regis. Illa iii feoda de Ducatu sedent apud Gerarvill, apud Fontes, et apud Sanwic et apud Quesevill, et ista tenet D'n's de Gerarvill in manu sua ; et de aliis predictis feodis tenent Eustachius de Colevill i feod. apud Colevillam, Radulfus de Torrevill i feod., Will's de Brueria i feod. apud Gonnevill et apud Fovill, Rogerus de Briautel i feod. ibidem, Will's de Mesnil i feod. apud Le Mesnil. Mention has been already made of William des Préaux as being in company with Ralph Martel in England in 1215, and in that year a writ, dated 26th Oct., was issued, directing the Sheriff of Lincoln to cause William des Préaux to have full seisin of the manor of Coleby with its appurtenances quod est de feodo uxoris sue. By charter, dated 19 Mar. 1216, King John granted to his beloved and faithful William des Préaux all the land of William de Lanvaley and all the land of Ralph de Rochester, and if not able to warrant to him the said lands, it to be at the King's election either to restore to him the islands of Gerseye for the service heretofore due, or else to assign to him 300 librates of land in England, and he to do the same service which he would have done if he had had the said isles ; and by a second charter of the same date the King granted to him and his heirs the manor of Alton, com. South.^d William des Préaux afterward took part with the insurgent nobles, but

^d The grant of the manor of Alton was apparently made to him as entitled to the succession of his brother Peter des Préaux, to whom King John by his charter, dated at Roche d'Orival 14 Jan. 1200, had granted the islands of Gerse, and of Gernere, and of Aurene, and sixty librates of land in sterlings in Alton in England, and one hundred pounds rent, money of Anjou, in Rouen, viz. in the stalls of the market of Rouen, and in the fair of the Pardon, and in the fair of Notre Dame du Pré, to have and to hold of him by the service of a fief of three knights until the earldom of the Isle of Wight devolve upon him with the daughter and heir of William Earl of the Isle, whom the King had granted to the said Peter, or until provision had been made for him to their mutual gain in some other marriage. But whatsoever might be the result as to his marriage, or in case he should first happen to go the way of all flesh, the grant of the rent in Rouen, now made to him by the King, was in such form as to enable him to confer the same of his own free will upon religious communities. If, on the other hand, the King should chance to die before the said marriage should have been assigned to him, it was the will of the King that he and his heirs after him should have and hold the said islands, and the said land of his the said King's heirs, for the said service. It was also granted that he, the said Peter des Préaux, or those to whom he should have given that rent, should have their own serjeant to receive those 100 librates, together with the mayor of Rouen, or with those who should be in his stead, any deficiency to be made up to him out of the Vicomté of Rouen. Of these grants he had also other charters of confirmation, dated at Angers 21 Jun. next following, at the hands of the same monarch, and he accordingly became the husband of Maria, eldest daughter of William de Vernon, Earl of the Isle of Wight; to whom, however, a son was born in his old age, shortly after the date of this marriage, whose birth arrested the contemplated descent of the earldom upon his daughters, though it ultimately devolved on the issue of the eldest. Peter des Préaux was deceased between 9 John 1209 and 18 Joh. 1212, in which last regnal year Robert de Curtenay fined in 1200 marks with the King for the manor of Sutton, and for marrying the daughter of the Earl of the Isle of Wight, and for having the homages of the lands of his mother. Of the first marriage that there was no issue is apparent from the manor of Alton having at its dissolution reverted to the crown; though, as widow of Peter des Préaux, Maria de Curtenay laid claim to have her dower in the same; and in the next reign 20 li. annually were granted to her by the King during pleasure, out of the Exchequer, in name thereof. Writs issued to the Treasurer and Chamberlains in each several term for payment of 10 li. to Maria de Curtenay on that behalf occur on the Rolls, of which the earliest on record is dated 13 May 7 Hen. III. 1223. The tenure of William des Préaux of the manor of Alton is thus set forth in an inquisition concerning the Hundred of Alton, com. Suh't. taken in the reign of King John toward its close and inserted in the Testa de Nevill: "Will's de Pratellis tenet villam de Awelton per servicium trium militum et habet eam pro 123 li. annuatim," being the same amount of service as had been enjoined his brother under the royal grant. Previous to his marriage with the widow of William de Romara, William des Préaux had fined with the King for having the relict of Reginald de Curtenay with her land, when his eldest brother, John des Préaux, became his bondsman; but on the Norman Roll 2 Joh. 1200 entry is made of a gift by the latter to the King of a silver cup of the weight of six marks to be quit of the bond into which he had entered, and that the fine be not kept but be struck off the Roll of the Lord the King; and an order to this effect was sent to Guérin de Glapion, Seneschal of Normandy, and to the abbot of Caen. The relict of Reginald de Curtenay senior had name Matildis, and together with her sister Hawisia had right to the succession of the Honour of Oakhampton

1 Hen. III. he was one of the perversi reversi, whereupon writs were issued, 23 Sept. 1217, to the Sheriffs of the counties of Southampton, Lincoln, and Hertford, to cause him to have restitution of his land. On the Close Roll, 8 Hen. III., writs to the officers of the Treasury, dated 9 Nov. 1223 and 4 May 1224, are transcribed for livery by them to Maria, relict of William des Préaux, of 10 li. on each occasion toward payment of the money due to her by reason of dower out of the manor of Alton; but the name of William is here put in error for Peter, as it can be shewn that Maria, who had been the wife of Peter des Préaux, his brother, had 20 li. per annum rent from the crown in the name of dower in Alton at this time. Moreover, William des Préaux was not yet deceased; on 1 May 8 Hen. III. 1224, he had an order for 10 li. on the officers of the Treasury to support himself in the King's service, and the same sum was ordered to be paid to him 8 May 1226, for the 20 li. per ann. he received at the Exchequer for the town of Aulton. At an interval of some years from hence, viz. 26 Hen. III. 1242, the King received the homage of Robert Malet of all the lands and tenements, which belonged to him by hereditary right in his kingdom; and the Sheriff of Lincoln, by writ dated 23 Feb. in that year, was commanded to give him seisin of the manor of Coleby, with its appurtenances, of which William Malet, his father, had been seized as of fee on the day he died. Through the same act of homage he had also restitution of the manor of Lilley, com. Herts, which, 28 Hen. III.

com. Devon, of which Hemington, com. Som. was a chief member. She had, it seems, evaded the wish of the King to force her to a marriage with William des Préaux, and gone abroad, for we find on the roll 5 Joh. 1203 a memorandum that the King's letters patent for safe conduct in coming and returning within the quindenies of St. Martin were granted to her in that year; and the same were renewed in the following year for a term continuing from the Thursday before the feast of St. Peter ad vincula until the feast of St. Michael. Meanwhile, by charter, dated at Morfarville 27 Nov. 1203, the King granted to his beloved and faithful William des Préaux the land of Sap in Normandy and the Honour of Oakhampton, with their several appurtenances, to have in his holding, until an exchange should be made to him elsewhere by the counsel of the King and of his own friends, unde se de jure pacatum tenere debuerit. By reason of this his temporary possession of the Honour, the manor of Hemington occurs on the Roll of the Valor terrarum Normannorum, under the heading Terra Willelmi de Pratellis, and which same manor the Sheriff of the county of Somerset, by writ dated 23 Jul. 1204, was commanded to deliver over to Roger de Punchardon, to whom the King had committed the custody of the Honour of Oakhampton. Matilda, Lady of Sap, widow of Reginald de Curtenai, gave to God and S. Mary of Bec, and the monks there serving God, for her redemption and the souls of her ancestors and heirs, and for the soul of her husband Reginald de Courtenai, in free and perpetual alms, 100 solidate of annual rent in her frevoité of Sap, to be received by the hand of the Prevôt of Sap at two terms, to which charter Richard of Oakhampton was a witness.

1244, was granted by the King to Paulinus Peyvre, after the death of Robert Malet; and probably from such time as he died all connection of the Norman family of Malet with their hereditary possessions in England will have ceased, in default of a renewal of homage by his heir. The Bailiff of Caux was an accomptant in this year of 20s. of the Tallage of Hoarvilla (Eurville), where was a Priory, a cell to the abbey of Tréport, and of the issues of the land of Ralph Hose in Lintot and of George Néel at Courval. Geoffrey Ridel paid 20s. because he withdrew from the Exchequer without leave, and William de Trubleville (Thouberville) rendered accompt of 11 li. 12s. 11d. of the residue of the issue of the vill of Radepont, and of 14 li. 16s. of the Tallage set in the Roumois toward fortifying the castle of Eu, and of 20 li. 8s. 4d. which he had of the Tallage in the same district to maintain men-at-arms in the March, and of 33 li. 6s. which he had of the issue of Limai, and of 16 li. 16s. 4d. which Osbert de Rouvray gave to him to acquit himself at the Exchequer, and of 10s. which the same Osbert gave him, and of 32s. for 32 minæ of oats of the Bernage of Pavillie and L'Escure in the past year. The sum of these debts was 67 li. 9s. 1d.; in the Treasury were 29 li. 11s.—in wages of two sentinels and one porter sojourning at Radepont during the war for 263 days in the past year 33 li. 2s. were awarded by the King's writ, and 3 li. 15s. 6d. was the residue yet owing. Helouis de Vennesval (Esneval) rendered accompt, as in 1195, of 200 li. of the ferm of the land of her husband, out of which she had 40 li. allowed for the sustenance and raiment of her three sons, the remainder being by her paid in at the Treasury; she also this year rendered accompt of 30 li. of a fief of three knights de duobus quadragesimis, i. e. of forty days' service, of which 20 li. were in the Treasury, and Geoffrey de Sausseusemare had 10 li. for the service of one knight, which he performed. The fief of Esneval is among the returns of service in 1172, where is this entry, Robertus de Wesneval iii mil. et ad suum servicium xii mil. et iii partem mil.; the castle, its caput, was situate in the vicinity of Pavilly. By writ to the Barons of the Exchequer, 9 Jan. 1202, King John made known to them that he had acquitted Robert de Esneval of 80 li. money of Anjou, which sum was owing by him of the arrears of his land, which his mother owed to the King, whilst the land of the said Robert was in her hands, and of which she was accustomed to answer to the King. Henry de Pont-Audemer next rendered accompt of 10 li. for a sumpter horse with trappings, which the Bourg of Fécamp owed to the King when the Host of Normandy was summoned, and of 60 li. money of Anjou, of the sale of eight casks of the King's wine; the last mentioned sum had been paid to Helyas Bernard and Peter des Roches in the King's chamber, and the former delivered in at the Treasury. The same officer also rendered accompt of the loan set in his Bailiwick, which had produced the sum of 2050 li.; in the Treasury were 109 li. and to Geoffrey the Money-changer 1647 li. had been made over, of which he owed an accompt, whilst in the cost of conveying the King's wines from Leure to Rouen, and to the royal castles, 40 li.,—in repayment to the Comte of Boulogne of the monies which had been taken in his land 120 li., and to Robert Fitz-Aelard for the works of the bridge of Portjoie 100 li., were the several sums defrayed pursuant to the King's writ, leaving a surplus of 34 li. still owing, charged upon certain individuals named and upon himself: of his own debt an accompt follows, on which he was quit, and on the last membrane are other accompts in the name of two of the debtors for the sums here put down to them, references to which are interlined. His next accompt was of 1148 li. 19s. of the Tallage set for the entrenchment of Eu by himself and Goubert de Gravençon and William de Raclif; in the Treasury were 3 li. 17s. and to Geoffrey the Money-changer 1019 li. 2s. had been delivered of which he owed an accompt, whilst the remainder was covered by these sums being remitted, viz. to William de Munchensy for the works of the castle of Radepont 60 li.—to William de R in payment of the debt which was due to him of the assize of his land 6 li., and to the Earl of Leicester by reason of the exemption of the men of his fief 60 li. under the King's writ. Of the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of Caux by the same Henry de Pont-Audemer to maintain men-at-arms in the March he rendered accompt of 1858 li. 10s., of which sum 45 li. 11s. 9d. was his deposit in the Treasury, whilst by writ he had paid to Helyas Bernard for the King's Privy-purse 1600 li.—and for the wages of 200 servientes for eight days 66 li. 13s. 4d.—to the Earl of Leicester, to the Comte of Eu, to Hugh de Gornai, to the Hospital of Rouen, and to the Brethren of the Temple, the several sums due of the men of their respective fiefs, and was quit. Lastly the Bailiff rendered accompt of the issues from the chattels of felons, and of the aide de l'ost from the fiefs of Gislebert Kaillot, Ralph Martel, Hugh Talebot, Geoffrey Talebot and Peter de Toupin, of whom the two last held of the fief of the Comte of Evreux; the receipts amounted to the sum of 54 li. 12s. 6d. which had been delivered in at the Treasury, and he was quit. In the list of Infeudaciones Militum in 1172, under the headings In Ballivia Galfridi de Blevill de Caletto, we have the possessors of these fiefs at that date thus enumerated, Richardus Talebot servitium 1 mil.—Guillelmus Caillot 1. m. de feodo de Gonfrevilla—Rogerus Martel 1 mil. in Angervilla cum pertinentiis, and in the transcript of the same list made after the separation of Normandy, the heading is In Ballia Ricardi de Blevill, and Rex habet is written after Gonfrevilla; in the Register of Philip Augustus A. D. 1220, we read Petrus de Brueria i feod. de Ducatu apud Gonfrevilla-Callot. William de Martigny, already mentioned, rendered accompt of 3000 li. of his fine newly entered into in the course of this year; in the Treasury three deposits had been made of 51 li. 10s., of 200 li., and of 39 li. 18s., and these sums had gone in disbursements under the King's writ, viz. to Sawale Fitz-Henry and Matthew Fitz-Enard for the works of the castle of La Roche 1500 li.—to Geoffrey de Val-Richer (the Money-changer) 80 li., of which he rendered accompt—to Magister Roscelin and Magister Iter and to Alan de Hartland sent to the Comte of Flanders 50 li.—in the expenses of the Duke of Saxony at Rouen and at Eu 78 li. 12s., leaving 1000 li., the balance yet owing by the Accomptant. This memorandum on the back of a membrane of the Roll of Normandy 2 Joh. 1200, in connection with the above enormous fine, may be adduced in proof of the extent of the usurious transactions of this personage in the character of a money-lender; it reads Hæc sunt debita quæ Senescallus Normanniæ mandavit domino quæ debebantur Willelmo de Martigneyo, with the list as follows, Abbot of Valmont 200 marks less one, Henry de Stuteville 400 li., Gilebert de Mallet 30 li., Abbot of St. Vandrille 5 li., Bernard de Jumiéges 5 li., Eustace de Greinville 12 li., Durand Hastrey 20s., Geoffrey de Say Roger Pancevellt Roger Pauper Eustace le Meunier 4 li.; all names of debtors residing in the pays de Caux, where was situate the vill from which the lender had his local surname. Henry the younger, son of Henry the Lion, Duke of Bavaria, and of Matilda, daughter of Henry II. King of England, to the title of Comte Palatine of the Rhine joined that of Duke of Saxony, which he assumed as the head of his house, although he never recovered possession of the Duchy. Born in the year 1170, and married to Agnes only daughter of Conrad of Suabia in 1193, he was invested with the Palatinate of the Rhine by the Emperor Henry VI. in 1196; in the following year he set out with the Duke of Brabant for the Holy Land, and on his return in 1198 was entertained by his uncle King Richard in his castle of La Roche d'Andely, whence his course homeward was directed from Rouen to the frontier of Normandy at Eu. His younger brother Otho, comte of Poitou, had in the meantime been elected King of the Romans at Cologne, the ceremony of whose coronation took place at Aix-la-chapelle, 4 Jul. 1198, when Henry, Duke of Saxony, was present.

Philip de Colombières separately rendered accompt through Ranulph Bruman of 50 li. of the ferm of the forest of Roumare in this year, as he had done in 1180, when Robert Le Clerc was his deputy, as also of 2 li. for one muid of mead from the same forest, and of 2 li. 10s. 2d. of the purprestures, and of 2 li. 9s. 8d. of the residue of the issues from the sties and from the pannage of the same. The tythe of the ferm was paid to the monks of La Pré as heretofore, and in acquittance to the abbey of St. Georges de Boscherville of what had been the issue from an alder-grove that the King had given to the monks, twenty shillings were deducted, which were to be henceforth computed in the ferm of the forest; on the other hand, the accomptant had made over to Geoffrey the Money-changer the several sums of 45 li. and 10 li., who owed thereof an accompt, being a surplus over his receipt of 2 li. 10s. 2d., for which he had credit below, where he renders accompt of a sum of 10 li. of the proceeds from the eight sties of the forest of Roumare. Though Philip de Colombières was quit upon the balance of his accompts for the current year, he owed 12 li. 6s. 10d. of the residue of the old ferm of the forest of Roumare of the fourth year past, i. e. in 1195, on the Great Roll of the Exchequer of which year there is no entry of any accompt of the ferm of the forest or its issues. The clause of the charter of Richard I., by which this alms was appropriated to the abbey, is thus worded, preterea dedimus eis (Deo et abbacie Sancti Georgii de Balkiervilla et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus) in puram et perpetuam elemosinam de dono nostro proprio alnetum et prata et terras, omnes et universa, que habuimus in dominico nostro sub villa Sancti Georgii de Balkiervilla, ita quod illa habeant bene et in pace, integre, plenarie, honorifice et in perpetuum; and the said charter bears date at Jumiéges, 18 May, "ninth year of our reign," given by the hand of Eustace Bishop of Ely, these being witnesses, John Archbishop of Dublin, Herbert Bishop of Salisbury, Philip Bishop of Durham, John comte of Mortain, William Le Mareschal, Walter Fitz-Piers de la Celle, Rogon de Sassey and William de Mortemer. Hence it appears that the domain of the crown and the limits of the forest of Roumare were inclusive of the vill of St. Georges, and in fact the earliest endowment of a church on this site was through an act of William Duke of the Normans, confirming to it the tythe of the said vill and the circumjacent lands, which the canons of the same place had purchased, to be annexed in allodium to the said church; of his gift also was the land of Bertrannus, his swineherd, in aid of the stipends of the canons, and the land of Tillol, which he granted to them for the repose of the soul of Richard: his wife, likewise, bestowed on the same canons in Brunetot twenty acres of land and three possessors of property in allodium. The canons had purchased from Richard son of Gozelin for 5 li. the mesnil of Turgot, which was situate in the place where the aforesaid church stood, as also thirty acres of arable land from William son of Theobald in the vill called Montigny in the forest of Roumare. The small church of St. Georges was subsequently rebuilt by Ralph, whom Duke William styles in his charter meus magister auleque et camere mee princeps, and the necessary buildings for offices added, which were required by the religious there established. This officer also caused the same church to be newly dedicated, on which occasion he ratified by his signature to the church and canons for their support in the presence of his wife and sons, Ralph and Rabel, six acres of meadow of his own allodium in Quevillon, over and beside the allodium of St. Georges, and in Boscherville the land of Ingulf father of Hoel and the land of Turgerius, which land his father Giraldus and his brothers had given to St. Georges. A brother of Ralph, named Giraldus, was also an officer of the household, and it was coram Geraldo dapifero meo that William, Duke of the Normans, commanded that the convention between Hugh de Pavilly and the canons of St. Georges, respecting the tythe of the land and demesne of the former at Pavilly, should be ratified; to the terms of which agreement are named as witnesses the same Giroldus and Robert, his son. In the name of the Holy and Undivided Trinity Geroudus, soldier of Christ, made known to all men that by the concession of Robert, his son and his heir, he had granted and given for the redemption of his soul and that of Albereda his wife, who had died on the 21st day of May, to the nuns of St. Amand of Rouen the church of Roumare, and all the tythe belonging to it and five acres of land and five hôtes in Gonneville (Gonnorvilla) without any reservation of service; all which he gave as free and quit as he had held them, and hereof were witnesses Maurilius archbishop of Rouen, Michael bishop of Avranches, Renerius abbot of the Holy Trinity, Ralph brother of Geroudus, Hugh Broc, Osbertus de Neuf-marché (de Novo-foro), Hugh son of Baudricus, Roger de Monte-geimerico, Robert de Camera, and others. This alms was subsequently regranted in presence of William, King of the English, and by his consent, but with a reservation of one third of the tythe in the holding of the priest serving the church ; moreover, along with the aforesaid gifts, he conceded to St. Mary and to St. Amand the tythe of four mills, two in the vill of Dun and two in the vill of Barentin, as also the tythe of his toll at Arques and of his market at Dun, Fulbert the Archdeacon, Alan Rufus, and Robert son of Roger de Beaumont, being in addition to the above named among the witnesses. For these things the nuns gave to Geroldus 71 li. in money, which Ralph de Montvilla had, and Helisendis his wife had an ounce of gold, and Hugh Fitz-Baldric 34s., being witnesses Osbern de Neufmarché, Walter the priest and Droco de Poissi. At the foot of the roll, upon which this memorial of benefactions to St. Amand was transcribed were crosses, the signatures of William, King of the English, of Matildis the Queen, of Gerold the giver, of a Robert son of another Robert, and of William his son. Ralph de Montvilla had his surname from a neighbouring vill in the Roumois, and was probably akin to Gerold and Ralph, holding of the fief of the latter the vills of Beaucamp and Anxetot, the churches and tythes of which the sons of Ralph, viz. Ralph, Nigel and William, with Avicia their mother, gave to the canons of St. Georges for the soul of Ralph, upon such condition that they should render no other service, merely offering up prayers of supplication to the Lord for the soul of Ralph and of his ancestors and successors. Hocque firmatum est, continues the record, vivente audiente et annuente Radulfo filio Geraldii, uxoreque et filiis ejus Radulfo et Rabello. At the period of the Domesday Survey Nigellus de Monneville had in York the house of a certain monetarius, and from him sprung the family of this surname seated in the county of Warwick, and holding a Knight's fee of the Honour of the Earl of that shire. About the year 1065 Duke William, at the instigation of Roger de Montgomery, committed the frontier fortress of Neuf-marché-en-Lions to Hugh de Grantemesnil and to Gerold the Seneschal, giving to the former one moiety, and subjecting the fief of Gerold in the Roumois to service at Neufmarché as the condition of his tenure of the other moiety. Robert, son of Gerold, at the time of the compilation of Domesday, had lands in England in the shires of Dorset, Somerset, Wilts, Hants, and Berks, of which many were already subinfeudated, but at Corf and Povington, com. Dors., at Brimpton, com. Berks., and at East Camel, com. Som., the tenure was in demesne. In the charter of Henry II. for confirmation of the grants made to the abbey of Bec, we have these recitals, de dono Matildis Imperatricis matris meæ in foresta Romare 5 li.—de dono Roberti filii Gerardi manerium in Anglia, quod dicitur Pountton.

At the manor so given, in the parish of West Tineham in the Isle of Purbeck, was afterward an alien priory, which, 6 Joh. 1204, by the name of Povinctona, terra Abbatis de Becco, was among the lands valued by inquest, which belonged to the Normans.^e Roger son of Gerold, brother of the above, in the reign of William Rufus, acquired a large inheritance in Lincolnshire in right of his wife, Lucia, who had the succession of her father, Ivo Tailbois, and of Thorold, sheriff in the time of Edward the Confessor.^f Having survived him, Lucia remarried

* Among the witnesses to the charter of William, Marchio et dux Normannorum, made at the request of Odo bishop of Bayeux, his uterine brother, and in the presence of his wife Matildis, and his sons Robert and Richard, by the common consent of all of them, for the redemption of their souls, to the cathedral of Bayeux concerning the land called Bernières, which the Bishop had purchased from William de Courcelles and from Roger, a knight of Ralph the Chamberlain, with the permission of his lord, we have the names of Gerardus Dapifer and Radulfus Camerarius. Again, in the grant of Robert Duke of the Normans and comite of the Manceaux to the same cathedral of whatever land was contained between the river Aure and the Elle, from the old bridge until the same river reaches the sea, exception is made in favour of the land of William the Chamberlain and of Robert son of Girard; which charter is dated at Vernon, 24th Apr. 1089.

^f In the Cottonian collection is an original charter, dated at Devizes, by which Henry Duke of Normandy and Comte of Anjou in 1152 granted to Rannulf, Earl of Chester totum honorem de Eia, sicut Robertus Malet avunculus matris sue illum melius et plenius unquam tenuit . . . Et feudum Alani de Lincolia ei dedi, qui fuit avunculus matris sue, et feudum Ernisi de Burum sicut suam hereditatem: on the side of Earl Rannulph were witnesses William Earl of Lincoln, and others. This consanguinity of his mother, the Countess Lucia, with Robert Malet is evidenced by Domesday, in which the manor of Aulkborough, the land of Ivo Taillgeboesc at the time of taking the survey, is shewn to have been held previously by William Malet, father of Robert Malet, and its severance from the barony of the son can only be explained by a gift to his daughter in frank-marriage by the father in his lifetime. Alan de Lincoln was the successor and probably brother of Alured de Lincoln, who held an extensive fief in the shire of Lincoln at the time of the survey, and is designated in one place Aluredus nepos Tvroldi, where it is said that King William gave to him in the city of Lincoln three tofts of the land Sybi, in which he had all customs except the King's geld de monedagio. In the same survey of the city of Lincoln the land of Tuwaldus de Gretevilla is stated to be exempt from tax, a local surname indicative of Norman extraction; and mention is also made of Tuoldus Vicecomes as the donor of the vill of Bucknall to the abbey of Croyland. The lands of Turolf of the fief of Colsuan were held by Alured as his homager, at the time of the survey, and in Ludford Ivo Taillgeboesc had a manor, which Tuoldus had held in the time of King Edward the Confessor. Alan de Lincoln, to have been uncle by the mother's side of the Countess Lucia, was probably the son of Hesilia Crispin, mother of Robert Malet, by a second husband, William Malet her first husband having early perished at the siege of York in 1069, by the hands of the Danes, who had taken him prisoner. Emma Crispin, sister of Hesilia, was mother of Peter de Condé, whose descendant Robert de Condé rendered account, 31 Hen. I. 1131 sub. tit. Lincoliescira of 30 marks of silver for relief of the land of his father; now, a clause of the charter of King Stephen to Rannulph, Earl of Chester, quoted in the text further on, is corroborative of a relationship between the Earl and this

Rannulph the younger or le Meschin, son of Rannulph Vicomte of the Bessin, who after the death of Richard, Earl of the shire of Chester, in 1220, had that earldom by inheritance. Again a widow, Lucia Countess of Chester rendered accompt on the Roll of the Exchequer, 31 Hen. I. tit. Lincoliescira, of 266 li. 13s. 4d. for the land of her father; in discharge of which debt she had in that year made payment at the Treasury of 166 li. 13s. 4d., and continued to owe 100 li., as also a sum of 500 marks of silver for leave not to take a husband within five years. Earl Rannulph of Chester, her son, was then of age, for he occurs in the said Roll as a debtor to the crown in 500 marks of silver for the agreement which the King made between him and his mother concerning her dower. And the same Countess rendered accompt of 45 marks of silver for the same agreement, to be given to whom the King should choose, of which sum the Queen had twenty marks that same year. In 1122 William de Roumare, son of Lucia, Countess of Chester, by her first husband, advanced a claim to certain land which his stepfather Rannulf, Vicomte of the Bessin, had surrendered to the King for the Earldom of Chester, and he also demanded another possession in England, called Corvia, i. e. Corfe, com. Dorset, named above. But the King declined to acquiesce in the demand and replied to him with insult. The incensed youth thereupon sailed across into Normandy, and having found a favourable opportunity he withdrew from the King's allegiance, and confident in the assistance of many, he fiercely waged war upon the Normans from Neuf-marché. During two years, indeed, he glutted his rage with plunder and conflagration, and captures of the inhabitants, nor desisted from his enterprise until the King had made him suitable satisfaction, and restored him great part of what he demanded as his right. During the term of his rebellion his land in England had been in the King's hands, and in the custody of Geoffrey de Clinton, Sheriff of Warwickshire, who 31 Hen. 1. 1130-1 is found to owe 7 li. 13s. 8d. of the old ferm only of the land of William de Roumare, wherefore prior to that year the Honour will have been restored; a date which accords with the testimony of Ordericus Vitalis, that after the death of William Comte of Flanders, son of Duke Robert Courte-heuze, 28 Jul. 1128, from a wound received at the siege of Alst, William de Roumare was family, as being both of the lineage of Crispin, which Dugdale abstracts in these words, "and lastly, for the special respect that the King bore unto him, he not only restored to Adelais de Condie all her lands, viz. Horncastle (in Lincolnshire), when the castle should be demolished, but all other his own lands."

the first among the Normans, his partisans, to be reconciled to the King, whose familiar guest and friend he became from that time. Upon the event of the death of Henry, he was dispatched with Hugh de Gornai and the other Lords Marchers to guard the confines of Normandy, and by King Stephen, upon occasion of his return to England in Advent 1137, appointed one of the Justiciars of Normandy. "In the year from the Incarnation of the Lord 1141, great disturbance arose in the Kingdom of the English," writes the contemporary historian above-mentioned, "and a sudden change followed to the detriment of many. For Rannulph Earl of Chester and William de Roumare, his uterine brother, rebelled against King Stephen, and by stratagem seized upon the citadel, which he had retained in his hands at Lincoln to protect the city. They first cunningly watched the time when the garrison were dispersed in various parts, and then sent their wives forward to the citadel, as though for the sake of amusement; afterwards, whilst the two Countesses were there, and joking and chatting with the wife of the knight, who had been deputed to the custody of the tower, the Earl of Chester, unarmed and without surcoat, as if for the purpose of leading his wife away, and three knights, followed them in, no one suspecting any evil design. And having thus entered, they suddenly snatched up some bars and arms, which were at hand, and forcibly expelled the King's guards; when forthwith William and the armed knights with him, as had been before arranged, entered, and thus the two brothers reduced into their power the citadel with the whole city. Upon this Alexander the Bishop and the citizens sent word of the occurrence to the King, who on hearing it was mightily enraged and astonished that they who had been his greatest friends, to whom he had given an increase of great honours and dignities, should commit so black a crime. Therefore after Christmas he gathered together an army, immediately set out for Lincoln, and by aid of the citizens took well nigh seventeen knights, who were lying in the city, having come upon them unawares in the night-time. The two Earls were, however, with their wives and intimate friends in the citadel; and being thus suddenly surrounded, alarmed they knew not what to do. At length Rannulf, who was younger and more ready and very bold, got out in the night-time with a few attendants and took his way to his own feudatories, in the province of Chester." By the King the siege of the castle was hotly pressed during the ensuing month of January; but the feeble garrison, with the wife and brother of the Earl, contrived to hold out till he, having got together an army, and in company with his father-in-law

the Earl of Gloucester, arrived to their relief. On Sexagesima Sunday, the feast of the Purification, 2 Feb. 1141, a battle was fought in which the king was defeated and made prisoner; after this success Earl Rannulph and the other victors entered the city. William of Malmsbury, in the history of the events of this same year, commences his narrative in these words Rex Stephanus ante Natale a Lindocolina provincia pacifice abscesserat comitemque Cestrensem et ejus fratrem honoribus auxerat, and a subsequent charter of King Stephen is upon record by which he bestowed on Rannulph, Earl of Chester, the castle and city of Lincoln to enjoy until he should be restored to his land and castles in Normandy, giving him leave to fortify one of the towers in Lincoln castle and to have the same in his custody, until he should deliver to him the castle of Tickhill; which being done, the King to have the castle and city of Lincoln again, except the Earl's own tower, which his mother had fortified, together with the office of constable of the castle, and of the whole county, which belonged to him by hereditary right. In the list of tenants of lands in Lincolnshire, of a date prior to the death of Richard, Earl of Chester, drowned in the Blanche-nef in 1120, above the name of Rannulphus Meschinus the words Comes Linc. are interlined, whence it would seem that he had this title in right of his wife, Lucia, the mother of the Earl here spoken of, and that after her death, who had survived him, investiture of the Earldom had been by King Stephen given to her two sons by her several husbands as coparceners. Subsequently Earl Rannulph procured his share of the Earldom to be transferred to his prisoner, Gislebert de Gant, whom he at the same time compelled to marry his niece,⁸ and this personage

and William de Roumare bore contemporaneously from that date the title of Earl of Lincoln. In 1142 William de Romara, Earl of Lincoln, and William his son, and the Countess Hawdewisa his wife, founded a Cistercian abbey at Revesby com. Linc. dedicated to St. Lawrence, and in 1148 Gislebert de Gant, Earl of Lincoln, founded another of the same order at Rufford, com. Notts. dedicated to St. Mary, both abbeys being peopled with monks from Rievaulx, the oldest house of the order in Yorkshire. William de Roumare, only son of the Earl of Lincoln, was deceased in the year 1151, leaving by the sister of William comite of Aumale two sons, at which time his father was yet surviving; and as in that year the castle of Neufmarché was besieged and taken by the French monarch and his allies, it may be that he had fallen in its defence. Prior to his son's death, William Earl of Lincoln, for the redemption of the souls of his father and his mother, and of his ancestors, on the one hand, and for the redemption of his own soul, and of his wife, and of his offspring, and of his successors, on the other, by his charter gave to the Metropolitan Church of the Blessed Mary of Rouen 100s. money of Rouen, in each year; 50s. toward the lighting of the said church, viz. to a wax-candle constantly burning every day before the high altar, to be rendered to the church on the fourth day of Christmas out of his rent from Roumare, and other 50s. toward the common refectory of the canons on the Annunciation of our Lady out of his toll of Dun. In the obituary of the chapter of the Cathedral of Bayeux the fifth day of August is noted as the obit of William de Roumare, Earl of Lincoln, and its celebration was probably occasioned by his gift to them of the church of Ver of his fief in the Bessin, of which the Chapter had the patronage in aftertimes. The year is not precisely known, but he was deceased before 14 Hen. II. 1168, on the Pipe Roll

St. Nicholas at Angers, of which Spalding was a cell. It seems to follow from this fact of the existence of a married brother of the whole blood, that his share of the earldom of Lincoln was transferred by the Earl of Chester rather to a niece, the issue of such marriage, probably in his wardship after the death of his brother, than to the daughter of William de Roumare in the lifetime of her father, himself a coparcener in the Honour, and who, it is apparent, never divested himself of the title. We read in the chartulary of Spalding, "Sciant tam presentes quam futuri quod Hugo frater Rannulfi comitis Cestrie et Matild' uxor ejus, fil' filia Lucie comitisse, concesserunt Deo et Sc'e Marie atque Sc'o Nicholao Spald. duas partes decime sue Calnosbeie de omni dominico suo quod ad idem manerium pertinet et hoc donum fecerunt Nigello priori in thalamo ejusdem manerii. Et ipsa Matilda osculata fuit predictum d'n'm Hugonem ibidem pro dono quod ipsi fecerunt pro animabus suis et antecessorum suorum. Hiis testibus, &c. Et postea venit D'n's Hugo in capitulo Spald. et hoc idem donum concessit monachis ibidem servientibus et detulit textum super altare B'e Marie pro confirmatione donationis elemosine sue. Hiis testibus, &c. (f. 416: a. b.).

of which year his heir William de Roumare rendered accompt of 39 li. 10s. of the aid of Matilda the King's daughter, for his knight's fees sub tit. Lincoliescira. He also acknowledged to owe 6 li. 6s. 8d. of nine knights and a half, whose service Earl William of Roumare had released according to the testimony of the charter he had sent in; of which carta transcript is made in the Liber Niger of the Exchequer. In Normandy in 1172 his return of service comprised that of fourteen Knights in the Roumois to be performed at Neufmarché, but if the Duke were to send him elsewhere, then he was to go with only three knights or with four; and in the Vicomté of Conteville were two knights of the fief of Neufmarché and one knight de xv diebus ad custodiam Novi Mercati. In another list of later date headed Feoda Baillie Rothomagensis we have Guillelmus de Romara servitium xii militum ad custodiam de Novo-mercato, et si dux eum alibi mandabit, ibit cum tribus vel cum quatuor militibus. On the Roll of the year 1180 William de Mara, Bailiff of Auge and Conteville, rendered accompt of 10 li. of the ferm of the land of Helyas de Gonnevillle, whilst it had been in the King's hand; when the amount of deposit in the Treasury being 8 li. 10s., and William de Romara having for the custody of the castle of Neufmarché 20s., and Walter Pipard for his service 10s., he was quit. Gonnevillle-sur-Honfleur in the Vicomté of Conteville was of the fief of Gerold Dapifer, as appears by his charter to the nuns of St. Amand noticed above; and we have in the chartulary of that Abbey a transcript of the deed of William de Roumare, confirming to them the church of St. Mary of Roumare with the tythe and all its appurtenances, and his land and his men of Gonnevilla, which they had had of the gift of his ancestors, to which were witnesses Robert monk of Neufmarché and le despenser, and Robert of Cramanville.^h To the abbey of Longues in the Bessin the same William de Roumare gave three setiers of wheat and three setiers of barley in his mill of Bernard's at Ver, to ^h At Neufmarché the church was originally collegiate for secular canons, but Hugh de Grantemaianil replaced the incumbents of the prebends attached to his moiety of the fief by monks from his abbey of St. Evroult-en-Ouche, and some time after William de Roumare suppressed the remaining canons and established there a priory as a cell to the same abbey. In an old terrier of the diocese of Lisieux the church of Gonneville in the deanery of Honfleur is put down as of the patronage of the abbey of St. Evroult, and the presence of Osbern the monk of Neufmarché along with Robert de Cramanville, a parish adjacent to Gonnevillle, as witnesses to this deed, authorises the supposition that this cell had been endowed likewise with possessions in Gonnevillle of the gift of William de Roumare. At a subsequent period, according to Dom. Pommeray, the abbey of St. Amand had appropriated to it the advowson of the church of Gonnevillle in the diocese of Lisieux.

be received on the feast of the Purification; which vill was afterward of the dower of his wife Philippa and held in 1220 by William des Préaux, then her husband, in her right, as evidenced by this entry in the Register of Philip Augustus under the heading Ballivia Renardi de Villa-Terrici; Ver unum feodum et dimidium, quod fuit Willelmi de Préaux ex parte uxoris sue de dotalitio. William de Roumare the third was deceased 10 Ric. 1, 1198; in the month of October of which year Feltham, com. Midd. de feudo Will'i de Roumara, was an escheat in the hands of the Lord the King, valued at 13 li. without the stock, and then in the custody of (Robert) de Turnham. This vill had been of the frank marriage of Hawysia de Redviers, sister of Baldwin Earl of Devon, wife of William de Roumare, Earl of the shire of Lincoln; of whose gift in her widowhood the Lepers of the Hospital of St. Giles without London had the church of Feltham and land in the same vill. The lands of the ancient inheritance of Robert Fitz-Gerold in Dorset and Somerset were still in the custody of the Sheriff, William de Montacute, as escheats, 26 Dec. 7th Joh. 1205; by writ of which date he was commanded to assign to Gillebert de Clare in Corf, Cleeve, and Camel, quæ fuerunt Willelmi de Romara, 100 marks of land with reasonable extension, and the rest of the issues of the same manors to retain in the King's hands. In the several inquisitions taken respecting the lands of his fief in the county of Lincoln, the title of Earl is attributed to William de Roumare, and to a charter of King John, when Comte of Mortain, confirming the chapelry of Blythe to the metropolitan church of Rouen in the time of Archbishop Walter of Coutances, "for the redemption of his soul and the souls of Henry the King his father of happy memory and of his brother Henry the King the younger, buried in the church of Rouen, and of all his ancestors," we have the names of the witnesses subscribed in this order, "Stephen Ridel my Chancellor, Hugh of Reading, William of St. Nicholas of Angers, H. of Croiland, Abbots, Earl Roger Bigot, Earl Richard de Clare, Earl William de Roumare, Geoffrey Fitz-Piers Earl of Essex, Hugh Bardulf, William Briwerre, Magister Benedict my seal-bearer (sigillarius meus), Albric de Ver, Robert Fitz-Roger, Roger Fitz-Reinfrid, Robert de Wittefeld, Otho Fitz-William, Walter de Dunestanville, Gislebert Basset, Hamon de Valoignes, Theobald Walter, Magister Thomas de Husseburn, Hugh Peverel, William Fitz-Richard, Henry de Wichentone, William de Brueria, Alan de Hertiland clerk, and many others." His place in this list tends to show that his hereditary right to the Earldom of Lincoln was not foregone, and that the title was sometimes borne by him, independent of the attribution of the same to the daughter of Earl Gislebert de Gand. In the following reign the claim of the Earl of Chester to this title, as heir of the Countess Lucia, after failure of the lines of Roumare and Gand, seems to have been acknowledged by the crown; for by writ dated at Lincoln, 23 May, 1 Hen. 3. 1217, the Sheriff was commanded to cause Rannulph Earl of Chester to have the third penny of the county of Lincoln, which was belonging to him of hereditary right ex parte R. comitis patris sui. Again, 14 Mar. 1218 the same officer had the King's command to cause Rannulph, Earl of Chester and of Lincoln, to have the third penny of the issues from the pleas of the county of Lincoln in the name of Earl of Lincoln, until enquiry should have been made how much his predecessors, formerly Earls of Lincoln, were accustomed to receive thereout in the name of Earl of Lincoln. Philip de Colombières, the fermor of the forest of Roumare in 1180, and in this fiscal year, gave in the former year the church of St. Pierre de Varengeville with the tythes to the Priory of La Madelaine of Rouen; the parish was contiguous to Roumare, and probably of the fief of William de Roumare, of whom in 1168 Gilebert de Colombières held the fourth part of a knight's fee in England.

Baillia de Ponte-Audemari per Radulfum de Ardena.

By the terms of the convention for the Exchange of the manor of Andely, between the church of Rouen and the Archbishop of Rouen, Walter, of the one party and King Richard I. of the other, ratified and confirmed by charter 16 Oct. 1197, the same Archbishop, with the sanction and by the will of Pope Celestine the third, and with the assent of the chapter of the cathedral of Rouen, and of his suffragan Bishops, and of the clergy of his Archbishopric, granted and for ever quit-claimed to the King and his heirs the aforesaid manerium de Andeli cum novo castello de Rupe et cum foresta et cum omnibus aliis pertinentiis suis et libertatibus suis exceptis ecclesiis et prebendis et feodis militum et excepto manerio de Frazinis cum pertinentiis suis; which manor being thus transferred into the King's hands, the issues of the bourg, during the interval elapsed between the date of the Exchange and the feast of St. Michael in the year 1198, were rendered accompt of by the officers of the crown at the Exchequer on the fiscal Roll of this year. Nicholas de Vilers, Gislebert the Money-changer, Gislebert Belot, rendered accompt for themselves, and for Richard de Vernon, of 440 li. 16s. of the issue of the vill of Andely of eleven months up to the feast of St. Michael, exclusive of the meadows and vineyards and lands in cultivation, and woods and essarts and fisheries. In the Treasury were 51 li. 9s. 10d.—for a hackney bought to carry the grain to the King's mill 2 li., and for mill-stones and measures 7 li. 4s. 6d. were allowed; whilst under the King's writ, for wines bought for his use, 25 li. 10s. had been disbursed, and 66 li. 13s. 4d. paid to Master Yvo the King's Arblaster, and 100 li. to Robert Fitz-Aelard for the works of the bridge of Portjoie, leaving a debt of 187 li. 13s. 4d. of which the same parties rendered accompt below. In the cost of enclosing and making the King's vineyards 24 li. 9s. had been expended, and 163 li. 9s. 4d. for eleven muids of corn and four casks of wine, bought and put in store in the castle of La Roche, so that they were wholly quit.

The Bailiwick of Pont-Audemer, of which William de Mara had charge in 1195, was this year in the hands of Ralph de Ardena, who had recovered the goodwill of the King through the medium of a fine, he being entered on the Pipe Roll of the English Exchequer 6 Ric. I. 1195 sub tit. Essex et Hertfordscira, as a debtor in 362 li. 16s. 8d. pro fine suo et habenda benevolentia Regis. He first renders accompt through William Fergant of 27 li. 3s. of the ferm of the Vicomté of Conteville and from the demesnes of Bolleville; in the Treasury were 5 li. 3s., his deposit, and the Comte of Mortain had 22 li. from the demesnes of Bolleville. Accompts follow of the bernagium of the Vicomté of Sancte Marie Ecclesia in the past and current year, severally yielding 42 setiers of oats, of which the price was 12 li. 12s., the mina or setier being reckoned for 6s.; in each year the Comte of Mortain had ten setiers, and of the remainder the value in money was a deposit in the Treasury. The Abbot of Jumiéges rendered accompt of 20 li. of annual rent for the manor of Conteville, out of which the two priests of Lisieux had the customary alms, and 2 li. 10s. had gone in executing justice, the remainder being paid in at the Treasury. These memoranda follow, Idem Abbas habet residuum ejusdem manerii pro excambio Ville Pontis Arche quam Rex habet—Fleta de Rileclif que reddebat 10s. per annum est lacerata. By the grant of Richard the second, Duke of the Normans, the Abbey of Jumiéges had Pontem Arches cum ecclesia et omnibus ville appenditiis et ecclesiam de Dans, and retained possession of the same until this year, when the exchange was made for the manor of Conteville. "Idibus mensis Februarii (13 Feb.)," writes a continuator of the Appendix ad Sigebertum begun by Robert du Mont, sub ann. 1198, "electus est Alexander Abbas, qui Prior fuerat ejusdem monasterii; prima dominica Quadragesimæ (15 Feb.) consecratus. Eodem anno Rex Richardus in celebratione Gemetica fuit; eodem quoque anno ad petitionem Alexandri abbatis dedit Richardus Rex Ecclesiæ Gemeticensi mercatum apud Duclarum et chartam fieri præcepit; ipse pro excambio Pontis-Arche Contevillam dedit." The King passed the feast of Pentecost at Jumièges, and his charter for the market at Duclair, on Tuesday in each week, bears date at Andely 28 Aug. 1198, in the ninth year of his reign. In the following year King John restored Pont de l'Arche to the monastery of Jumièges and resumed possession of Conteville, which, together with Lery and Limaie in the vicinity of Pont de l'Arche, he granted in the second year of his reign to Gerard de Furnival for the service of a knight's fee. Ralph de Ardena rendered accompt through the same William Fergant of the amercements, proffers, and fines, of the Bailiwick of Pont-Audemer; from which the sum received, 38 li. 19s. 10d. was by him paid in at the Treasury. From Richard Le Bigot he had 4 li. of the fouage of his land, and an accompt de focagio is rendered in the name of Robert de Criquetot, as in 1195, among those of the crown-debtors in this Bailiwick. Likewise, as on the Roll of the year 1195, the mainpernors of Richard Landrici are in great numbers, among whom we may notice William de Mara, Henry de Pont-Audemer, Henry and William de Mortemer. The Comte of Meulan rendered accompt of 62 li. of the residue of the aid of his knights toward the King's ransom, and had made payment of 16s. only in this year for its discharge. Robert de Hotot rendered accompt of 12 li. 17s. had from the Grand Vicomté of Caux of the time of Goubert de Gravençon; and William de Mara of 74 li. 12s. of the residue of the monies collected toward the entrenchment of Vaudreuil. Richard Fitz Landry rendered accompt of 485 marks 5s. of the residue of his fine; his own deposit in the Treasury was 2 marks 3s. 4d., and the amount deducted for the sums received by the Bailiffs in their several districts from his mainpernors had further reduced his debt to 404 marks 5s. 3d., which he continued to owe. On the Roll of Normandy, begun on the day of the Ascension of the Lord, of Oblata received in the second year of the reign of King John, is read this entry sub tit. Ponsaudemari; "Geoffrey, son of Richard Fitz Landry, gives to the lord the King 20 li. money of Anjou for having the confirmation of the lord the King of 30 acres in the forest of Beaulieu, which Hugh de Montfort gave to him, mainpernors Hugh de Nevill of 5 li., Walter de Ely of 7 li. 10s., and Robert de Wancy of 7 li. 10s. The same Geoffrey gives to the lord the King a palfrey for the same." Again, "Geoffrey, son of Richard Fitz Landry, gives one falcon in addition to the above—Hugh de Nevill Forester will render the falcon for the same Geoffrey." The abbot of Grestain rendered accompt of 100 marks of his proffer, and had paid into the Treasury 15 marks and to the King in his privy-chamber 50 marks pursuant to writ, leaving 35 marks yet due. The Bailiff further rendered accompt of 150 li. of the residue of the liveries of the servientes, which they ought to have of the last twenty days, who were sent to Lyons-la-forêt during the war; but payment was only made to them for half this period, and of the other moiety of the above sum 50 li. were placed in the Treasury, and the remainder continued charged to the accomptant. Oliver de Aubigny rendered accompt of what he had from the chattels of Raginald Lachoire, and the Bailiff of 30s. of the issue of three acres and a half of land, and of a garden, of the chattels of the same individual. The latter also rendered accompt of 19 li. 15s. received of the issue of the land of Henry de Longchamp, and 100 li. which he had of the issue of the land of Hugh de Montfort, for the custody of the castle of Montfort of this year, and of 93 li. 3d. of the issue of the land of the same Hugh during half a year, exclusive of the fixed issues and alms. Ralph de Ardena rendered accompt of the loan set in the Bailiwick of Pont-Audemer, from which 590 li. had been the sum received; the deposit in the Treasury was 410 li., and under the King's writ these payments had been made, viz. to Sawale Fitz-Henry for the works of the castle of La Roche 100 li.—for the livery of Thomas Le Breton and other knights, numbering ten, himself included, sent to Evreux 40 li.—for the liveries of 100 servientes during two days 6 li. 13s. 4d.—for three nets to catch swine 9 li. 13s. 6d.—and in cost for the conveyance of oats from Routot to the Isle d'Andely 22s.: of the residue owing a second accompt was rendered and the same delivered in at the Treasury. In like manner he rendered accompt of 325 li. 10s. of the Tallage set to maintain men serving at arms in the March; in the Treasury were 22 li. 10s. 1d., to Sawale Fitz-Henry for the works of the Castle of La Roche 232 li. 3s. 3d. had been remitted, and in the livery of 100 servientes sent to Gamaches during seventeen days 70 li. 16s. 8d. had been expended under writ, wherefore the Bailiff was quit. In the list of debtors rendering no accompt of their debts in this fiscal year, are many who had continued to owe since the year 1195, and among those newly indebted we may notice Hugh de Montfort in 70 li. for his pledge as mainpernor for the Constable, and in 20 li. of the issue of Livarot, and in 66 li. 5s. of the issue of Blangy, and in one hauberk and three loriculæ due as a render from the inhabitants of Blangy, and William de Mara in 17 li. 3s. of the residue of the Tallage of 12d. set in the fief of Montfort.

Robertus Mai de Receptis suis. Terra Comitis Ebroicensis.

The issues of the royal forests on the banks of the Seine constitute the chief heads of accompt on the back of this membrane, and first Henry Malbanc rendered accompt of 56 li. 5s. from the sale of two essarts made in the forest of La Londe, and from the sale of the palings of one of these essarts, together with half a muid of corn growing in one of them, and of 50 li. which he had received from Walter de Ely, the bailiff of the district; which sums had been thus expended, viz. for making three haie in the forest of Moulineaux 36 li. 3s. 4d.—on the works of the dwellings and the chapel of Moulineaux in repairing and covering them anew 47 li. 12s.—for geese and for feeding the same 3 li. 14s.—in wages to Ralph Harenc staying in the forest of La Londe 5 li., and for the livery of the said Henry 13 li. 15s. 9d. The same Henry likewise rendered accompt of 71 li. 5s. 2d. of the issue of the land of William des Planes, and of 145 li. of the sale of the woods of the same William, which monies were in the Treasury; also of 15 muids, 11 setiers, 1 mine of corn of the issue of the land of the same William at Planes, and of 51 setiers 1 quarter of corn of the land of the same at Bourg-Achard, and of 5 muids of peas, three quarters of the land of the same, which grain he had delivered to Walter de Ely in store of the castle of Vandreuil: and lastly of 13 muids 5 setiers of oats of the issue of the land in tillage of the same William, which he had delivered to William de l'Etang of the King's gift. The vill of Plasnes is in the Lieuvin in the vicinity of Bernay, but Bourg-Achard lies adjacent to the forest of La Londe, and was held, conjointly with the former, by an ancestor of this family in 1141; in which year Canons Regulars of the Rule of St. Augustin first came from Falaise to the church of St. Lo of Bourg-Achard, at the request of Hugh Archbishop of Rouen, and of Roger, lord of Plasnes. Nivelon de Bosco had previously established four secular canons in the said church, and Roger abovenamed, his brother, substituted for them Canons Regular, nullo a me, according to the declaration of his charter, terreno jure retento præter patrocinium et defensionem; as suzerain Waleran comte de Meulan ratified the endowment. On the Rolls of the Curia Regis in England, under the heading Placita Corone apud Stratford placitata per Gaufridum filium Petri et socios suos 10 Ric. I. Hundredum de Lexeden, com. Essex, is this notification, Briche et Estorpe que fuerunt Rogeri de Planes valent 21 li. quas habet Ibertus de Karenci per d'n'm Regem, and on the Roll of Normandy, 2 Joh. 1200-1, de oblatis receptis, occurs the following entry, Rogerus de Planes dat d'no Regi DC li. And. pro habenda uxore quam prius habuit Ricardus de Riveriis cum terra sua. Et mandatum est Senescallo Normannie quod de pecunia illa sufficientes plegios capiat, et mandetur d'no Regi, et tunc D'n's Rex ei ponet terminos tales quales ei placuerit. Plegii in dorso; which list of mainpernors on the back of the membrane includes the names of the Comte de Meulan, of the Earl of Chester, and of Robert de Thibouville, in 100 li. each, of Ralph Avenal and Robert Luvet in 40 li. each, and of William de Bouquetot, William de Touberville, Henry d'Etouteville, William de Mortemer, Guerin de Glapion, and others, in 20 li. each. On the English Roll de oblatis in the same year William des Plasnes gives to the King 30 marks for a greyhound which had been stolen, when the Comte de Meulan was also his mainpernor; and 31 May 1203 he had the King's letter patent to John de la Bruyère to deliver to "our beloved William des Plasnes" Guy de Lucy, a prisoner, whom the King had given him to liberate his brother, who was in the prison of the King of France at Paris. The following year, on the feast of St. John Baptist, next after the taking of Montfort-sur-Rîle, he delivered over his manors of Birch and Easthorpe to William Le Blond of London, to hold from that date for three years for 60 li. then and there paid to him by the said William; which term was extended to six years by the King's charter, 3rd Aug. 1204, upon proffer of 60 li. in addition, with leave for the tenant to have in the last year of his term the crops of the lands in tillage because the King had them in the first year of his term. The manor had in fact been seized into the King's hands as escheats of the lands of the Normans, and Estorp et Briche, terre Willelmi de Planes, are among the lands in Essex of which inquest was returned 6 Joh. 1204; by the same King they were afterwards given to Ralph Gernon, William des Plasnes having continued in Normandy, where he had rank among the Knights bearing banners.

Robert d'Appesville, who with his brother William had the custody of the forest of Brotonne in 1195, rendered accompt on the back of this membrane, first of the residue of his accompt of his receipts and of the residue of his accompt of the porcarie, of which the sum, 113 li. 10s. 11d., had been by him delivered in at the Exchequer, and next of 622 li. 16s. of the issue of the forest of Vatteville and of the sale of the same forest and of the banks of the river; in tythe to St. Vandrille 62 li. 4s. 7d., and to the Lepers of Tourville 20s.—to the monk of Brotonne 5 li.—for the lighting of the church of Lendin 7s. 3d. this year for 9½ quarters of oats, and to the Lepers of Brétot 10s. for fixed alms had been paid as in former years, whilst pursuant to the King's writ he had this year laid out in the works of the King's dwellings and of the chapel and of all the outer buildings of Hauville 340 li. 8s.—in the works of the royal dwellings and of the chapel of Vatteville 78 li. 2s. 2d.—on the King's Haie of Routot and of Parket and of Bourneville, and for a fence made through the Haie du Mort, and in repairing the old Haie du Mort and the Haie du Mort 78 li.—for the portorage and carriage of fourteen casks of wines of the King from Leure to Vatteville and Hauville, and in the expenses of two servants and one horse of the King staying at Vatteville 5 li. 19s. 5d.—for making four nets to catch wild boars 11 li. 4s.—in execution of justice 3 li. 3s.—for two tunics for the use of two dog-keepers 2 li., and for his own livery for the custody of the same forest and of the royal dwellings 54 li. 15s., being a surplus of 18 li. 17s. 5d. over the issues. The same Robert further rendered accompt of these his receipts, viz. of the fief of Blicquetuit 10 li. of the aide de l'ost—of the fief of Lewis de Villequier 10 li.—of the fief of Plaisseis 2 li.—of the fief of Girard du Bosc 2 li. for the same, and of the view of the forest of Brotonne 22 li. 8s.—of the issue of the land of Robert de Mucedent 50 li.—of the residue of the fine of Aeliz wife of Herbert de Lisieux 40 li. and of the pannage of the forest of Brotonne 41 li. 5s. in this year, in all a sum of 175 li. 13s., of which 16 li. 9s. 1d. were in the Treasury; and in tythe to the abbey of St. Vandrille of the above mentioned pannages 4 li. 2s. 6d.—in the liveries appointed of the said pannages 30s.—for his surplus on the preceding accompt 18 li. 17s. 5d. and for bacon and cheese bought and sent in store of the castle of Beaumont-le-Roger in war-time 9 li. 6s. were the sums for which he had credit in this account. Of the remaining debt, 125 li. 8s. he again rendered account, having under the King's writ paid 20 li. to Herbert de Caillouet and Richard Fitz-Warine the King's huntsmen to purchase hounds, and laid out 90 li. 17s. 8d. in the expenses of the King's hounds and of the Bernarii who had the keeping of the hounds; thus 14 li. 10s. 4d. was all the balance yet due. It is apparent from these accounts that both Vatteville and Hauville were royal residences at this period, but in the following reign Peter de Meulan, descended of the Comtes de Meulan, the ancient feudatories under the Dukes of Normandy, had for a time the former abode, in as much as a writ of the King to William de Mortemer, dated at S'te Barbe-en-Auge 10 May 1203, is entered on the Roll of Normandy, whereby this officer was directed to cause Robert d'Harcourt to have Vatteville and Brotonne, with their appurtenances, as fully as Peter de Meulan had held it, when he withdrew from the King's service. Hauville continued to be royal demesne, and by writ, teste'd by the Earl de Ferrers at Herbertot 23 Aug. the same year, Peter de Stokes, then Bailiff of Pont-Audemer, was commanded to cause Ralph de Montfort to have the land of Hautville, which had been of the possessions of the canons of Chartres. Robert d'Apperville likewise rendered account of 333 li. 6s. 8d. of his receipt from the sale of the défends of the forest of Montfort, which sum, save 33 li. 6s. 8d. paid in tythe to St. Imer, he delivered in at the Treasury and was quit. The same Robert rendered account in like manner of 122 li. 2s. 5d. of his receipt from the sale of the forest of Roumare, out of which the Treasurer of Normandy had 12 li. 4s. 5d. in tythe, and the remainder had been by him paid in at the Treasury.

Robert Mai rendered account next on this membrane of his Receipt, viz. from Geoffrey the Moneychanger 40 li.—from Nicholas de la Londe 20 li.—from Ralph de Cotevart 50 li.—from Matthew Le Gros and Geoffrey the Money-changer and Ralph de Cotevart 30 li.—from Richard the chaplain 225 li. 11s. 6d. by the hand of the Chancellor—from the wood of two essarts sold in the forest of Rouvray and from the paling enclosing the same 31 li. 10s.—from the sale of the residue of the fence of the Park and from the timber of the Tower of Rouen 44 li.—from the sale of the wood of two essarts in the forest of Rouvray 37 li. 10s.—from the sale of the wood of one essart made there in this year 26 li.—from the amercement upon the inhabitants of Oissel for the escape of a prisoner 40 li.—from the view of the forest of Rouvray 3 li. 17s.—from the issue of the land of William Louvel in Vaudreuil and Freneuse, exclusive of the corn, 43 li. 16s. 5d. and from the King's Privy-Chamber 15 li., in all 607 li. 9s. 10d.; which sum had been thus expended under the King's writ, viz. upon the enclosure of the Park of Rouen 445 li. 3s.—in enclosing La Haie Beroude 70 li. 16s.—for raising up the paling of the Park and for stopping up the breach made by the wind 11 li. 15s.—for unloading the King's wines at La Roche d'Orival 9s.—for hooping the King's casks there during a term of three years 8 li. 8s.—for fixing three frames to let down the King's casks into the cellar there 3s.—for sledges and pulleys and thwarts 15s.—for two benches and two tubs 27s.—to Walter Marc-d'Argent 20 li.—for drawing stones 15 li.—for perforating the rock on the side towards the Seine and making a door there 3 li. 7s.—for 50 geese and for feeding them during two years 9 li. 11s., and in wages to the same Robert for the custody of the King's dwelling and of the forest of Rouvray 20 li. 13s. 10d., wherefore he was quit. The same Robert rendered accompt below of the issues of the lands of William Louvel in wheat, barley, and oats, sent to Robert d'Harcourt in store of the castle of La Roche, and of 1 li. 12s. 6d. from the sty of Rouvray, delivered in at the Treasury, save the tythe thereof which had been paid to the Treasurer of customary right. In my Observations prefixed to the former volume it has been noticed, in reference to the tenure of twenty acres of meadow within the Park of Rouen by the Bonshommes de Grammont, that these religious had been placed by Henry II. in his royal residence of the Park, which had been previously converted by him into a Maladrerie. This last supposition is erroneous, and should be understood in reference to the royal mansion at Quevilly, mansionem Regiam fecit circa fustes plantatos apud Chivileium juxta Rothomagum. Domum leprosororum juxta Cadomum mirabilem edificavit, being the right punctuation of the passage of the Appendix ad Sigebertum A. D. 1161, upon which the statement rested. Du Plessis, who cites Archives du Prieuré de Grandmont de Rouen in the margin, says that the religious of the order of Grand-mont were first founded by King Henry II. in the forest of Rouvrai in 1156, that shortly afterward the same prince gave them his Park, and that they there transferred their monastery, which had hence retained the name of Notre-Dame-du-Parc.¹ That they had of the grant of this monarch the royal residence of the Park of Rouen is certain from the charter of King John, dated at Chinon 26th Sept. 1199, whereby he confirmed to the Bonshommes of Grandmont fundacionem domús quam pater noster H. bone memorie in

dominico suo juxta Rothomagum fecit, et donationem quam idem pater noster eis fecit ad victualia sua, sc̃pt, ccli. And. recipiendas annuatim de Vicecomitatu Rothomagensi, viz. cli. ad Pascham et cli. ad festum S̃c'i Michaelis. The Annalist of the Order of Grandmont has inserted a charter of Richard I. datum teste meipso per manus Magistri Eustachii apud Grandimontem in presentia venerabilis G. prioris ordinis supradicti Anno ab Incarnatione D'ni MCXCII et regni nostri tertio, pridie Kalendas Aprilis, by which through God's regard for the redemption of his soul and of the souls of all his ancestors and successors and for the stability of his kingdom, he granted to God and the Bonshommes of the Order of Grandmont, in pure and perpetual alms, the house and park of Rouen, and all the wood with right of possession of the land and water as enclosed by the park from the end of the bridge of the Seine on the side of the city of Rouen and so across to the other end of the bridge, the bridge itself excluded; and this together with all the surrounding objects, lands, meadows, and every other thing moveable and immoveable indifferently, as enclosed from the end of the bridge by the causeway and royal road leading to Sotteville, and by the outer ditches down to the Seine: also the river Seine itself, according as it stretches from the termination of the said ditches to an island directly opposite and including the said island, and so from its extreme point to the opposite bank in a straight line across, throughout its course from the furthestmost banks, so set down above, up to the bridge exclusively, together with all the shoals and islands rising within the said limits now and hereafter, with all their appurtenances. Other clauses of the same charter contain grants of extensive privileges in the forest of Rouvray to the Religious, and of 200 li. money of Anjou, of annual rent in the Vicomté of Rouen, but of which charge payment was not enforced in 1195 and 1198, as is apparent from the accompts of the fermors of the said Vicomté in those years. On the one hand the tenure of Hugh de Cressy in 1180 of the meadows in the Park of Rouen appertaining to the Vicomté, by reason of his having then the custody of the tower of Rouen, leads us to infer that the date of the foundation of Notre Dame-du-Parc was subsequent to that year; while on the other hand the singularity of a charter of Richard I. being thus attested, at a time when the royal grantor was warring with the infidels in the Holy Land, seems to invalidate the authenticity of the date to the instrument, which was probably only a copy in exact accordance with the more ancient charter of Henry II., for of any grant by him made previously it contains no mention. In the church of Notre-Dame-du-Parc, of the order of Grandmont, otherwise Grosmont, was the sepulture of Geoffrey, Archbishop of York, natural son of Henry II., deceased 18 Dec. 1212, on whose tomb was an epitaph in verse, copied by Ducarel. This prelate, having alone set himself in opposition to the levy of a thirteenth upon the goods of ecclesiastics and prelates, begun by King John 2 Feb. 1207, secretly withdrew from England, after having laid those of his diocese under sentence of excommunication, who should commit this rapine; and fixing his residence in this priory, he there continued in exile till his death in the sixth year from his leaving England.

Richard d'Argences rendered accompt of 560 li. of the ferm of the Honour of Evreux, which sum had been wholly expended by him in the course of this fiscal year in the following customary alms and charges, and in payments under the King's writ, viz., to the Hospital of Evreux 40 li.—to St. Taurin 3 li.—to St. Sauveur 3 li. 6s.—to the Dean of Evreux 30s.—to the Lepers of St. Nicholas 5 li. 13s.—to S'te Marie d'Evreux 10s.—to a certain canon of Evreux 6 li. in this year from a fulling mill—again to the Lepers 3 li.—again to St. Taurin 7 li. 12s. this year for 9 setiers 1 mine of wheat—to the chaplain of the Castle 23 li. 4s. this year for 2 muids 5 setiers of wheat—again to the Hospital 20s. for 2000 herrings—to the Nuns of the La Chaise-Dieu 9 li. 12s. this year for 1 muid of wheat—to the heir of Henry de Neufbourg 10 li. de feodo—to Robert de Lacy 13 li.—to Thomas de Verdon 20 li. de feodo of the past year—to Peter de Sablé 10 li.—to Richard Lebigot 28 li. 16s. this year for 3 muids of wheat de feodo—again to the Lepers 30s. de elemosina statuta—again to the Hospital 32s. this year for 2 setiers of wheat out of 2 muids yearly of the tythe of the mill of Le Pont-Pierrière—to the Canon of Evreux 3 li. 19s. ob. of the tythe of the mill of Asnières—to the Abbess of Evreux 3 li. 19s. ob. of the tythe of the same mills—again to the Nuns of La Chaise-Dieu 19 li. 4s. this year for 2 muids of wheat de elemosina statuta out of the ferm of Quittebeuf and of Claville—again to the Canon of Evreux 5 li. from the same vills—again to the same 9 li. 12s. this year for a muid of wheat from the same vills—again to the Nuns of Evreux 20s. for a wax-light from the same vills—to the Forester of the forest of Evreux 3 li. 4s. 8d. this year de feodo out of the rent of the forest—again to the Nuns of Evreux 3 li. 16s. 9d. in tythe of the said forest—in the works of the Castle of Evreux and of the Haie of the forest, and in cultivating three vineyards and in repairing tubs and casks 189 li. 2s. 4d. per breve Regis—to Robert Rossel 50 li. out of the Prevôté of Avrilli, of which he owed accompt—in the carriage of the King's wines, bacon, cheese, and salt from Rouen to Evreux, in store of the Castle 10 li. 14s.—for 30 muids of wine of the vineyards of the Comte which were in the above-written ferm, and had remained in store of the castle of Evreux 60 li. and in the execution of justice 32s. 2d.; and he was quit. Richard d'Argences next rendered accompt of the Loan raised in the Bailiwick of Evreux, which had yielded 80 li., but this sum had been exceeded by the disbursements for the liveries of the knights and men serving-at-arms and balistarii in garrison at Evreux, and of the sentinels and porters, so that the surplus had to be reckoned to him in the next accompt of 183 li. received of the Tallage set in the same Bailiwick to maintain men-at-arms. Another payment of 216 li. 13s. 4d. to the garrison at Evreux increased the surplus to 98 li. 13s. 4d., of which reckoning was made to him below on this membrane. He also rendered accompt of 190 li. 2s. 6d. of the tallage set in the Honour of Evreux for cleansing out the ditches of Evreux and for palisading the walls, and the sum received had been so applied. Other accompts follow of his receipts of stores for the Castle of Evreux, viz. of 90 carcasses of hogs, of which Thomas Le Breton had 52 and a half in store of the said castle and he owed 9li. 7s. 6d. for the remaining portion,—of 4 muids of heavy grain, and of 15 muids of wheat, and of 8 setiers 1 mine of pease, which he had received from Stephen de Longchamp, and of which Thomas le Breton had 12 muids 9 setiers 1 mine of wheat and one mine of heavy grain, and he owed for the value of the remainder—of 15 tuns and one butt of wine, of which Thomas le Breton had 10 tuns of wine of Poitou and he owed for the remainder, which had been damaged—of 63 cheeses from England, all of which he had delivered to the same Thomas—of half a peisa of salt and two summæ, which the same Thomas had, together with 12 dozen of cords, and cords to fasten the mangonnels and 7 slings for the perriers and 8 balistæ and 6002 quarrells and 4000 arrows quarrelled and one grinding-stone and 8 darts and 8 spikes and 8 iron-bound tubs and one hand-mill, at the hands of Richard d'Argences. The sum of the above debts did not suffice to cover the balance of expenses, and the accomptant had surplus 67 li. 2s. 10d., which were reckoned to him in his fine; of it his accompt has been already noticed, and will be found in the Bailiwick, where he was resident, on the back of membrane 9 of this Roll. The two Abbies at Evreux, dedicated respectively in honour of St. Taurin and our Saviour, were founded the first by Duke Richard, son of William Longue-espé, who gave of his demesne to the saint the tythe of the toll of the city and Vicomté of Evreux and hôtes in the same vill with franchise and the bourg of the same church, and the second by Richard Comte of Evreux who gave to the Nuns there established two mills at Evreux and the tythe of his mills, and of all the rents and issues of the city of Evreux, except the tythe of the toll, and all the tythe of all the rents and issues of the whole forest of Evreux. The abbey of Nuns at Chaise-Dieu on the bank of the river Iton stood within the limits of the Honour of Breteuil, and had been founded in 1139 by Robert Earl of Leicester and Amicia his wife, of the order of Font-evrault. By the terms of the treaty of peace agreed upon between King John and King Philip of France at Le Goulet in the month of May 1200, by which the former bound himself to keep the peace which King Richard his brother had made with the latter between Issoudum and Charroux, these stipulations were introduced in regard of the territory of the Evrecin; "King John gave to King Philip and his heirs the city of Evreux and the Evrecin, with all fiefs and demesnes, as the bounds subsequently named may determine, the which were fixed mid-way between Evreux and Neufbourg, and all within the bounds towards France to belong to King Philip and all beyond toward Neufbourg to the King of England, and as much land as the King of France had toward Neufbourg, the same quantity was he to have toward Conches and Acquigny by the same admeasurement, from that side, where the abbey of La Noe is situate according as the river Iton has its course: also Quittebeuf, wheresoever it might be, the King of England gave to the King of France. It was also agreed that neither party were to be able to raise fortifications within the bounds prescribed between Neufbourg and Evreux nor at Quittebeuf, neither the King of France on his side nor the King of England on his, except where a place had been already fortified; moreover, the fortresses of Portes and Les Landes were to be forthwith destroyed and no new fortresses to be built there. Whatever had belonged to the Comte of Evreux within the bounds, such tenure the King of England caused to be quitclaimed to the King of France by the right heir of the Comté of Evreux." On the part of the King of England were present at the fixing the bounds between Evreux and Neufbourg William du Hommet, Constable of Normandy, Robert de Harecort, Robert de Tresgoz, Henry de Gray, Richard d'Argences, Richard Silvanus, Revel, Clerk; on the part of the King of France John de Rous, Hugh de Maudester, Hugh and William de la Chapelle, Hugh Branchard, Cadoc, Hugh de Meulan. The aforesaid took a cord in length 20 toises and measured the whole ground from the wall of the city of Evreux up to the wall of the castle of Neufbourg, and placed the bounds at the mid-way. Such boundary was set up in the spot called La Vallée-Karlon, i. e. at the division between the fief of Bacquepuits and of Bernienville, between the field of Roger Laval of the fief of Bernienville and the field of William Boudrot of the fief of Bacquepuits, the distance from Evreux to this midway to Neufbourg, where the boundary was placed, being 309 cords, each cord containing 20 toises. According to this same admeasurement a boundary was set up between Evreux and Conches, viz. between Glisolles and Angerville at the spot which is called La Haie de Talcund', i. e. at the little pear tree which is in the fief of Matthew Foliot in the fields of Angerville, at the division of the field of Landry Le Caron and the field of Peter Billard. In like manner, according to the same admeasurement which was between Evreux and Neufbourg, was a boundary set up between Evreux and Acquigny, and the said boundary was at La Vacherie-au-noyer, which is called Le Noyer du Val, in the valley, that is to say, beneath the church of the same vill toward Acquigny between of Walter Calet. Amaury de Montfort was at this date the right heir of the Comté of Evreux, and having been invested with the Earldom of Gloucester by King John in exchange, he by his charter acquitted and quitclaimed to Philip, King of the French, Evreux, and whatever he had within the boundaries fixed by the treaty concluded between the said King and his lord John the illustrious King of England, as the charters of the same Kings testify, because his same lord John, King of England, had satisfied him for the above by exchange; to which charter, yet existing in the archives of France, were witnesses William Bishop of London, Herbert Bishop of Salisbury, John Bishop of Norwich, Geoffrey Fitz-Piers Earl of Essex, Richard Earl de Clare, Robert comte de Meulan, Robert de Turnham, and many others. He had been left a minor at the death of his father in 1194, when the Comté and city of Evreux were in the hands of the Seneschal of Normandy and by him set to ferm; for on the Roll of 1195 Nicholas de laLonde rendered accompt of 7 li. 10s. of the residue of the ferm of the Comté of Evreux for Robert Cauketerre and William de Boville, when his payment at the Treasury being only 3 li., he continued a debtor for the balance: in the same year the Comtesse of Evreux fined to have the custody of the land of her son in the Bailiwick of Caux. In 1203 the Comte of Evreux was in arms against King John, who by writ addressed to Geoffrey Fitz-Piers, teste'd at Falaise 8 May, certified to him that he had granted to John Le Mareschal all the land which the Comte of Evreux had in England, who was against him with his enemies, except the manor of

Marlow and the land which the same Comte had of the fief of the Earl of Gloucester given to him in exchange for Evreux, and commanded the justiciary to cause the said John to have that land; in whose favour, four days previously, a like grant had been made of all the land of Hugh de Gornai in Norfolk and Suffolk, as he held the same on the day he withdrew from the King's service. Hugh de Gornai was father-in-law of Amaury Comte of Evreux, who, 5 Joh. 1204, held in frankmarriage with his daughter the manor of Horstan in England by the gift of her father. One of these parties, however, soon returned to his old allegiance, for by writ dated in the last days of the month of October following, the Seneschal of Normandy and the Barons of the Exchequer were informed that the King had acquitted A. Comte of Evreux of a debt of 40 marks, and those officers were to hold him discharged. Before 30 Nov. 1213 he was deceased, on which day a writ of King John to the Sheriff of Bucks. bears date, commanding him to cause Gislebert de Clare to have full seisin of two parts of the land which had belonged to Amaury Comte of Evreux in Marlow and Hameldon in his bailiwick, and to cause Milicent, the widow of the same Comte, to have the third part, together with the chattels found upon it; and by other writs dated 4 Jan. following Guy de Chanceux and the Sheriff of South^a. were peremptorily commanded to cause the executors of the will of the Comte of Evreux to have the chattels which had been belonging to the Comte at Thornbury com. Glouc' and at Petersfield and Mapledurham in their several Bailiwicks. His widow remarried William de Cantelupe junior, for whose marriage, toward the advancement of his son, William de Cantilupe senior had proffered 200 marks to King John, but payment thereof had subsequently been pardoned to him, as evidenced by a writ, 8 Jul. 1215, to the Barons of the Exchequer. Shortly after the acquisition of the Evrecin by King Philip Augustus, recognition was made between him and the Bishop of Evreux upon the question de firmitate ville Ebroicarum by these jurors, viz. Richard d'Argences, Stephen de Longchamp, Roger Pescheveron, William de Sisi, knights, Gaut L'Anglois, Amic des Villettes, Jocelin Pelet, Renoud Faber, burgesses of the Lord the King, Hugh d'Avrilly, Roger Havart, Robert de Beaumont, Richard Carain, burgesses of the Bishop, Roger de Pontelandre, Ralph Podagre, Gillebert de Busson, Luke Berenger, burgesses of the Abbot of St. Taurin, who being sworn said unanimously that when King Richard was a captive in Germany, John Bishop of Evreux being deceased, and Guerin Bishop elect of Evreux gone into Germany to King Richard, the Comte of Evreux being also deceased, the Seneschal of Normandy ordered a commune to be made at Evreux, and they saw that Adam L'Anglois was mayor of the same commune, and they saw that by the common assent of the same commune, they the jurors without other authority made a ditch in that town through the middle of the land of the Bishop of Evreux, and begun to work on the Lord's day, on account of dread of the King of France, and the Archdeacon absolved them, and they said that they had fear of a siege, and four men of the commune were deputed to guard each battlement and to fence it with a hurdle; and they say that the Comte of Evreux could not levy tallage in the land of the Bishop neither on account of war or of the host, or to marry his daughter or to make his son a knight, nor in any other manner, nor did he have any thing there beside the customs, which were then in use and are still. And they say that the Duke of Normandy had such justice over the Bishop of Evreux as he had over the Archbishop and the other Bishops of Normandy. Richard d'Argences, the fermor of the Comté of Evreux in this year, having, after cession made of the territory, embraced the service of the King of France, King John gave his land at Mesnil in the bailiwick of the Oximin to William d'Angerville by writ dated 29 Jan. 1202, and to Henry de Gray all the land he held of the fief of the same Henry in the Bailiwick of Ralph de Rupierre by writ dated 21 Jul. 1202. In the account of the Revenues of the King of France during the year 1202 we have this receipt in respect of Evreux, viz. of the second third part of the year 300 li. and for the alms which Richard de Argences had rendered back, 33 li. 16s. money of Paris; and these expenses, viz. for repairing the mills of Evreux 14 li. money of Anjou and 7 li 7s. money of Paris—for the oven and works at the castle 4 li. 14s. money of Anjou,—the church of Notre-Dame-d'Evreux for the anniversary of the Comte 100s. money of Paris—the fabric of the church 60s.—at Pentecost for lights 40s.—at St. Remy in aid of the Vicomté 40s.—for four muids of wheat rendered monthly 12 li.—for the prebend of Fulk the chaplain 5 li. money of Anjou at St. Remy—for one muid of corn 4 li. at St. Remy—for bettering the prebend and for the support of two chaplains 50s. money of Paris—the Nuns of Evreux for tythe of the rent 25s.—for tythe of the forest 100s.—and in the Prevôté 40s. money of Anjou at the Rogations—and from Quittebeuf for a wax-light 20s. money of Anjou at the Purification—St. Taurin in the Vicomté in the first week of Lent for a muid of corn 4 li. and for tythe of the stalls 60s. money of Anjou, and in the mill of Les Fosseurs 11 setiers of wheat, worth 73s. 4d.—the Hôtel Dieu of Evreux in the Prevôté 40 li. money of Anjou and two muids of wheat, worth 8 li.—the Lepers of Evreux in the Prevôté 104s. money of Anjou, and on the dedication 30s., and in the Vicomté 20s., and in the gate of the mills of Les Ouvriers 20s. in the first week of Lent—the Nuns of La Chaise-Dieu in the Vicomté 4 li.—the Chaplain of the Castle 60s. money of Anjou, and 29 setiers of corn and a full mine—to Otho d'Amiens 20 li.—to Roger de Chaugi 20 li.—to the chatelain of Normanville 13 li.—on account of the wax-light of the Purification at Nôtre-Dame d'Evreux 21s.—and to Ralph Hareng 60s. money of Anjou. The sum 113 li. 12s. money of Paris and 99 li. 9s. money of Anjou, worth 68 li. 5s., equal to a sum total of 181 li. 17s., being deducted from the receipt, left a balance of 152 li. less 12d., which Brother Hamard had, and the accompt was quit. And 20 li. were due both to Otho and Roger de Caugi of the term of St. John and 16 li. 6s. which Nicholas Bocellus had reckoned to him, for the repairs of the sluices and mills of the time of Richard d'Argences.

Membrane 13.

[Item Baillia] de Cadomo. Condeium.

Baillia de Costentino per Robertum de Tresgoz et a tergo.

The entries first made on this membrane are in continuation of the accompt of the Bailiwick of Caen by William Poignard on the back of membrane 4, where at foot is the reference Residuum Ballie quære alibi, and furnish the list of debtors to the crown, who had made no payment during the year toward the discharge of their debts. Among them the heir of Hugh de Cardonville owed 3 li. 2s. of the residue of the old ferm of Ambrières—Robert Maisnil 20s. of the Tallage set by the commune of Bayeux—the inhabitants of Caen 345 li. 12s. 2d. sterling of the residue of the Tallage set upon them—the Comte of Mortain 3 li. which he had from the abbot of Grestain, 5 li. which he had of the King's ransom from William de Mara, and another sum of 181 li. 10s. which he had of the King's ransom in the town of Condé, 38 li. 18s. of the fouage of his land and 7 li. 12s. of the debt of William de Calix—the heir of Earl William de Arundel 63 li. of the residue of the accompt of the same Earl, 20s. of the Tallage of Louviers, 22 li. 2s. of the tythe of Vaudreuil, 26 li. 10s. 10d. of the residue of the bernage of the Vexin, and 40 li. of the ferm of Etretat and Benouville—William de Similly 100 li. of his surety as main-pernor for the Constable—Jordan, a clerk, his brother 10 li. for the like—Philip de Creully 100 li. for the like, 4 li. de quarto suo, 60 li. of the debt of William de Calix, 6 li. of the debt of Elyas the jew, 10 li. de jurea and 20 li. as mainpernor of Ralph de Montfort. Earl

William of Arundel, who had had the custody of the castles of Gisors and Vaudreuil and of the Bailiwick of the Vexin in 1184, was deceased in 1196, in which year William the third, Earl of Sussex, his son and heir, rendered accompt of 100 li. of his relief for his land in Norfolk; but the cause of the debts of the father being charged to his heir in this Bailiwick apparently arose rather from the town of Caen being the seat of the Exchequer, than from the family being resident in Normandy in this district. Jordan, the clerk, brother of William de Similly, and nephew of the Constable of Normandy, was cousin of Jordan du Hommet, Archdeacon of Lisieux at this time, and afterward in 1200 elected to the see of Lisieux; which paternal local surname the younger sons of Enguerrand du Hommet and Cecilia de Semilly appear to have retained. Johanna, Abbess of Caen, rendered accompt of 7s. for a bezant for a hearing of the convention between the Abbey of the Holy Trinity and Robert and Richard, sons of James, of their inheritance, which they had demised and quit-claimed to the Abbey, as the chyrograph between them testified; which sum she had delivered in at the Treasury and had acquittance. Johanna, whose name is omitted in the catalogues of the Abbesses of Caen, will have intervened between Matildis de Montfort, deceased 9 Dec. 1192, and Isabella de Yvetot, party to a transaction with Earl Alberic de Vere about the year 1204; for in the court of King Richard, the fourth year from his coronation, a chyrograph was made between Joan, abbess of Caen, and William de Felsted, in respect of the rights and franchise of the said vill of Felstead com. Essex, which had been set forth in the charter of Dametta, Abbess of Caen. Under the heading Ballia de Condeio William Poignart rendered accompt of the issues from the land of William Tyrel and from the house and forges of Guiot the smith of Maredai, of the same assessed value as in 1195, and of which the sum 9s. was in the Treasury and he was quit. He likewise rendered accompt of the amercements proffers and fines of the Bailiwick of Condé; the sum received, 9 li. 5s., he had delivered in at the Treasury and had acquittance as above. Among the accomptants of their debts in this Bailiwick were Eudo and Philip de Vassy, of certain issues had of the land of Hugh de Couterne in Torcy, and for which they had previously been accountable in 1195, as shewn on the Roll of that year. Couterne is a commune in the Département of the Orne, arrondissement of Domfront, and hence in 1195 Philip de Vassy is noted as a debtor at the Bailiwick of Le Passeis for 31 marks, 12s. 8d. sterling which he had had of the fine of Hugh de Couterne, who was now in this year Castellan of Ambrières in that district; but Torcy, it is presumed, was the vill of that name in the pays de Caux, and the parties were here charged with its issues as resident in the Bailiwick of Condé. William Le Petit rendered accompt of 10 li. of the loan raised in this Bailiwick, of which he had made payment, and William Poignard, the Bailiff, of 299 li. 1s. 10d. of the Tallage set to maintain servientes in the March in the Bailiwick of Condé, delivered in at the Treasury; hence both were quit. In the list of debtors, making no payment in liquidation of the sums charged against them, Philip de Vassy owed 6 li. for the non-performance of the service of the King at Nonancourt and 100 li. for his right of sharing in the land as against his brothers.

Robert de Troisgots rendered a similar accompt in this year, as he had done in 1195, of the fermes in the Bailiwick of the Cotentin, but there had been no deposit in the Treasury. The only increase in the annual charges was from the greater price of barley, raising the render for 42 quarters from 8 li. 8s. to 10 li. 10s., and for 10 quarters from 40s. to 50s., and from a payment to William de Kaeu of 31 li. 14s. 3d. which he had in the manor of Fontenay-sur-les-Vez, which was in the ferm of Brix; whilst for executing justice 15s. in lieu of 27s. had been the cost. By the King's writ 71 li. 2s. 8d. had been disbursed for the expense of the King's hawks and of the hawking dogs and of their keepers staying at Valognes—26 li. 1d. in the cost of enclosing and digging up the essarts in the forest of Brix and repairing the royal dwellings and the hays—12 li. 18s. 6d. in repairing the dwellings of the Castle of Cherbourg, and 40 li. 5s. for the wages of those who had made the essarts in the forest of Brix; whilst the entire surplus, 314 li. 6d. had gone in the expenses of the Bishop of Beauvais, who, it seems, had been removed to Cherbourg in the course of this year. Of the residue of the old ferm of the Prevôté of Barfleur he had paid into the Treasury 21 li. 11s. and of the new he rendered accompt of 60 li. as on the former Roll; in the Treasury were 27 li.—in tythe to St. Amand de Rouen 6 li., and by writ for the passage of William de Brohan 6 li. and for other passages of small account 4 li. 18s. had been disbursed, as also 7 li. 10s. for the transport of the King's treasures on several occasions from Barfleur to the ford of Formigny, leaving 8 li. 12s. owing, of which there is an accompt on the back of the membrane, and of 61 li. 13s. owing of the ferm of the Vicomté of the Cotentin on his accompt of the same in this year. Robert de Troisgots next rendered accompt of 200 li. of the ferm of St. Marcouf, in which the Canons of Le Vœu had 3 li. in tythe from the mills, the toll and the salt; to the Comte of Mortain 50 li. were made over which he had assisted in the same

manor, and to William de Kaeu 147 li. in exchange of his land of Aufai, concerning whose tenure of four librates of the land of Engelger de Bohon in the same manor memorandum is made on the Roll. His accompt of the ferm of S'te-Mére-eglise and charges thereon accords with the return made in 1195, save that the Comte of Mortain had this year 100 li., the entire surplus, assised in the same manor; and such was also the case in regard of the ferm of Hainneville, whereof the sum of 5 li. was in the Treasury and he owed 33 li. 17s. 10d. of which he rendered accompt on the back. His accompt of his receipts from the escheats in his Bailiwick embraces the same issues as in 1195, varying only in the price of wheat, and by the withdrawal of the ferm of the land of Engelger de Bohon in St. Marcouf; but he had also in addition in this year 10s. from the aid of Amondeville, rendered only every second year, and 2s. 4d. from the purprestures of Montebourg. The same Bailiff rendered accompt of 184 minæ of oats of the Bernagium of the Cotentin, out of which three Recluses had 18 minæ for their drink, and for the land of the Abbot of St. Sauveur in Torgistorp which was exempt, one mina was deducted, the accomptant owing 41 li. 5s. this year for 165 minæ, the mina for 5s. He rendered accompt also in this year of the issues of the forests of the Cotentin, which in 1195 had been in the custody of Robert L'Angevin, and were in both years of the same assessed value and subject to the same charges, save that the mina had been raised from 9d. to 12d., while of the remanent of the old ferm of S'te-Mére-eglise he had paid into the Treasury 11 li. leaving 33 li. 9s. 8d. still due. Ralph de Gorges, Robert L'Angevin and William de Morsalines rendered accompt of 138 li. 13s. 6d. for themselves and their associates of the sale of the forest of Blanqueville, which sum, save 13 li. 17s. 4d. in tythe to the chaplain of Benouville-en-Caux and 29 li. in wages to the same accountants for the custody of the vente of the said forest, was in the Treasury. The same parties also rendered accompt of 112 li. 15s. 7d. of the vente of the forest of Rabé, which sum save tythe to the Abbey of Cerisy and 2 li. 10s. for wages as above, was also in the Treasury, and they were quit. Roger Wascelin, heir of Samson, rendered accompt of 9 marks 10s. sterling of the remanent of the fine of his father, which was originally one of 100 marks, as appears from the last entry on the Roll of the year 1195, paying this year three marks toward its discharge. Richard du Hommet rendered accompt of 365 li. of the remanent of his fine of 500 li. imposed by the finding of the jury upon him and in satisfaction of the debts, which were required of him, as set forth on the Roll of 1195, and his payment at the Treasury being limited in this year to 10 li. only, he continued to be charged as a debtor for the remainder. Of the gift of King Richard to him and Aegidia his wife he held the demesnes of Poupeville and Warreville in the Cotentin, and being deceased in the lifetime of his father, the Constable of Normandy, William de Humez, his son, 2 Joh. 1200, proffered to the King 200 li. money of Anjou, for the relief of the land of his father, the said Constable of Normandy, his grandfather, being his security for the payment. Ralph Tesson rendered account of 61 li. 4s., which he had of the fouage of his land, toward discharge of whose debt 5 li. was this year by him paid in at the Treasury. Thomas des Periers rendered account of 60 li. for having the land of Baldwin Wac to ferm; which sum was remitted to him, because he had not his bargain, under the King's writ. Baldwin Wac had the caput of his fief in Normandy at Négreville in the Cotentin, and had married Agnes, daughter of William du Hommet the Constable, who gave to her in frank-marriage by the hand of King Henry II. the land of Winchendon com. Bucks. parcel of the Honour of Earl Giffard; to the Abbey of Longues of the foundation of his father in the Bessin, Baldwin Wac and Agnes his wife gave a thousand of eels in his fishery of Petitville (St. Hilaire-sur-Taute) for the love of God in perpetual alms to be rendered annually. His death in this or the preceding fiscal year, by reason of his son and heir Baldwin being under age, had caused the custody of his lands to be in the King's hands, until William, Constable of Normandy, and the same Baldwin, his grandson, made proffer to King John, in the third year of his reign, of 1000 marks for the land of the said Baldwin in England and Normandy, upon condition that the said Baldwin should not be married except by the counsel of the King and of the friends of the said Baldwin, and the Constable of Normandy bound himself at the hands of the Archbishop of Canterbury that he would not permit the said Baldwin to be married without the counsel of the King, the first term of payment, viz. of 100 li., to be at the feast of St. Michael, and so of 100 li. from Exchequer to Exchequer; accordingly 100 li. were by them paid in at the Treasury, for which they had credit on the Roll of the Pipe sub tit. Lincoll'sira, 3 Joh. 1201. On the same Roll Hugh de Bobi (Boothby) rendered account of 104 li. 14s. 10d. of the issues of the lands of Baldwin Wac during one whole year; in the Treasury deposit had been made of 103 li. 3s. 2d., and to buy wine for the celebration of masses in the abbey of Bourne 4s. 4d. had been expended by writ of Geoffrey Fitz-Piers, and to the nuns of Brodholm of the alms of the said Baldwin 5s. had been paid by writ of the same justicier, and to the mother of the said Baldwin 22s. 6d., which had been taken from her dower, by the King's writ, and the accomptant was quit. Having adhered to King John, his land in Normandy escheated to the Crown, and with the Honour of Aubigny was held by the Comte of Ponthieu in 1220, the date of the compilation of the Register of Philip Augustus, where we read Comes Pontivi tenet Albigni per servicium ii mil. et dim. et terram Balduini Wac apud Esne-grevill per servicium unius militis. William du Hommet the Constable rendered accompt of 2846 li. 0s. 4d. of the remanent of his fine of 4000 li., in which he had become bound in 1195; his own deposit in the Treasury was this year only 7 li., but various sums had been received from his mainpernors by the Bailiffs in the several districts of Normandy, and in the Receipt of the Exchequer of England were 54 li. 4s. sterling for 216 li. 16s. money of Anjou, by writ of the Archbishop of Canterbury, then the Justiciary, and 25 li. sterling for 100 li. money of Anjou had from Ralph Taisson as mainpernor of the Constable, for all which he had credit, leaving 2133 li. 4s. 4d. yet owing. In the following reign he transferred his allegiance to the King of the French, wherefore extents of his manors in England at Ashby and Easton com. North^a and Waddon com. Berks. are found inserted on the Roll de Valore terrarum Normannorum, begun 6 Joh. 1205; prior to which date, when he was yet Constable of the King of England, he gave to the Priory of S'te Marguerite de Vignats a piece of land situate in La Fosse-Rounaut, in the presence of Thomas du Hommet his son, and of William du Hommet his grandson, and to the same Priory the said Thomas gave an annual rent of corn, charged upon his domain of Sousmont and his messuages of Aisy. The year of the decease of this hereditary officer has not been precisely ascertained, but his grandson had the title of Constable of Normandy in 1213, as appears by his charter granting to Roger de St. Lo the chapel of S'te Catharine, in the parish of Le Desert, with its endowment, which included a rent of 50s. money of Tours, quos Guillelmus de Humeto Constabularius, avus meus, elemosinavit eidem capellæ in suo auxilio de Andouvilliers, antequam filiam suam maritasset Ricardo; in 1238 the same William du Hommet granted the abovementioned chapel to the brethren of the Holy Trinity for the redemption of captives, in whose favour his wife Eustachia had there founded a Priory, which had the name of La Per-rine. In 1239 William du Hommet, Constable of Normandy, filius Ricardi de Humeto junioris, having been requested by the Prior of St. Fromond and the convent of the same place to renew the charter granted by his ancestors to the same monastery, he appended his seal to the charter so renewed in confirmation of the endowment. We learn from it that the foundation of this religious house dated back from the time of Richard II., Duke of the Normans, and prior to the year 1025, when Hugh, Bishop of Coutances, who had exempted it from episcopal custom, was deceased; its founder is entitled Robertus de Humeto, and was succeeded in his Honour by his grandson and heir, William du Hommet, whose grants were made with the consent of William, King of England. Of the gift of Robert, grandson of Bishop Odo, the Priory of St. Fromond had all the tythe in La Rivière in fisheries, in herbages and in wood, in marsh and in toll; and of the gift of Richard du Hommet, Constable of King Henry, grandson of William du Hommet abovenamed, the mill under the monastery with two sluices and the tythe of all the toll of Hommet, and the tythe of the mill Fauvel, and all the mill Zusche, and the tythe of the park of Hommet, and of all his demesnes of the Honour of Hommet, and on the dedication of the church the fair of St. Fromond, and 26 acres of meadow, and the fishery of Vir-hum. In England the same Richard du Hommet gave the church of St. Andrew of Bondby, and the church of All Saints of Saxeby, with all the appurtenances of the same, and the churches of St. Paul and St. Peter, and of All Saints, and of St. John and St. Michael, and of St. George of Stamford, and the tythe of his demesne belonging to the castles. In reference to this descent of the Honour of Hommet we have on the Fine Roll, 6 Joh. 1204, an important entry for its elucidation; there Simon de Lindon proffers 10 marks for having an inquisition to ascertain if the vill of Easton com. North^a, with its appurtenances, had been mortgaged by Simon de Eston, grandfather of him the said Simon, to Robert grandson of the Bishop, grandfather of William du Hommet the Constable, and if it were the inheritance and the right of him the said Simon, and if the same Simon de Lindon were his next heir, and if William du Hommet had other entry into the said land than through the said Robert to whom the land had been mortgaged. Now we know from Ordericus Vitalis, his contemporary, that Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, uterine brother of the Conqueror, carnali ardore stimulatus, genuit filium nomine Johannem, quem nunc in curia Henrici Regis videmus eloquentia magnaue probitate pollentem; hence it may be assumed that Robertus nepos Episcopi, who on the Roll of the Exchequer, 31 Hen. I. 1130, was an accomptant pro placito bisse in Norhamtescira, had this designation as grandson of Bishop Odo, son of John here named, and that by marriage with the heiress of William du Hommet he acquired her Honour, which thus became united with his own fief of La Rivière. His son did homage to the Bishop of Bayeux prior to the accession of Henry II. to the throne of England, who, by the title of Duke of Normandy and comte of Anjou, certified to the Justiciaries and barons of Normandy that Richard de Humez had sworn fealty to the Bishop of Bayeux, Philip, as to his Lord, in His presence at Bayeux, and had there demised to the same his water of Fosse-Luchon, teste ipso Comite apud Baiocas. By the same Duke he was constituted his Constable, and subsequently attained to such favour that in 1173 Henry, then King of England, granted to Richard du Hommet, his Constable, and to his heirs for his service Stamford, with all the appurtenances of the castle and bourg, except the service of the abbot of Peterborough and of William de Lamvallei. He at the same time gave and confirmed to them Ketton com. Rutl. and Dodington com. North^a, and of the fief of Earl Giffard Risborough com. Bucks and Sheringham com. Norf., with their appurtenances, and in Normandy Meisy and La Haie de la Lutumière, with their appurtenances, to hold as a fief and inheritance to him and his heirs, being witnesses Rotrou Archbishop of Rouen, Henry Bishop of Bayeux, Arnulph Bishop of Lisieux, Froger Bishop of Seez, Richard elect of Winchester, John dean of Salisbury, William de Curci dapifer, Jordan Tesson, Fulk Paenel, John de Subigny, Robert Bertram, Hugh de Gornai, Richard Fitz-Count, Hugh de Cressy, and Robert de Brucourt, at Caen. Upon the retirement of Richard du Hommet, the Constable, into the monastery of Aunay, King Henry granted to William du Hommet the office of his Constable, which his father, Richard du Hommet, had of Him, to hold to him and to his heirs of the King and his heirs as a fief and inheritance; at the same time he granted and confirmed to William du Hommet all underwritten, which he had granted and given to his father aforesaid for his service and confirmed to him by his charters to hold to him and to his heirs as a fief and an inheritance, viz. the places named above, as also the land of Waddon and Winchendon com. Bucks, and in Normandy the land of Aupegard, with the increase thereto of the King's adding, with all the appurtenances of the said lands, to hold in like form to him and his heirs of the King and his heirs, being witnesses Richard of Winchester and Henry of Bayeux, Bishops, Nicholas the chaplain, Walter Fitz-Robert, Rannulf de Glanville, Hugh de Cressy, Fulk Painel, Bertram de Verdun, Richard Giffard, Robert de Stuteville and Gislebert Pipart, at Caen. Of these lands so confirmed Enguerrand du Hommet, the next brother of William, had Risborough, and Jordan du Hommet, a third brother, Sherringham, which manors were in the possession of William de Similly and John du Hommet at the time of the separation of Normandy. Aegidia, the wife of Richard du Hommet junior, grandson of Richard du Hommet the Constable, was deceased in early life, on which occasion Matildis de la Haie gave to the abbey of St. Nicolas de Blanchelande for her own soul and the souls of her ancestors, and for the soul of Egidia her most dear daughter, toward the celebration of her office and on the day of her burial, the lord Richard du Hommet her husband consenting and joining with his mother-in-law in the gift, 100s. money of Anjou, of rent; for payment whereof they assigned to the abbey a certain portion of the wood near the park of the said abbey toward St. Michel and the rivulet of La Carbonnière, sicut signorum et fossati determinet appositio. Richard du Hommet junior apparently had to his second wife Alienora, relict of Robert de la Haie, who gave a third part of the church of Emondeville to the abbey of Montebourg; which gift Richard du Hommet, knight, her husband, and Robert de la Haie her son, confirmed. His death, 2 Joh. 1200, in the lifetime of his father, William, the Constable of Normandy, has been noticed above, when his son will have been of full age, he having then paid relief for his land. Of his brothers, whose names have been given elsewhere, Jordan was Bishop of Lisieux, in the presence of whom, when thus dignified, and of his other sons, William, Constable of Normandy, gave to the cathedral of Bayeux a moiety of the church of Louvières for the obit of his father Richard. The same William du Hommet, Constable of Normandy, for the redemption of his soul and of the souls of his father and mother and of Lucia, his wife, gave to the abbey of Longues a cultivated plot of ground situate at Maisy and other issues in Canteleu, Angloisheville, le Val de L'Estanville, and in the mill of Vasta Rippuria in exchange of a setier of corn, which his father Richard du Hommet and his mother Agnes de Beaumont had given to the said monks in his rent of Maisy; and to the same abbey his son Thomas du Hommet, knight, gave in 1209 40s. money of Tours in his fair of Beaumont on the feast of St. Peter-in-vincula: which grant seems to fix the decease of the father to that year or earlier, as exhibiting the son then in possession of the Honour of Beaumont-le-Richard of the succession of his father. Emma de Humez, whose parentage has not been ascertained, was successively the wife of Geoffrey de Nevill and of Geoffrey de Valognes, and being deceased, Henry de Nevill proffered, 9 Joh. 1208, 100 li. and a palfrey for having seisin of a fief of three knights with its appurtenances in Raskelf and Sutton com. Ebor. which had belonged to Emma de Humez, his mother, whereof the King had received his homage. In the same county, 2 Ric. I. 1191, Rannulph and Robert de Humez were tenants of lands, all of whom, it may be conjectured, had their surname from the same locality as the Constables of Normandy. In the survey of Domesday none of the name occur; but signum Rodberti de Hulmets is found at the foot of a charter of William the Conqueror, granting the manor of Hemingborough to God and St. Cuthbert and the priory of Durham. In Normandy, after the separation from England, the family of Hommet continued to hold their hereditary office, and upon the compilation of the Register of Philip Augustus by Guérin, Bishop of Senlis, in 1220, this entry was made of the tenure of the Constable of Normandy; Willelmus de Hometo tenet Honorem de Hometo per servicium v. militum et Honorem de Rumilli per servicium duorum militum et dimidii; of the barony of Hommet he had 22 knights ad servicium suum proprium, who found the said five knights, when necessary, for the service of the Lord the King. The service due by him to the King on account of the Honour of Remilly was in 1220 performed by Enguerrand du Hommet per manum Constabularii, antenati sui, he holding it in paragio of the line of the eldest-born according to the custom of Normandy, which did not extend to primogeniture the right of sole heirship, as in England. The first mention of any personage bearing the local surname of this Honour is met with in a Roll containing the particulars of the endowment of the abbey of Troarn in the time of William the Conqueror, where is this recital, in Horseleia ecclesiam et decimam cum omnibus hominibus et villa et redditibus ejus—in Witenhert ecclesiam cum decima et terra presbiteri et ecclesiam de Mapella cum terra presbiteri et terram unius caruce cum pratis adjacentibus ipsi terræ et decimis ipsius ville de dono Roberti de Romilleio. In another similar Roll we read Adelaidis de Lingronia, soror Roberti de Romilleio, dedit nobis xiii. acras terre, v. in Aneires et iv. inter Taillevillam et S. Albinum et iv. quos Gunterius tenebat de illa et quicquid possedit de feodo Lingronie et Berne-riarum. In Lancashire and Craven com. Ebor. Roger le Poitevin, son of the founder of the abbey of Troarn, had toward the close of the Conqueror's reign an extensive barony, and in the district last named a Robert de Romilly was also seated in the reign of Henry I. being apparently the first grantee of Bolton and its appendant vills, and of many other manors, parcel of the Terra Regis at the Survey, but then lying waste. In one of these vills, named Skipton, the castle was afterward built, which was made the caput of his Honour; and the descent of the same Honour immediately upon Cecilia de Romilly, wife of William, son of Rannulph Vicomte of the Bessin, may be deemed evidence sufficient that the only issue he left surviving at his death were daughters. This William, in common with his elder brother Rannulph, and his own son Rannulph, had the surname of Mischinus, adopted apparently with a view to distinguish them from relatives of the same name with whom they were contemporary, by denoting their later birth, the word being descriptive of a "young man;" but by the transcribers of charters the erroneous substitution of de for le was frequently made, and Mischinus, or Le Meschin, i. e. junior, being thus read de Meschines, the surname has been mistaken for one of local origin. In 1120 a monastery of canons was founded at Embsay by the lord William Le Meschin and the lady Cecilia his wife, lady and heiress of the Honour of Skipton, in honour of Blessed Mary and St. Cuthbert, Bishop, in the 21st year of the reign of King Henry, son of King William the Bastard, and in the second year of the Pontificate of Thurstan, Archbishop of York, and they gave to the canons there serving God the church of Skipton, with its chapel of Carlton and the whole vill of Emmesey. In 31 Hen. I. 1130-1 William, son of Rannulph the Vicomte, was an accomptant in Everwicscira of twenty marks of silver of pleas held before Geoffrey de Clinton and his associates at Blythe, and had paid half the sum into the Treasury in that year; after whose decease Cecilia de Romeli remarried Henry de Traches,^k as shewn by their joint grant of Kildwick to the Canons of Embsey. Rannulph, son and heir of William Le Meschin,^l will have died without ^k The name Henricus de Traches, as read in the Monasticon Anglicanum, is probably to be understood of Henry de Traceio, to whom King Stephen proffered the Barony of Barnstaple com. Devon, and who stood foremost among the upholders of his usurped crown. He had a son, Oliver, who 11 Hen. II. gave 500 marks for livery of his purparty of the Honour of Barnstaple, and who in 1172 held a Knight's fee in Normandy in the Vicomté of Cerences, having four knights ad suum servicium, which knights were wont to be in the service of the Comte of Mortain, one day at his cost, and afterward at the cost of the Comte. King Stephen had been comte of Mortain, and on his elevation to the throne had rewarded his Norman vassal with the rich inheritance of the widowed Cecilia de Romilly.

^l Among the evidences of St. Mary's abbey at York was a charter of Rannulph Meschinus, son of William, son of Rannulph, confirming to that religious house the church of St. Bees in Copeland, and seven carucates of land and all its parish, and whatever his father had given and granted to the same church, for the redemption of his own soul and for the soul of his father and of all his relations, as well as of his lords, by the counsel and testimony of his liege-men, viz. Fulk his uncle, and Reiner Dapifer, and Godard, and Rannulf the Sheriff, Siward the priest, William the chaplain, and William d'Arques. Fulk, his uncle, was perhaps issue in the lifetime of his mother, leaving Adeliza his sister, wife of William grandson of Duncan King of Scotland,^m sole inheritrix of the Honour of Skipton, and to which she had succeeded before 1 Hen. II. 1155, when in her widowhood the Canons of Embsay were translated to Bolton with the consent of William of Egremont, her son, and of her daughters. Meanwhile the fief of Remilly in Normandy had devolved, apparently by right of inheritance, upon Lucia wife of Jordan de Say, of whose joint grant the monks of Aunay had a moiety of the land they had in Asnières, and tythe of the mills, toll, orchards and cattle of Aunay and Remilly (de Romilleio), and tythe of eels, and the two acres of land in which the grange of the monks was built, and two gerbs of the whole tythe of Remilly and two gerbs of the tythe of Bauquay; in England, of the gift of the same Jordan and Lucia, they had the church of Kirtlington com. Oxon, with the glebe and all its appurtenances, and in Burcester the tythe of their demesne, and the chapel of Tewe with the tythes of their demesne. Of the gift of Richard de Humez, and of Agnes his wife, daughter and heir of the said Jordan and Lucy, the same monks had the church of Remilly (de Rumeleio) in its entirety, with all its appurtenances. Langrune was also of the inheritance of the family of Hommet, and given by William the Constable to Aunay in 1190, on the day that the abbey church was dedicated. From these evidences it may be safely assumed that Lucia, wife of Jordan de Say, was nearly a-kin to Robert and Adelaidis de Remilly, and it may be sister of Cecilia, whom genealogical writers of late date designate as daughter and heir of Robert de Remilly, though her parentage is not specified in her charters. Robert de Tresgoz, the Bailiff of the Cotentin, had this year delivered into the Treasury 110 li. of which he rendered accompt, of the issue of the land of William de Magneville, whilst it had been in the King's hand; and below William de S'te-Mère-eglise rendered accompt of 300 marks of silver for having brother of Henry de Tracy, his step-father, as the name is not met with in the charters of members of his own family.

^m In the charter of Cecilia de Romeli, which contains her gift of the vill of Kildwick and land in Stratton to the church of Embsay, we read this declaration, ita quod ego et gener meus Willielmus, nepos Regis Scotiæ Duncani, obtulimus easdem per unum cultellum villas super altare Sanctæ Mariæ et Sancti Cuthberti. King William Rufus had made Duncan, bastard son of Malcolm, both a knight and King of the Scots on the death of his father, A. D. 1093, but he being slain in the next year his legitimate brothers were his successors in the Kingdom. He had, it seems, left issue a son of the same name, father of William here named, by Dugdale incorrectly described as "Earl of Murray in Scotland, nephew to Malcolm, King of that realm."

the custody of the heir of William de Magneville and of his land, as the King's charter witnessed, his payment therefore in this year covering half the said amount. A subsequent accompt of the Bailiff of 13 li. 10s. also relates to this escheat, being the issue of the view of the forest of Ollonde, whilst it was in the King's hand; in the Treasury were 8 li. 9s., and he owed 5 li. 1s. This family had their local surname from Mandeville near Trevières in the Bessin, but their chief seat was in the Côtentin at Ollonde in the commune of Canville, whence the distinction of Mandeville-Hollande yet applied to the commune first named. The fief of Ollonde extended into the parish of Ourville, and had with it been comprised in the Honour of Plessis, of which Richard who was called Turstin and surnamed Haldup, with Anna his wife, and Eudo their son, appear as owners in acts of date antecedent to the conquest of England; and when they founded the abbey of L'Essay, that part which they had in Ourville and Averville and in the other mesnils, which belonged to Ourville, was made parcel of the endowment. The same Abbey had also of their gift in the vill called La Févrerie (Favilleriæ) the part which Adelais de Balte (Baupté) had held; and this lady, probably sister of Turstin, may have been identical with Adelaidis, wife of Geoffrey de Magneville, tenant of an extensive fief in England at the time of the Survey made by William the Conqueror. In his grant to St. Peter and the church of Westminster, as well as to St. Mary of Hurley, Geoffrey de Magneville expresses that the endowment of the cell at the last-named vill was to be for the health and redemption of his soul and of his wife Lecelina, by whose counsel he had begun this good work, and for the soul of Athelaisa his first wife, mother of his sons, then deceased, as likewise for the soul of all his heirs succeeding to him. For this religious establishment he obtained the confirmation of King William, and made the vill, its site, the caput of his Honour, these witnesses, Osmund bishop of Salisbury, Gilbert abbot of Westminster, the Lady Lecelina his wife, William de Magneville, Richard de Magneville, and many others, subscribing the charter of foundation. William de Magneville succeeded to the barony of his father in England, but the tenant of the patrimony in Normandy had name Roger, who, before 1104, had given to the monastery of St. Sauveur the church of St. Martin of Grosville with the tythe and glebe, with the consent of Eudes le Vicomte, of whose fief it was, Geoffrey de Magnevill his brother, Walter de Hairon, and Roger the Chamberlain being witnesses. The same abbey had also the advowsons of the churches of St. Martin and St. Mard de Gouey in the immediate vicinity of Ol-londe, which Geoffroy Ivas and Roger de Magneville and Robert de Dic had given, free and quit, with the tythes and glebes and alms belonging to the same churches ; and a charter of Ralph de Haia in confirmation, who then held the Honour of Plessis, attests that the church of St. Martin of Gouey and the chapel of St. Mard were of his fief. Stephen de Magneville, son of Roger, was a mainpernor for certain tenants of lands in Berkshire 31 Hen. 1, 1130, and of his gift the abbey abovenamed had a rent out of his mill of Orlonde ; the abbey of Montebourg had likewise of his gift the church of Catz near Carentan. Roger de Magneville confirmed to the abbey of St. Sauveur the gifts made by his father, Stephen de Magneville, of the churches of St. Martin of Grouville, of St. Martin of Fréeville and of St. Martin of Porbail, i. e. Gouey, and gave to the abbey of Montebourg the church of Besneville, another adjacent commune to Ollonde, sicut Rogerus presbiter eam liberius et quietius tenuit ex dono patris mei, Stephani de Magnevilla, qui sibi eam dedit in elemosinam tantum in vita sua ; of this last donation the witnesses were Nicholas prior of Montacute, Ralph Patric and Roger his uncles, William son of Thierry, Walter Fitz Ralph, Richard de Saucey, Geoffrey de Ver, and many others. In 1172 Roger de Mandeville returned his service in Normandy at two knight's fees and a half and ad servicium suum three knights ; which entry is in the list of Infeudations, under the heading In Ballivia de Hosa de Honore Moretonii, Osbert de la Heuze being then and in 1180 Bailiff of the Cotentin. At the same time Ralph de la Haie owed an equal service for the Honour of Plessis, and had besides one knight's fee of the Honour of Mortain of the fief of Cerences ; ad servicium suum six knights and half a knight in the Cotentin. In England Roger de Mandeville was tenant in capite of a fief in Wiltshire, and he there gave the church de Stoches (Earl-Stoke) to the Norman abbey of Montebourg, adding in the same charter a grant also of what he had in the church of Puteville (St. Maurice) with reservation only of the tenement of Julian Malesarz, who held it for the time being. To another of his charters containing a gift of whatsoever he had in the church of Gratot near Coutances to Robert Avenel, his clerk, in perpetual alms, A. de Nonant, his wife, and William de Magneville, his brother, are witnesses. In 1195 his son, William de Magneville, was a debtor in the Cotentin in 30 li. of the relief of a fief of two knights ; and by the King's writ the debt was remitted to him that same year and he was quit at the Exchequer. In 2 Joh. 1200 Thierry le Tyois (Teutonicus) made proffer to the King of 300 marks for having the daughter of William de Mandeville to wife with her entire inheritance, which belonged to her, and swore to find mainpernors at Christmas; of which proffer entry is made on the Rolls de Oblatis under Wiltshire. Subsequently, on the Rolls of Normandy, we find writs dated at Brionne 17 Jan. 1202 addressed to the Seneschal of Normandy and to Richard de Fontenay, Bailiff of the Cotentin, bidding them know that Matthew Fitz-Herbert had fined with the King for the land of Ollonde (Hurlunda) with the appurtenances, which had belonged to William de Mandeville, which Thierry le Tyois held. Matthew Fitz-Herbert, Lord of Stoke-in-Hamme com. Devon, was then the husband of Joan, daughter and heiress of William de Mandeville and of his wife Mabilia Patric, and was by her in the year 1199 constituted her attorney in a suit against the Abbot of Stanley for the advowson of the church of Stoke. The monks claimed the church of Hurdestoke (Earlstoke) of the gift of Mabilia Patric and produced her charter in testimony, but the defendant would not answer, unless he saw Mabilia present, and until he knew whether she would warrant her gift or not, because, as he alleged, he could show reason to her why she ought not to warrant it. In the following Trinity term four knights were deputed to visit her, who reported her answer to this effect, that she, after Matthew Fitz Herbert had married her daughter and had had children by her, through the entreaty of the Lady the Queen, made a charter in favour of the said monks at a time when the land, to which the church was appurtenant, was not in her possession, and that she was unwilling to come before the justices or appoint any attorney in her place. Before this fine was paid Philip Augustus had subjected Normandy to his rule, and by charter, dated at Vaudreuil in May, 1205, he gave to his faithful and beloved Richard d'Argences for 107 li. money of Tours, the fief of Ollonde to him and his heirs; in whose line it continued. In the register of Philip Augustus A.D. 1220 Guillelmus de Argenciis tenet quartam partem unius feodi militis apud Orlandam is one entry, and another of similar purport follows below, with the addition quod fuit quondam de Honore de Plesseis. As late as 19 Hen. 3, 1235, the King sent his writ, dated 31 Jan. to his Barons of the Exchequer, letting them know that he had pardoned Herbert Fitz Matthew 300 marks, in which the said Matthew, his father, had fined with King John, his father, for having the land which had belonged to William de Mandeville, because he had it not, as is said. Matthew Fitz Herbert was deceased 15 Hen. 3, 1231, leaving Joan his wife surviving, who by writ to the Sheriff of Wilts 13 Feb. had stay of the demand made upon her at the Exchequer for the debts which the same Matthew owed to the King, as also a replevy of her chattels seized on that occasion. She subsequently divested herself before the King of all the lands which the said Matthew and she had held of the King in capite of her own inheritance; whereupon the King received the homage of Herbert, son and heir of the said Matthew and Joan, of all the said lands, and by writ 21 Feb. the Sheriff of Wilts was commanded to cause the said Herbert to have full seizin of the same lands, after taking security from him for the payment of the relief thereof to the King. Nicholas de Boseville (Beuzeville) rendered accompt of 5 li. of a relief of the fief of the Bishop of Bayeux, of which the Bishop had given to the King one moiety in order that the King might arraign such as were debtors for their reliefs to have the other moiety; accordingly the payment into the Treasury on this behalf was 50s. or half the amount, the Bishop of Bayeux getting the other half, and the accomptant was quit. The next accompt of the Bailiff of amercements, proffers and fines was rendered through Thomas de Beaumont, the sum of whose receipts, 316 li. 4s. 4d., was in the Treasury, and he was quit. From the Bishop of Coutances he had received 66 li. 13s. 4d. of his fine, because his knights withdrew from the host without license, and from the issue of the land of Baldwin Wac in Négreville 26 li. 6s. whilst it had been in the King's hands. Of the Loan made in the Bailiwick of the Cotentin Robert de Tresgoz rendered accompt of 582 li., the sum of his receipts, of which 498 li. were in the Treasury; also of the Tallage set in the town of St. Lo by the King's precept, of 400 li., of which 205 li. 10s. were in the Treasury; and he owed the remaining sums due on these accompts and 100 li. of the Tallage set in the vill of Periers by the King's precept. He also rendered accompt of 1196 li. 10s. 4d. of the Tallage set to maintain men-at-arms in the March, and of 112 li. 10s. of the monies taken from the servientes who were appointed to go to Gaillefontaine in the host and had not gone; both which sums he delivered in at the Treasury and was quit. The Bailiff, as in 1180 and 1195, was the accomptant likewise of the view of the forests of the Cotentin; in the Treasury were 10 li. 18s. 6d. and in tythe to the abbey of Cerisy 5 li. 1s. 6d. from the forests of Brix and Montebourg and Cherbourg and La Haie de Digoville and Rabé and La Haie de Valognes—in tythe to the Abbey of Le Vœu 18s. 7d. from Barnavast—in tythe to the Chaplain of Benouville-sur-mer 36s. 4d. from the forest of Blanqueville, and in wages of the viewers 7 li. 10s. 1d. were the deductions for the customary payments, and 51 li. 19s. were yet owing. His next accompt is of his debts written on the other side of this Roll, or Membrane, as noticed above, viz. of the residue of the fermes of the Prevôté of Barfleur, of the Vicomté of the Cotentin, and of Henneville, of the residue of his accompt of the minor rents, of the bernage of the Cotentin, of the metairie of the forest of Barnavast, of the hogs and rams of the same metairie, of the residue of the oats of the metairie of Blanqueville and of the hogs and rams of the same metairie, of which the sum was 200 li. 15s. 3d.; in the Treasury he had deposited anew 12 li. 10d. and by the King's writ 24 li. had been laid out on the works of the vivier of Chiffrevast, leaving 165 li. 14s. 5d. yet due. The sum of 150 li. received from amercements is separately accounted for by the Bailiff below; the which had been by him paid to Helyas Bernard and Robert Le Clerc in the King's Privy Chamber, and he was quit. In like manner the Abbot of Montebourg rendered accompt, through Robert L'Angevin, of 40 li. for two palfreys, which he had given to the King, having made payment of the sum to Helyas Bernard in the King's Chamber in the Isle, as had also Robert l'Angevin of 10 li. from the aide de l'ost of the fief of Henry de Bohon, and both were quit. In the list of debtors to the crown in the Bailiwick, which closes the entries on the back of this membrane, we may notice the following, Robert de Tresgoz 44 li. 19s. 6d. pro plegio Constabularii,—Odo de Periers 206 li. 7s. 6d. pro stultiloquio—Richard de Canville 151 li. 5s. 11d. of the residue of the old ferm of Cherbourg, Brix, and Valognes, and 20 li. because he came not to the Exchequer—Ralph Patric 7 li. 5s. of the arrelagium of his land at Mont-Martin—Jordan de Barneville 40 li. for having a record of the duel against Walter Fitz Godefrey—Guy de Dive 84 li. 16s. 4d. of the residue of the issue of the Honour of Gavrai and 2 li. 5s. 8d. of the residue of the pannage of the forest of Gavrai—Ralph Borse 6 li. 4s. 8d. of the aide de l'ost—Adam du Port 100 li. for having the ferm of Lithaire—and again Robert de Tresgoz 25s. from the servientes who returned from the host of Aumale and 9 li. of the ferm of the land of William Pinel, and 35 li. 15s. of the issue of the land of William Engineor.

Membrane 14.

Ballia Vallis Rodolii per Walterum de Ely.

Ballia de inter Rislam et Secanam per Walterum de Ely et Nicholaum de Londa et a tergo. Lyons.

On this membrane Walter de Ely, the castellan of the important frontier fortress of Vaudreuil, first rendered accompt of 21 li. 17s. 5d.

of the residue of the old ferm of Vaudreuil; but having expended 30 li. in cost of the King's champions who had been brought into the Isle d'Andely against the King of France under the King's writ, he was quit of the above debt and the excess reckoned to him below in his accompt of the new ferm of Vaudreuil. This ferm was of the same assessed amount as in 1184, viz. 700 li., and the customary fixed payments in alms and wages correspond with those made in that year, save as to the marshal of the meadows and for the works of the vineyards, which are omitted, but in addition for the aquagium of the river Seine, which the monks of Bonport had, 37 li. were paid of fixed alms; whilst for the vill of Louviers and the ministerium of the forest of Bort belonging to the same vill, which the Archbishop of Rouen had for the exchange of the vill of Andely, 400 li., which were in this ferm—for the mills of Vaudreuil, which Peter de Taregon, the Arblaster, had, 100 li.—for the vill of Poses which the Abbey of St. Ouen de Rouen had for the exchange of the vill of Limai at the head of the Pont de l'Arche and for its loss from the vill of Martainville without Rouen by the vivier made there, 34 li., which were in this ferm—for the destruction of the vill of Vauvrai through the war 36 li. 8s. this year, and in wages to two knights sojourning in the castle of Vaudreuil during the war 40 li. 4s. 9d. were other disbursements, which balanced the accompt. Walter de Ely also rendered accompt of 80 li. of the issue of the vill of Pont de l'Arche and of Limaie; in making up the wages of the two knights aforesaid 8 li. 7s. 3d.—for repairing the ferry-boat of Pont de l'Arche and the bridge of the same vill 20 li. and again in wages to the same knights there sojourning in the castle of Vaudreuil in war-time 60 li. constituted the expenditure in excess under the King's writ, which was partly covered by his receipt from the residue of the old and from the new bernage of Vaudreuil and of the Vicomté of Entre-Rile-et-Seine, which produced 6 li. 13s., value of the setier 6s.; and this sum being deducted, 34s. 4d. was the surplus, which were reckoned to him below. On the Roll are also these memoranda, "the Monks of Bon-port have the meadows and vineyards of the King of Vaudreuil by the charter of the King, except forty wainloads of hay, which the King's fermors have. The same monks have the bees of the forest, from which mead is wont to be made." An extract from the charter of Richard 1, dated at the Fair Castle of La Roche, 28th day of February, in the ninth year of his reign, and given by the hand of Magister Guarinus, Prior of Loches, then acting in the room of the Chancellor, in confirmation of the endowment of Notre Dame de Bonport, a monastery of the order of Citeaux, situate and founded in the forest of Bord, in the place formerly called Mar-és-dans, will best explain the occasion of the insertion of these memoranda. "Know ye that we have given the site of Mar-és-dans and all the haie of Mar-és-dans as the road divides the same haie from the forest, and in the same forest of Bord, viz. in the place called Bain de Morin and about it twenty carucates of land, that is to say, to each carucate sixty acres of land by admeasurement of our perch, i. e. of 25 feet. We have also given in the same forest all things necessary to the construction of their own proper dwellings and for their fire and for all their domestic uses, and pasture for all their beasts through the entire forest, and acquittance of pannage of their own swine and those of their men, and the swarms of bees to the use of the church. We have also given to them all the vineyards which we had at Vauvrai with their appurtenances, and the whole clos de Leri with its appurtenances, and all the vineyards and wines, which we had in Vaudreuil, and all our meadows, viz. of Vauvrai, Huma, Louviers, Incarville and Leri with the pasturage thereof, and all our hay of Vaudreuil, which was wont to be brought to our granges, except what is appropriated to the ploughs and to the fees of servientes, and all the water, to do with whatsoever they choose, and all the fisheries, and the mill of Poses with its appurtenances, and all the rents which We had from the bridge of L'Arche in the Seine upwards as far as Vaudreuil extends, and exemption, by sea, by land, and by water, for all their goods and those of their men, as likewise exemption from mucison of the wine for all their own uses and from every other custom in all our jurisdiction." The clause in the Exchange of Andely, to which reference is made in the accompt, was the following, concessimus etiam eisdem (Walter, archbishop, and the chapter of Rouen) manerium de Louviers cum omnibus pertinentiis et libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus suis, cum ministerio de Louviers, salvis ad opus nostrum venatione nostra et destructione foreste, ita tamen quod non sit in riguardo; wherefore, the ministerium of the forest of Louviers should be reckoned merely as a subdivision of the great forest of Bord, which extended in the direction of Vraiville, and included the Haie-Malherbe and the Haie-Le-Comte, as the names of those parishes indicate. The first mention of this forest occurs in a charter of Richard II. Marchio Normannie, in favour of the church of Nôtre Dame de Chartres, A. D. 1014, of whose gift it had in Abroacensi comitatu Ebrardivillam (Vraiville) totam cum ecclesia et decimam venationis de silva, qua dicitur Bortis. The charter of Richard I. for the exchange with the Abbey of St. Ouen, also referred to in the Accompt, was given by the hand of the Bishop of Ely, the Chancellor, 17th day of July, ninth of his reign, at La Roche d'Andely, and expresses that "We have granted to the abbot and monks the vill which is called Poses with all its appurtenances in perpetual alms in exchange for their land which they had at Limai (Limaya) near the Pont de l'Arche, and in exchange of their meadows and tenements and of their rents where the site is occupied by the pond near Rouen; also the tythes of all the mills, which were Ours at Rouen, which We have given in exchange to the Archbishop of Rouen, as they had them before We gave the mills to the Archbishop;" the witnesses were William Fitz Ralph, then Seneschal of Normandy, William du Hommet, Constable of Normandy, Peter de Préaux, Walter de Ely, Magr Nicholas de Berley, and many others. The tenure of the land on the right bank of the Seine by the abbey of St. Ouen, dated back from the time of Duke Richard II. in whose charter, confirming the endowment, Mainer cum ecclesia et insulis ad eam pertinentibus et piscariis is specified among the gifts added by himself; which name of Le Manoir the commune fronting Les Dans yet retains. Limaie or Huimai was the name of a hamlet in the adjacent commune of Igoville, and its description on the Roll Limai de capite pontis is proof that the head of the bridge rested on its territory; in the castle built by Richard I. on this spot was afterward a chapel, dedicated to St. Stephen, by du Plessis placed in the parish of Igoville. The repairs required for the ferry-boat of the bridge of L'Arche would seem to imply that the bridge did not extend across the stream its full width, and that the arches only reached to one or more intervening islands, leaving the mid-channel open. After a few separate entries of accompts of debtors in the district, whose payments are acknowledged to be in the receipt of Walter de Ely, that officer rendered accompt of the Loan raised in the Bailiwick of Vaudreuil, of which the sum was 512 li., and had been thus expended; viz. to Geoffrey the Money-changer 250 li. of which he had to render accompt—in wages of three servientes who had the custody of the ferry-boat at Port-joie 3 li. 1s.—of six servientes Balistarii, who had the guard of the King's dwelling at Port-joie 5 li. 8s.—of 50 servientes pedites sojourning in the castle of Vaudreuil for twenty days 33 li. 6s. 8d.—of William Painchon, balister, sent to Rodolium (Vaudreuil) 4 li. 12s. for 23 days—of 50 servientes sent to Tillières during forty days 33 li. 6s. 8d.—of 40 servientes sent to Evreux 26 li. 13s. 4d. during twenty days—to William de Montchensy toward the works of Radepont 50 li.—for four muids and four setiers of corn bought and sent to Tillières in store of the castle 44 li. 10s.—in repairing the mills of Vaudreuil destroyed by the flood 7 li. 3s. 4d.—for making three bridges, of which two were in the barbecan and one over the Morte Eure, 20 li. 15s.—in discharge of the balance of the accompt rendered above 1 li. 14s. 3d.—for repairing the King's ferry-boats of Port-joie 3 li. 12s. 8d.—in wages of those who kept the ferry-boats of Elbeuf and Oissel 20s.—to Markade 20 li. for a gift—to William Berse-lou and John Morel 6 li. for the horse of Roger de Beauvoir, which the King had—and to Warine du Croix 20s. for a gift. The excess of 2s. 11d. over the receipt was reckoned to him in his accompt below of 410 li. of the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of Vaudreuil to maintain men serving at arms in the March. Of this money Robert d'Harcourt and Sawale Fitz Henry had 320 li. of which they rendered accompt,—to the Earl of Leicester 27 li. 5s. were remitted due from the men of his fief—in wages of 100 servientes during eight days and of 50 servientes during other eight days sojourning in Vaudreuil 50 li. were paid, and Stephen du Maisnil had 20 li. for a hauberk and one serving man-at-arms whom he had taken, the Accomptant remaining a debtor for the residue. Walter de Ely next rendered accompt of 222 li. 8s. of the Tallage of 12d. set in the Bailiwick of Vaudreuil—of 24 li. 10s. of his receipts written above on this membrane—of 63 li. 3s. 8d. of the residue of the issue of Pont de l'Arche—of 395 li. 1s. 2d. of the residue of his old Receipts—of 236 li. 16s. 3d. of the residue of the Tallage of 40d.—of 148 li. 5s. 4d. of the residue of the Tallage set to maintain servientes in the March—of 413 li. 0s. 6d. of the issue of the land of the Comte de Meulan in Beaumont-le-Roger and Elbœuf, except the tythe of the sale of the forest of Beaumont, whilst it had been in the King's hands, and of 10s. of the issue of the land of Haimard de Landes. The sum total of the monies so received was 1504 li. 3s. 11d., whereof 80 li. had been the sole deposit in the Treasury, whilst he had credit for these payments made under the King's writs during the term, viz. to Peter des Roches and Robert Le Clerc in the King's chamber 222 li. 8s.—to the Archbishop of Rouen 7 li. due of the men of his fief on the score of the Tallage of 12d.—in repairing the bridge of Lerie 35 li.—for making the paling of Lande-mare 2 li. 15s. 8d.—for plastering the chamber near the chapel of the King in the castle 20s.—for making a wooden turret and turning-bridge upon the bridge of Port-joie 26 li.—in covering anew the dwellings of the castle and in repairing the gutters of Vaudreuil 3 li.—in wages of those who kept and ferried the four ferry-boats at Port-joie before the bridge was made 66 li. 13s. 4d.—in liveries of two knights sojourning in the castle of Vaudreuil in war-time during 145 days 87 li.—in the expense of the King's hounds and of their keepers

5 li. 5s., and thus 968 li. 1s. 11d. were yet owing. He also rendered accompt of 6830 li. received at various times from the Treasury at Caen, and of 2000 li. received from the Mayor of Rouen and Geoffrey the Money-changer and Richard Brieguerre, and of 500 li. received from Ralph Labe, in all 9300 li.; which sum had for the most part been applied in disbursements under the King's writ, viz. to Peter des Roches and Robert Le Clerc in the King's chamber 3500 li.—to Herlotus 45 li. of a gift—in the cost of the prisoners taken in war and of their conveyance to the several royal castles 100 li.—to Henry de Gray and Revellus Le Clerc for the works of Verneuil 500 li.—for carrying to the same the money from Vaudreuil to Verneuil 10s.—to the same for the same works 200 li.—to Sawale Fitz Henry and Matthew Fitz Enard for the works of the castle of La Roche 3000 li., of which they rendered accompt—to Magister Euricus 30 li. of a gift—to a certain messenger of the King of Germany 2 li. 13s. 4d.—in wages of 21 servientes equites and six balistarii sojourning in the castle of La Roche during several terms 680 li.—in liveries to five knights and 31 servientes sojourning there 50 li.—in wages of 100 servientes pedites sojourning at Evreux during the war 50 li., and again to Peter des Roches and Robert Le Clerc in the King's chamber, through Philip de Noient, 1000 li.; the residue, 141 li. 16s. 8d., he continued to owe. After this accompt is inserted the list of all indebted to the crown in the Bailiwick who had rendered nothing in discharge of their debts during the year; among whom may be noted the heir of the Comte of Evreux 30 marks of silver for his father of the debt of Waleran de Ivry—the Comte of Meulan 210 li. of the debt of William L'Angle of Rouen, 106 li. of his own fief, 1500 li. of the debt of Roger de Beaumont, and the fourth part of his rent—Warin de Glapion 20 marks as mainpernor of Richard d'Argences, 40 marks as mainpernor of the Constable, 10 li. of the Tallage set toward the King's ransom, 80 li. of the Tallage of the Honour of Annebecq and 469 li. 16s of the residue of his receipts—Waleran de Meulan 412 li. 10s. of the debt of Roger de Beaumont,—the heir of Robert Le Praer 96 li. 10s. of the residue of the old ferm of Pinterville, and the inhabitants of Louviers 67 li. of the residue of the Tallage set by Richard Le Breton and Richard de Montigny. Robert IV. Comte of Meulan had married Matilda, daughter of Reginald Earl of Cornwall, and their issue were three sons, of whom Waleran de Meulan was the eldest; Peter, the second son, was in orders,^a and the

^a Peter de Meulan had ecclesiastical preferment in England, having been presented to the church of Stourminster com. Dors. by the Brethren of the Hospital of St. Gilles of Pont-

third had name Henry. In the year from the Incarnation of the Lord 1189 a contract of marriage was made at Mortain between Waleran, son of Robert comte of Meulan, and Margaret, daughter of Ralph de Fougères of Brittany; when Robert Comte of Meulan gave and conceded that his son Waleran should give to Margaret, his wife, 200 li. money of Anjou, of rent in dower, viz. Brionne entirely, except the fief of Robert d'Harcourt and the fief of Roger de Planes, and Sahurs entirely, and 100 li. in Elbœuf, i. e. in land and men. And should it happen for Waleran to undertake a journey by Jerusalem, Margaret, his wife, should remain in the place of her husband, Waleran, fully and quietly possessing whatever her husband Waleran possessed; but should it chance for Waleran to die, Margaret, his wife, to have her dower in its entirety, and Robert Comte of Meulan the residue. And if Margaret should have an heir by Waleran at his decease, the heir should remain in the power of Comte Robert, and Margaret should have possession of her dower; but whatsoever heir Margaret should have of Waleran, Comte Robert to make and appoint him heir of all his Honour and land, except the land which Comte Robert is about to give in marriage to his daughter. On the other hand Ralph de Fougères gave to Margaret his daughter, and to Waleran, and their heirs, his land of Bennington com. Linc. entirely; but in the meanwhile, until that land be set free, he to deliver to them to hold in bail Ipplepen com. Devon, and the whole of the marriage portion, which was given with her to William Bertram. And as to this marriage portion of William Bertram, it to belong to Margaret, daughter of Ralph de Fougères, as long Audemer, and he was subsequently Dean of the Collegiate Church of Wimborne in the same county. The following charters from the Chartulary of the Hospital are evidence of this fact; Robertus Comes Mellenti omnibus ad quos presens carta pervenerit, salutem. Noveritis quod fratres Sancti Egidii de Ponte-Audomari Petro filio meo ecclesiam Sancti Petri de Esturministria, cujus integre ad eos pertinet donatio, divine pietatis intuitu et precum mearum interventu, donaverunt. Predictus vero Petrus coram me et multis aliis prefatis fratribus juravit se singulis annis vii. marcas argenti de prefata ecclesia eis redditurum, scilicet, iv. marcas ad festum Sancti Johannis et dimidiam, et ii. et dimidiam ad Natale Domini. Ego autem plegius sum, quod sepedictus Petrus, filius meus, predictos denarios singulis annis ad prenomatos terminos reddet, et precipio Radulfo fratri et omnibus servientibus futuris in Sturministria quod ipsi sine occasione faciant denarios illos, sicut determinatum est, reddi.

— Universis sancte matris ecclesie filiis ad quos presens scriptum pervenerit, Petrus de Mellento, Dei gratia Decanus de Wiburne, salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me jurasse et confirmasse presenti carta mea me redditurum singulis annis fratribus Sancti Egidii de Ponte Audomari de ecclesia de Sturministria vii. marcas argenti ad Natale Sancti Johannis Baptiste. Et si Deo disponente ad Pontificii gradum ascendero vel aliquo modo predictam ecclesiam divisero, ego ut eorum juratus prelatam ecclesiam prefatis fratribus ut suam reddam.

as she should live, and after her decease to belong to Bertram, son of William Bertram, but if the said Bertram should die without an heir, the same to revert back to Ralph de Fougères and his heir. Meanwhile, until Bennington be set free, Ralph to deliver to Margaret and Waleran Quinteronium, together with 100 li. money of Anjou in the territory of Louvigné by the hand of his serviens, and when Bennington should be liberated, the above vill and rent to return to Ralph de Fougères and to his heir. On the part of Comte Robert were witnesses Richard Le Bigot, Hugh de Montfort, John de Bosc-Bernard, Ralph de l'Espée (de Spata), Payn de Montreuil, William de Hommet; on the part of Ralph de Fougères, Juhel de Mayenne, Guy de La Val, Hasculf de Poligny, Alan du Chateau-Guyon, William de Fougères, Hervé de Vitré, Robert d'Appigny, and William de Montfort. Pursuant to the terms of this contract Margaret de Fougères, after the decease of her husband, who was killed by a Turk whilst on his pilgrimage in the Holy Land, had seisin of the dower thus settled upon her, until dispossessed by King John; in whose reign writs, dated at Rouen 7 Feb. 1203, were directed to the Bailiffs of the Lieuvin and of Vaudreuil, commanding them to cause Richard d'Harcourt to have without delay the land which had belonged to Margaret filia Willelmi de Feugeriis, who was with the Britons, in their several bailiwicks. Another writ, dated at Moulineaux 12th of the same month, was likewise despatched to the Bailiff of La Londe to cause the same Richard to have the rent, qui fuit Margarete, uxoris quondam Walarani de Mellent, sororis Willelmi de Feugeriis, que est cum Britonibus, which the King had committed to him. Both these entries, if intended to apply to William de Fougères then living and a leader of the Britons, incorrectly describe the consanguinity of Margaret, who, as appears from the marriage contract above recited was daughter of Ralph, Baron of Fougères, brother of the said William de Fougères. She was, indeed, sister of another William de Fougères, deceased 7 Jun. 1187, in the lifetime of his father, who had issue a son and daughter; of whom the former, named Geoffrey, succeeded to the barony of Fougères on the death of Ralph de Fougères, his grand-father, at the abbey of Savigny 15 Jun. 1194, when, as being yet a minor, his land was placed in the custody of the said William de Fougères, his great-uncle. It was, moreover, this William, son of Henry, Baron of Fougères, who held the manor of Long-Bennington com. Linc. at the date of the contract in 1189; after whose death, 20 Dec. 1212, Ipplepen and other possessions of the family of Fougères in England, were claimed by Ralph Earl of Chester and Lincoln, in right of his wife Clemencia, sister of Geoffrey de Fougères, and the same through the favour of the monarch, but not of just right, were annexed to his Honour. The decease of Waleran de Meulan apparently left his brother Peter the sole survivor of the sons of the Comte of Meulan, and, though an ecclesiastic, he had in his custody at the time of the above seizure of his sister-in-law's lands the castle of Beaumont-le-Roger, belonging to his father, with whom King John was then at variance; for a writ, dated 31 Jan. 1203, at Falaise, to the good men of Pont Audemer and to the Jews there, is transcribed on the Roll of Normandy, in which they are required to furnish Peter de Meulan with 200 li. money of Anjou, to buy stores for the castle of Beaumont, the said sum to be paid back to them out of the issues of the wood of Brotonne. Upon the Roll of Letters Patent we have one from King John to Robert Comte of Meulan, couched in these terms, "Know ye that We have pardoned you all the wrath and malevolence which We had against you, if you will come to Us within the close of Easter next ensuing, and in the meanwhile We grant Our safe conduct of coming to Us to you and those whom you shall bring with you up to the said term. And We will hold to you in good faith the conventions to be made between Us and you, as the abbot of St. Taurin of Evreux told you. Witness myself at Moulineaux, 2 April in the fourth year of Our reign." Yet notwithstanding the accommodation which was thus come to with the Comte of Meulan, his son shortly after withdrew from the service of King John, and took part with his enemies; wherefore by writ, witnessed by Peter de Préaux at Falaise, 8 May 1203, the Seneschal of Normandy, Ralph Tesson, was commanded to cause Robert de Gouviz to have the land which had belonged to Peter de Meulan at Taon and at Frêne, and which he had in the Bailiwick of the Bessin. And by other writs, dated at S'te Barbe 10 May, William de Mortemer was to cause Robert d'Harcourt to have Vatteville and Brotonne with their appurtenances, as entirely as Peter du Meulan had the same, and Robert de Vieux-pont to cause Peter de Préaux to have the land which Peter de Meulan had at Sens. "In the year 1203 Peter de Meulan, son of Robert Comte of Meulan, went over to the King of the French and delivered to him the castle of Beaumont, and not long after died," is the statement of a chronicle of the time, and 28 May, 1203, is the date of a charter of King John, conferring upon Aumary d'Harcourt the deanery of Wimborne in all its entirety with the advowson of the prebends and churches belonging to the same; the vacancy of which benefice will have been consequent upon the death of Peter de Meulan, who is shewn above to have enjoyed it. By another charter of the same date, given, as well as the above, at Rouen by the hand of Simon, Provost of Beverley, King John made known "that Comte Robert de Meulan had pledged all his land of Normandy to Us for 5000 marks of silver upon such condition as that he shall hold the said land as long as he shall live. If, indeed, it should happen that We be taken from the midst before he be deceased, all his land shall revert to him or to his heirs quit, except Elbœuf with its appurtenances, which he hath granted to Richard d'Harcourt by Our consent; and if We should survive the said Comte, then We shall have and hold all his said land until the said debt be paid to Us. Moreover, the same Comte hath quitclaimed to Us and Our heirs the town of Pont Audemer and the castle, with all its appurtenances, except the Knights' fees of the Honour of Pont-Audemer and the abbies of Préaux and the priory of St. Gilles without Pont-Audemer, which shall remain to him, as long as he shall live, and afterwards shall revert to Us or to Our heirs." And in the year following, by charter dated 1 May 1204 on the feast of the Apostles Philip and James, Robert Comte de Meulan, declared to have divested himself of all his lands, as well in France as in Normandy, and in England, where-soever they might be, with all their appurtenances, whosoever might hold or possess them, and to have utterly relinquished them to Mabiria wife of William Earl of the Isle (of Wight), and to have confirmed them to him, as to his next heir, so as he might deal with them entirely as with his own proper demesnes, both as to lands, men and rents, so as he the Comte could claim nothing in them during all his life, except by the free disposition of the Earl; the witnesses to which act were John de Préaux, William de Préaux, Geoffrey du Bois, Robert de Fréquiennes, Hugh Croc, Walter de Brionne, Robert Fitz-Landric, William de Chaumont, knights, Geoffrey Prior of Beaulieu, Osbert du Bois, Robert Le Grand and many others, and the same was sealed with the seal of the Comte de Meulan. This deed was copied into the chartulary of the priory of Beaulieu, in the forest of Préaux, near Rouen, of the foundation of John de Préaux, whose name is first in the above list of witnesses; and hence it may be conjectured to have been dated from that religious house, of which the Prior was likewise a witness to it. Within a month from its date terms were agreed upon between the knights in guard of Rouen, conjointly with the burgesses, for the surrender of that city to Philip Augustus, excepto Comite de Mellento et Guillelmo Crasso et Rogero de Thooniaco et filiis ejus, quos Dominus Rex Fransia de omnibus conventionibus subsequenter exceptit. Thus excepted from all terms of submission by the Conqueror, his vast Honour in Normandy was united with the demesnes of the crown; in England also his capital manor of Stourminster com. Dors. was seized as land of the Normans, but nothing was done therewith, because the Comtesse de Meulan had it by precept of the Lord the King. Subsequently he sent his letters, craftily bestowing it upon William Mareschal, Earl of Pembroke, the royal favourite; wherefore, by writ dated at Neubury 9th Sept. 1204, the Sheriff of Dorset and Somerset was commanded that, together with the said Earl, having taken with him Robert Belet, Peter de Scudamore and Geoffrey de St. Martin, he should go to the manor of Stourminster, and declare before them on the King's part to the free tenants and all others of the said manor that they be subservient to the said Earl as to their Lord, and do for him in every thing what was belonging to their fiefs, as the Comte de Meulan sends them word by his letters. In the next year he was in England, as appears from the King's letters to the custodes of the Port of Shoreham, dated at Eltham 15 Dec. 1205, commanding them that the men of the Comte de Meulan, whom they had caused to be arrested at Shoreham, should be set at liberty, upon having security given that no ill should happen through them to the Kingdom, whilst they were remaining in the same by the King's licence; and by writ at Lambeth 30 Apr. following the Bailiffs of the port of Portsmouth were ordered to cause to be set at liberty without delay for this time Hugh de Bellencombre and Ralph Chapun, men of the Comte de Meulan, and a horse of Hamelin, clerk of the said Comte, who had been arrested at Portsmouth on the Sunday before the feast of St. Mark the Evangelist. To Matildis Comtesse de Meulan, King John, when at Portsmouth, early in June 1205 on his passage, made a gift of ten marks, which by writ, dated at Beer 6th Jan. following, Geoffrey Fitz Piers was ordered to pay; and by writ, dated at Tewkesbury, 24th of the same month, the Treasurer and Chamberlains were directed to pay out of the Treasury to the Comte de Meulan, or his certain messenger, to his use ten marks, which the King had given him. There are also on the Rolls of Letters Close, one addressed to William de Falaise, dated at Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, 30 May 1206, commanding him to cause Robert Comte de Meulan to have the manor of Thornbury during the royal pleasure, and another to the Treasurer and Chamberlains, dated 14 Nov. 1207 at Gloucester, for livery to the same Comte of 25 marks, which were in arrear of 100 marks value of land, which the King had ordered to be assigned to him. By writ of Privy Seal

Matildis Comtesse de Meulan had of the King's gift twenty marks annually, and payment to her of ten marks on this behalf was made from out the Treasury on or before 25 Oct. 1212, as exemplified by the King's Letters Close to the Treasurer and Chamberlain of that date; which annuity may be assumed to have been bestowed in lieu of dower, and its acquisition taken as evidence that the Comte de Meulan was then deceased. The editors of the L'Art de Verifier les dates give this extract in relation to the close of his earthly career; dormivit post decursum vitæ suæ anno 1204, et sepultus fuit in civitate Pictavensi Robertus, eo nomine quartus, Comes Mellenti, ob rebellionem adversus Philippum Regem apud Pictavum transfugus in Anglici Regis ditione, et ibi diem clausit extremum, et omnia ejus dominia fisco regali addicta, posteris illius in æternum privatis. This date is shewn above to be erroneous, as he was alive at the close of the year 1207; and the locality may be equally questioned, for the city of Poitiers had been taken, and the comté annexed to the signiory of the King of France during the autumn of 1204, nor was the former under the rule of the King of England at any subsequent period. The obit of the Comte was kept on the 20 Sept. by the monks of Préaux, and on the 16th Aug. by those of St. Nicaise de Meulan; and this variance and the adoption of the date 1204 as the year of his death in these necrologies justify a surmise, that after his withdrawal to England and disinheritance in France the story of his latter days was unknown even by the religious, who were bound to reverence in him the lineal descendant of their founders. His widow Matildis, Comtesse de Meulan, survived through the whole reign of King John, and held, of the inheritance of her father Reginald Earl of Cornwall, two manors in that county, St. Clement's, otherwise Moris, and Rillaton in the parish of Stoke Climsland; which, after her decease, by writ dated 12 Feb. 1221, were committed by King Henry III. to the keeping of his favourite Falcasius de Breauté, to hold during the royal pleasure. Apparently Mabiria abovenamed, wife of William Earl of the Isle of Wight, alone of their issue, left posterity, and through her the representation of the Comtes de Meulan will have ultimately vested in the family of Courtenay.

Walter de Ely and Nicholas de la Londe conjointly rendered account of the ferm of the Vicomté d'Entre Rile-et-Seine, and of the issue from the demesnes in the same; on the first account they owed 27 li., and on the second 3 li. 5s. 11d., which last sum remained charged to Walter de Ely. The same parties also rendered account of the customary rent of the forest of Essarts, viz. 20 muids of oats; on this score they owed 42 li. for 17½ muids, reckoning the setier at 4s., which were charged to the said Nicholas. Below on the membrane, and continued on the back, are the accompts in the names of the debtors in this Bailiwick, by whom payment had in most instances been made to Walter de Ely, and the monies are noted to be in his receipt. Osbert du Bois rendered accompt of 14 li. of the chattels of Robert de Mucedent for a beech taken in the King's forest, which he had paid to Helyas Bernard and to Robert Le Clerc in the King's chamber at Vaudreuil; as also of divers small sums, the issues of lands seized by the crown in this Bailiwick, which having paid into the Treasury, he was quit. Another debtor, as mainpernor of William des Planes, was Eustace de Estouteville in 40 li.; and he and others similarly pledged rendered accompt of their several payments in discharge of the sums for which they were bound. Walter de Ely separately rendered accompt of 53 li. 12s. 9d. of his receipts written above on either side of this Roll of the Bailiwick of La Londe; in the Treasury were 18 li. 13s., and the remainder had been paid to Hainnesdac, a mounted man-at-arms, for the wages of himself and his fellows; below is another accompt of his receipts, amounting to 7 li. 11s. 8d., out of which 5 li. 8d. had been paid to the same band. Nicholas de la Londe likewise separately rendered accompt of the amercements, proffers, and fines of the Bailiwick of Entre Rîle-et-Seine, from which the sum received, 16 li. 4s. 4d., was in the Treasury, and he was quit. Among the debtors who rendered no accompt we have Robert d'Harcourt owing 1400 li. of the residue of his fine, and Henry Malbaenc 19 li. of the pannage of the defensum of the forest of Essart and for the sale of fallen timber. In 1172 Robert de Harcourt held in the Bailiwick of Ranulph de Frellencort, i. e. of La Londe the fief of a knight in capite, of which Richard de Bosc-Renoult and Richard de Berville were the tenants under him; as to his chief seat at Harcourt it was appendant to the Honour of Beaumont-le-Roger, his service therefore numbering five knights. In England he held several manors, which are put down on the Roll de valore terrarum Normannorum, begun 6 Joh. 1204, he having forfeited them by his continuance in Normandy; but the following letter of the King to Richard d'Harcourt and John, his brother, dated at Oxford 26 Dec. 1206, indicates an intention on the part of these, his sons, to proceed to England to serve their former sovereign. "Know ye that we have received your messenger, and the message which he has expounded to Us on your behalf pleases Us well, wherefore we send you word that you may come to Us in safety to do that which you have sent Us word of by your said messenger, and may bring with you those, of whom you have sent word to Us, in like manner to do that which you have promised for them they will do to Us. And know ye that if you shall come to Us, together with them, as is above said, and shall do what you have promised, We will restore to you as well your own lands as the lands of your father in England. And if the aforesaid persons shall find hostages to be sent to Us, and we have in pledge you and your lands, that they will do to Us what you have promised for them, willingly, according to your counsel and that of others, Our lieges, will We do them such favour, wherefore as well you as they will be deservedly bound to owe Us thanks." To John d'Harcourt the King had formerly granted, by charter dated at Rouen 26th May 1203, for his homage and service thirty-five librates of land in Rothley com. Leic. and in the soke of Rothley, to have and to hold to him and his heirs of the King and his heirs by the service of the fief of one knight; and respecting the land so granted we find this entry on the Roll cited above, Leirc. Roeleg. terra que fuit Johannis de Harecurt est dominicum d'ni Regis, unde Vicecomes debet respondere ad Scaccarium. Richard d'Harcourt had likewise land at Clatford com. Hants prior to the separation of Normandy, and had been with his brother John among the mainpernors of Henry, son of the Earl of Cornwall, in 1203, whose names are again returned on the Roll of Fines, 6 Joh. 1205, prior to the levy by the Sheriffs of the sums in which they were severally bound; there we read Com. de Mellento de xx m. Terra sua est in manu D'ni Regis, and other corresponding entries in respect of Richard and John de Haracurt and Robert de Thibouville. In 16 Joh. 1214 John d'Harcourt was in the service of the English monarch, as appears by a writ sent in May to the Bailiffs of the harbour of Portsmouth directing them to permit to cross the channel without impediment Geoffrey, chaplain of John d'Harcourt, and four men of the same John, with their horses and their equipment, in any ship, which might suffice to carry them and their horses and their equipment, having first received from them proper security. On the 12th of the above month the Sheriff of the shire of Southampton was commanded to cause John de Harecurt to have without delay full seisin of the manor of Clafford with all its appurtenances and with all the chattels found upon it, which William de Huntingfeld had held and was once belonging to the heir of Amaury de Tournebu. This Norman family of Tournebu were also owners of the manor of Charborough com. Dorset, which was restored to Richard Tournebu by King

John in 1215 ; but which is valued in the Roll of the sixth of that King concerning the lands of the Normans, as terra Roberti de Harecurt. Again, from the words Richardus de Harcourt habet, inserted after the entry of the service returned by Thomas de Tornebu to the Duke of Normandy in 1172 in a later copy of the Roll of that date, it would seem that the heir had been successively in the custody of Robert d'Harcourt and of his son, Richard d'Harcourt, one of whose brothers, Dean of Wimborne and of Mortain in Normandy, had the name of Amaury ; wherefore the land at Clafford, which Stephen de Claforde had to ferm from Richard d'Harcourt, was probably not of his own fief, but appertaining to the heir in his father's wardship. Before 28 May 1215 John d'Harcourt had obtained from King John the fief of Sileby or Burstall, and had also restitution of the manor of Sherston com. Wilts. ut jus suum, of the land in Wellingborough com. Northⁿ, which belonged to him hereditarily, of the land of Rothley, " as he had held the same in the time of King Richard and in His own time," and of his land of Ludham com. Suff., and of the manors of Bensington and Henley com. Oxon., and of Ilmington com. Warw., in rapid succession. After the commencement of the reign of Henry III. we have a letter from the King, dated 15 Mar. 1218 at Worcester, to Hubert de Burgh, in these terms, " Know that John d'Harcourt has lately returned from Normandy into England, sound and safe, and is in Our service. And We therefore command you to cause the same John to have without delay such seisin of his land of Wellingborough with the appurtenances, of which you disseized him at Our instance, as he says, as he had on the day on which he took his journey to go now last into Normandy, after the peace made between Us and the Lord Lewis." Toward the close of this same year John d'Harcourt assumed the cross and repaired to the army before Damietta, where illness attacked him, which proved fatal, as may be collected from this Letter Close addressed to the Sheriff of Leicestershire, and dated at Westminster 21 Oct. 1219 ; " We command you that as to the thirty-five librates of land, which King John Our father gave to John d'Harcourt in Rothley, viz. 25 librates which he gave to him at first, and 10 librates of land which he gave to him afterwards, you cause to have without delay to the Master and Brethren of the Temple the full seisin of those ten librates of land last given to the same John in the said vill, to have and to hold to the same Master and Brethren in free alms, as the same John, when lying at extremity in the host of Damietta, gave and confirmed those librates to them by his charter, which Our council has seen; and of the remaining 25 librates of land do you cause to have full seisin Richard d'Harcourt, which We have granted to him to hold up to the term allowed such as took the cross, viz. from the feast of the Nativity of St. John Baptist in the fourth year of Our reign for one year." And again from another Letter, dated 5 Nov. following, to the Sheriff of Wilts; "Know that We have granted to Richard d'Harcourt the issues of the manor of Sherston up to the end of the term of the Crusaders, which manor the Lord John the King, Our father, committed to John, brother of the same Richard, who is now deceased, for his support as long as was his pleasure." The death of John without issue opened the succession to the patrimony in England to his eldest brother, and before the lapse of the above term in favour of the crusaders, Richard d'Harcourt had made fine with the King in 500 li. for having the lands which had been those of Robert d'Harcourt, his father, which were belonging to him the said Robert by right of inheritance in England, he to pay to the King on this behalf 100 marks at the feast of Blessed Hillary now instant, namely 5 Hen. III. 1221, and at Easter next ensuing in the same year 100 li., and at the feast of St. Michael ensuing 100 marks, and at the next Easter, viz. 6 Hen. III. 1222, 100 marks, and so from year to year at each term 100 marks, until he should have paid the whole. Wherefore, having given security on this behalf, writs, bearing date 5th and 6th of Jan. 1221, were issued to the Sheriffs of the several counties in which the lands lay, to give the said Richard full seisin of the same, i. e. of the manors of Sileby and Borstall, Wellingborough, Sherston, Ludham, and Ilmington. In 8 Hen. III. his lands in England had been seized into the King's hands pursuant to precept because he was not, nor had his service due, in the host of Wales; but by Letter Close, dated 27 Oct. 1223, he again obtained full seisin of the same; which seisin was apparently uninterrupted until 20 Hen. III., when under writ, dated 4 Oct. 1236, the Sheriff of Warwick and Leicester was commanded to seize into the King's hands all the lands which had belonged to Richard d'Harcourt, the Norman, in his Bailiwick, except the lands which were of the fief of Simon de Montfort, with all the chattels, stock, grain, and every thing else found therein, and in like manner the grain and all other chattels found on the said lands of the fief of Simon de Montfort, and which the said Simon had by the King's precept, and which had belonged to the said Richard. The recovery of this fief in the county of Warwick by John d'Harcourt, son and heir of Richard, is thus put upon record by a chronicler of the abbey of Evesham sub anno 1260, and is remarkable as an instance of the occasional regard shewn to the claims of Normans, who were by descent entitled to the succession of such lands in England as after the separation of the Duchy had been seized as escheats, but of which neglect of homage by the heir could alone complete the forfeiture. Archiepiscopus Rotomagensis et Johannes de Harecourt Normannus, baro famosissimus, interfuerunt tempore Henrici III., ut Simonem de Monteforti, comitem Leircestriæ, accusatum de læsa majestate defenderent. Quo tempore Harecourt jus suum hereditarium in Anglia calumniatus, manerium de Hilmedun adeptus est, comite Leircestriæ concedente, qui ex dono regio illud occupaverat postquam Normanni, amissis eorum in Anglia terris, Francorum Regi fuerant subjecti. And, verily, by his deed Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, granted and quitclaimed Domino Johanni filio Richardi de Harecourt Normanni all his right in Ilmington with the advowson of the church. In 56 Hen. III. Peter de Montfort obtained from Sir John de Harecourt, kt. a full grant of this manor to himself and his heirs, having possession thereof delivered to him accordingly in May anno 1272, and from the King a charter of confirmation, bearing date 10 Jan. following. In 1179 Robert d'Harcourt, surnamed Le Tort, is said to have founded a chapel in honour of St. Thomas, Archbishop of Canterbury, in his territory of Harcourt, and to have confirmed to the Knights Templars the chapel in honour of St. Stephen, at Renneville in the parish of S'te Colombe, of the foundation of his uncle. In 1192 he made grants to the abbey of La Noe with the consent of Richard, John and Amaury his sons, and to the abbey of Bec for prayers for Albereda, his sister. He was also a benefactor to the abbey of Mortemer-ès-Lions by reason apparently of his having contracted marriage with the daughter of a baron of the Vexin Normand, Joscelyn Crispin, of whom mention has been made in my Observations on the Roll of the year 1180, whose wife, Isabella, daughter of Robert de Dangu, had been interred in the chapter-house of the monastery. Domina vero Isabella de Dangu, to quote from a contemporary writer, multa bona ecclesiæ contulit et in ea sepulturam sibi elegit, quam in capitulo monachorum elegit, et vir ejus, Joscelinus Crispinus, et filii eorum sex libras annui redditus in molendino de Waletot pro anniversario ejus et patris ejus, Roberti de Dangu, assignaverunt. Domina etiam de Harecourt, filia ejus, pro emendo redditu panis et vini et cereæ ad omnes missas centum libras dedit, et sepulturam sibi in eadem elegit, quam in claustris juxta introitum ecclesiæ accepit, et pro salute animæ suæ et pro anniversario suo faciendo centum marcas donavit. The sons were named William, Robert and Eustace; and Agnes, Eva and Emelina were the daughters of the said Joscelin, of whom Eva was lady of Harcourt. By the genealogist of this illustrious house Robert d'Harcourt is assumed to have married Joanna de Meulan, daughter of Robert Comte de Meulan, but none of the Preuves adduced justify such a conclusion; for his tenure as one of the Knights of the Honour of Beaumont was independent of any inheritance held in right of his wife. The charter of the Comte, dated 1 May 1204, cited above, whereby he relinquished his inheritance ex toto to Mabiria, his daughter, wife of William, Earl of the Isle, and to her, tanquam heredi meo propinquiore, confirmed the same, sufficiently invalidates such conjectural alliance. Also, it should be observed that no such consanguinity, as that of nephew, is indicated in the charter of King John, dated 3 Jun. 1203, in confirmation of the grant made by Robert Comte de Meulan to Richard d'Harcourt of Elbœuf with its appurtenances; which, if it existed, would doubtless have been there expressed. The power and influence of Robert d'Harcourt is evidenced by this appended note on the Roll, where is the transcript of a charter of King John, given at Orival 4 Sept. 1199, confirming to Robert d'Harcourt for his homage and service the manors of Bensington and Henley com. Oxon, which reads thus, Memo- randum quod terra ista assignata est ei quousque assignaverit cuidam filio suo c. libras redditus in maritagium; et propter warram talem extorsit cartam. So puissant a baron would hardly have been content with Elbœuf or less than a moiety of the lands so granted away, if he had been indeed the son-in-law of the Comte de Meulan. In a list of fiefs in Normandy of date immediately subsequent to the conquest by Philip Augustus, among the tenants by Knight-service of the Honour of Montfort, we find Robertus de Harecort ii milites, and again among the Knights of the Honour of Beaumont Robertus de Harecuria v milites: among the tenements at Meulan in manu Regis was one in feodo de Harecourt, viz. unus hospes et unum frustum vineæ et unum clausum ville apud Mellenti villam, that is to say, the hostelry at Meulan, used as the dwelling of the vassal, when in attendance upon his suzerain at the chief seat of his Comté. Robert d'Harcourt was succeeded by his son before 1208; in which year at the Exchequer of St. Michael at Falaise the Castellan of Gaillon besought for the Lord the King aide de l'ost from Sire Richard d'Harcourt for five fiefs of knights. Richard replied that he ought not to give the aide nor do service in the ost; but at Beaumont he owed the service of five knights during forty days toward the custody of the castle ad ostium D'ni de Bellomonte, and thereupon claimed the establishment of such his right, and it was adjudged that he should have that custody. He took to wife Matildis, youngest daughter and coheir of Ralph Tesson, Seneschal of Normandy, and held in her right, after the partition made in 1213, four out of the five fiefs of which the Barony of St. Sauveur-le-Vicomte was constituted when entire, the remaining fief being in the hands of William Paynell, husband of Petronilla, the eldest daughter. Thus in the Register of Philip Augustus, compiled in the year 1220, we read Ricardus de Harecort tenet baroniam S'c'i Salvatoris, quæ debet servicium quinque militum, and after, under the title Feoda Ricardi de Harecort, as follows; Ricardus de Harecort tenet Baroniam S'c'i Salvatoris de d'no Rege per servicium iv. militum, sed debebat v. quando Baronia erat integra.—Guillelmus Paganellus tenet inde terciam partem unius feodi apud Treauvill—Item D'n's Richardus de Harecort tenet residuum illius feodi in dominico suo.—S'c's Salvator de dominicis facit unum feodum, de quo Guillelmus Paganellus habet Heinevill et Treauvill, et exinde debet de servicio suo juxta tenementum suum. Joan, second daughter and coheir of Ralph Tesson, was the wife of Robert Bertram, Baron of Bricquebec, in her right Lord of Thury, as appears by the same Register; Robertus Bertram cognoscit quod debet d'no Regi servicium ix. militum de honore Turei, sed nondum scit quanta feoda tenentur de eo, ut dicitur. On a Roll of those summoned in 1236 within three weeks of Pentecost to be at St. Germain-en-Laie to do their service, these names appear, La femme feu Bertram—Richart de Harecort, and in 1242 for the morrow of the Octaves of Easter to be at Chinon on an expedition against the Comte de la Marche, on the Rolle des Normans, these, Robert Bertram, La mère d'iceli envoie—La femme feu Richard de Harecourt—Guillaume Painel— Tesson.^o Joan, Dame de Thury, daughter of Ralph

^o Ralph Tesson, knight, of La Roche, by his charter dated in the year of the Lord 1254 month of June, for the health of the souls of his father and mother, and for the redemption of his own soul, and especially for the anniversary of William Paynell, his father, to be celebrated each year in the church of Avranches, 3 Dec. of the free will and consent of the venerable father Richard, Bishop of Avranches, granted in pure alms for ever to the chapter of Avranches all the tythe which he had by right of inheritance in the parish of Montviron in the diocese of Avranches; which donation in the month of December following the Bishop abovenamed by his charter confirmed. As the son of the eldest coheir of Ralph Tesson, Petronilla, wife of William Paynell, in her right Lord of Percy, Ralph Paynell had adopted the surname of his mother, already deceased in 1230, and the name left blank on the Roll of 1242 as printed should be filled up with that of Ralph. Of the paternal inheritance William Paynell had the lordship of Grippon to his share, of which he entitles himself Dominus in a charter of the date 1237, and whose decease may, as shewn above, be referred to the year 1253. Robert Bertram was an only son, as may be inferred from a charter dated at Montfort

Tesson, as well as Robert and William Bertram, her sons, made an accord in 1262 with the abbot and convent of Barberie concerning a mill in the parish of Fresné-le-Puceux; and in the year 1264 she gave to the abbey of Fontenay, in the days of her widowhood, a rent of 60s. money of Tours, for an annual obit, and to the abbey of Barberie a rent of 50s. money of Tours for the like. With such evidence of the marriage of Joan into the family of Bertram, it is singular that the historian of the Maison d'Harcourt should have confounded her with the wife of Richard d'Harcourt, and have given to Matilda the designation of Jeanne de la Roche-Tesson, Vicomtesse de St. Sauveur. John d'Harcourt, after the demise of his father, was for a term in the wardship of John de Beaumont, the King's Chamberlain, whose daughter he married; whereupon in lieu of giving 1000 li. money of Tours as her marriage portion, the lands, by deed dated in June 1240, were by him ceded to the heir, still in his minority. John d'Harcourt and Alice his wife founded the Priory of Nôtre-Dame-du-Parc in the vicinity of their castle of Harcourt in 1257; and the latter was deceased 4th Oct. 1275, and the survivor 5 Nov. 1288, both having interment in this monastery of their foundation on either side of the altar. Nicholas de la Londe next rendered accompt of the Loan set in his Bailiwick of La Londe (Entre-Rîle-et-Seine) the receipt being 236 li., which money had been laid out to meet these several expenses, viz. in wages of 50 men-at-arms sent to Vaudreuil 3 li. 6s. 8d. for a single day—in wages of 51 servientes sojourning in the March 22 li. 6s. 8d. during 19 days—in wages of 100

18 Oct. 1202, whereby King John granted to Robert de Thibouville the custody of the land and of the son and of the daughter of Robert Bertram for 6000 li. money of Anjou, "so that he shall have the said son and daughter in his custody until they shall reach to lawful age. And if it should happen for the son to die, he shall have the custody of the said daughter with the said land until she shall come of age, and by this fine the marriages of the said son and daughter of the said Robert Bertram shall remain to Us to marry at Our pleasure. Also the marriage of the wife of the said Robert Bertram shall remain to Us, so that we shall marry her in such station by the advice of her friends as she be not disparaged. But if the said Robert de Tibouville shall happen to die, Amaury, his brother, shall have the said custody. The first term of payment was fixed for the feast of St. Andrew, 30 Nov. following, when 1000 li. were to be delivered to Brother Peter de Vernueil to do therewith as the King should command, and the next for Easter of a like sum; in the interval, however, by Letters Patent, attested by Robert d'Harcourt at Rouen 6 Mar. 1203, addressed to Robert de Thibouville, the latter was commanded by the King to pay over the remaining sums due of the fine to Hugh de Gornai at the terms agreed between them, "so, nevertheless, that if the said Hugh shall recover his land, which he has lost, within the said terms, the whole debt of the said fine of the terms, which shall be in arrear, shall fall to Us." Wherefore, the next payment was made by Robert de Thibouville to Hugh de Gournai at Easter, and the same certified by writ, 30 April 1203, to the Barons of the Exchequer of Caen.

servientes sent to the Isle-d'Andely of two days 8 li. 6s. 8d.—in wages of 200 servientes during eight days sent into the Marches 66 li. 13s. 4d.; and Geoffrey the Money-changer had 112 li. of which he rendered accompt, the remainder being charged as a debt to the Bailiff. He in like manner rendered accompt of 266 li. of the Tallage set in the same district to maintain men-at-arms serving in the Marches, of which sum Sawale Fitz-Henry had 253 li. of which he rendered accompt, and to the Earl of Leicester of the men of his fief 10 li. 8d. had been remitted. The same Nicholas de la Londe further rendered accompt of 100 marks of his own fine; in the Treasury were 133 li. 6s. 8d. money of Anjou for 50 marks, and he owed 50 marks. He had, it seems, incurred the King's displeasure, so that his land had been seized until he made fine; for in the next place Walter de Ely rendered accompt of 74 li. 2s. 11d. of the issue of the land of Nicholas de la Londe, whilst it had been in the King's hands, and of 36 li. 10s. of the aide de l'ost upon the same land. In cost of the wainage of ploughs 7 li. 7s. 4d.—to the Lepers of Bosc-Gouet 30s. 6d. of fixed alms—to the custos of the tower of Rouen 6s. of annual rent—for salt toward store of the castle of Vaudreuil 12 li. and in completing the wages of Hanedac and his associates 14 li. 19s. 11d. were the items of expenditure, and he owed for the remainder. He also accounted for 22 muids 3 setiers 1 mine of wheat of the issue of the same land, whilst it had been in the King's hand, of which 20 muids had been sent to Robert d'Harcourt and Matthew de Machera and Ralph Fitz Turstin and Hubert Aie toward the store of the castle of La Roche, and he had himself the remainder in store of the castle of Vaudreuil, as also 12 muids 7 setiers of oats of the issue of the same land, and 3 muids and 5 setiers of rye (grosbled) and 14 setiers of peas, and 34 young pigs (perne) from the pannage of the demesne of the same Nicholas: he owed besides 36s., which he had of the same pannage. The last accompt in this Bailiwick is in the name of the Prior of Bourg-Achard of 12d. for a hearing of the fine and recognizance between him and the heir of Ralph de Bardouville of the church of Bouquetot, which, about the year 1175, Ubles de Piencourt had given to the Canons, and William his son had confirmed.

William Cocus rendered accompt through Arnulph Rastel of 73 li. 19s. of the issue of the Prevôté of Lions and of the forest with the mestiers of Bray and of Beauvoir; the abbey of Cerisy was paid 7 li. 7s. 11d. in tythe thereof, and the same William had 38 li. 15d. for the works of the castle of Lions, and he owed the remainder. The same Castellan rendered accompt through the said Arnulph of 13 muids of corn of the farm of the King's mill, of which the abbey of Cerisy had 1 muid 3 setiers 1 mine and 1 boissel in tythe,—himself 8 muids 8 setiers 1 mine 3 boisseaux toward the store of the castle of Lions—Hugh Le Portier 2 muids 5 mines 2 boisseaux, of which he owed account, and Matthew de Clères, 17 mines 2 boisseaux, and he was quit. The same Wiliam also rendered accompt of 60 mines of corn through the same Arnulph of the rent of the forest of Lions of this last August, and of 201½ mines of oats of rent of the same forest of the same month; of these the abbey of Cerisy had 6 mines of corn and 20 mines of oats in tythe, and he himself had 54 mines of corn and 181 mines 2 boisseaux of oats toward the store of the castle of Lions by the King's writ. In regard of these measures we may observe that twelve setiers were contained in a muid, two mines in a setier, and four boisseaux in a mine. Mons^r. Guerard, in his learned Prolégomènes to the Cartulaire de l'abbaye de Saint-Père de Chartres, has treated the subject at length, and I need only add that the above entries, which furnish proof that two boisseaux were equivalent to half a mine, confirm what he has there only suggested as probable, viz. that the boisseau was equivalent to the half of the minot, or the fourth of the mine, or the eighth of the setier. The heir of Matthew de Clères rendered accompt for his father through Adam de Tendos of 100 li. which he had received from the Treasury of Caen, and of 100 li. from Geoffrey Cambitor, and of 50 li. from the Privy Chamber of the King; which sums, save 14 li. 6s. 7d. yet owing, had been expended on the works of the castle of Lions, apparently at the time when his father was castellan. On the Rolls of Normandy is a writ of King John to Roger, Constable of Chester, under date at Rouen 5 Feb. 1203, directing him to cause Richered de Clera to have that which the king took and was accustomed to de tenseria and otherwise of the land of Clères; which personage may be safely identified with the above accomptant. Next are the two memoranda relating to the castle of Longchamp and the lands recovered by inquest, and to the debts of Hugh de Longchamp, which occur also on the Roll of 1180, the only increased amount put down being the sum of 81 li. 12s. of the rents of the carpenters of Longchamp during nine years, before the King made him restitution, in lieu of seven years and eleven months, all that had then elapsed. At the foot are the names of inhabitants of the district indebted for money abstracted from subjects of the King of France in time of truce, and of two others, who owed of the Tallage set in Vaceuil, the bourg of the inheritance of the traitor Gislebert, yet in the King's hands.

Membrane 15.

Residuum Ballie de Danfront.Residuum Ballie de Caletto.

On this last membrane Robert Lesausier rendered accompt of the amercements of the Knights of the Bailiwick of Domfront, who came not to the arriérebau of the host after they had been summoned, viz. from William Larchant, William de Montselier, Robert de Quinci, William de Cros, and William de La Motte 20s. each, of which the sum, 6 li. 10s., was in the Treasury. He also rendered accompt of 300 li. of the Tallage set in the town of Domfront by precept of the King, of which sum one moiety was in the Treasury, and the other remained in charge upon the men of the town.

The Chamberlain of Tancarville rendered accompt of 803 li. 6s. of the residue of his debts; in the Treasury 5 li. were deposited, and in the receipt of Geoffrey the Exchanger were 95 li., of which he rendered accompt, and in the receipt of the Exchequer of England 96 li. sterling for 384 li. money of Anjou, by writ of Geoffrey Fitz-Piers then the Justiciary, leaving 417 li. 6s. as the balance yet owing. Other similar accompts of debtors resident in the Bailiwick of Caux follow in continuation of the entries on the eleventh membrane, from whom the sums received had all been deposited in the Treasury, save 14 li. 8s. laid out in the cost of the carriage of the King's wines from Harfleur to the Ile d'Andely, and Lucas Fitz-John newly rendered accompt of 14 li. of the sale of the wines of Philip de Colombières and of his hay, also in the Treasury. Peter Ruaut rendered accompt severally of two sums of 7s. in lieu of two bezants for a hearing of the grants which Rannulph Earl of Chester had made to him of land at Tallevende and other places in the Chatellenie of Vire, and Robert de Monte-alto (Mold in Flintshire) of land at Le Tourneur and divers places, as their respective charters testified. Juhel de Louvigny also rendered accompt in like form for a hearing of the gift, which Rannulph Earl of Chester had made to him of land at St. Martin and other places, as the charter of the Earl testified; and lastly, Robert de Courtenai, who occurs in 1180, rendered accompt also in this year of 181 mines, one quarter, of oats of the bernage of the Grand-Vicomté of Caux and of Montivilliers; in the Treasury were 14 li. 9s. 2d. as value for 136 mines, 1 quarter, of oats, and in exemption of the land of Thomas Bardol in Bermonville 45 mines were remitted, so that he was quit. Thomas Bardol, castellan of Verneuil in 1179 and 1180, has already been mentioned in my observations on the Roll of the Exchequer of the latter year, and described as younger brother of Dodo Bardol and son of another Thomas Bardol, who, with Rohais his wife, gave to the abbey of Bec-Hellouin the church of Bernouville near Gisors. By King Henry II. the gift is thus recited in his charter, ex dono Thomæ Bardoul et Rohais uxoris sue ecclesiam de Bernonvilla cum jure patronatûs et advocacionis et decima et omnibus aliis ejusdem ecclesie pertinentiis et viginti acras terræ; which locality we are enabled by the above accompt to identify with the fief of Bardol in the pays de Caux. In that district the church of Bermonville in the Archdeaconry of Grand-Caux, deanery of Foville, was, in fact, of the patronage of the abbey of Bec, according to the terriers of the diocese of Rouen; wherefore my former reference to the church of Bernouville near Gisors has been made in error, and the monks of Bec will have held that church of the gift of Robert de Candos, founder of the Priory of Beaumont-le-Pierreux in the parish of Bernouville. The seigneurie of this fief in Caux had been anciently included in the Honour of Earl Giffard, and was subsequently of the moiety which came to the Earls de Clare; hence in the Register of the year 1220 under the heading Ballivia Gaufridi de Capella we read apud Bermonvill' unum feodum de Comitatu de Clara, quod tenet Willelmus Bardof. Also William, brother of King Henry II.,^p is in my former observations said to have made a grant of Bradwell com. Essex to the elder Thomas, by whom it was transferred to his daughters for their marriage-portions; that it was of the inheritance of Doon Bardolf is apparent from this entry on the Roll de Valore terrarum Normannorum 6 Joh. 1204, among the lands seized into the King's hands in that county, Bradewell, terra que fuit Dooni Bardulf et modo est Willelmi Bacon et Roberti de Sancto Remigio. The donor of this manor was deceased early in 1164, ^p William, brother of King Henry II. was third son of Geoffrey, Comte of Anjou, and had lands in England in the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, and Essex, 2 Hen. II. 1156; at the same time in Normandy he held the manor of S'te-Mère-église, as may be collected from this original charter in the Archives at Mortain; "W. Regis Angliæ frater universis s'c'e matris ecclesie filiis, salutem in d'no. Notum sit omnibus tam presentibus quam futuris quod ego Willelmus Regis Angliæ frater dedi annuatim ecclesie Beate Marie Moretonii et s'c'imonialibus ibidem Deo servientibus pro anima patris mei et mea xl sol. And., in manerii mei redditibus, quod S'c'e Marie ecclesia nominatur. Testibus Radulpho de Haia, Richardo de Sancto Remigio, Johanne Malaherba, Thoma Bardul, Eudone Ernisi filio, Roberto de Busson, Dodone Bardul, Roberto Boquerel, magistro Stephano Filgeriensi. Hii autem nummi recipi debent in manerio predicto in capite jejunii." This prince was deceased at Rouen, 30 Jan. 1164, without issue, and had interment in the cathedral of Rouen.

and both Thomas Bardol and Dodo Bardol were his contemporaries; of whom the latter was also a witness to the charter of Richard de la Haie and of Matildis his wife, made in 1154 on occasion of the foundation of the abbey of Blanchelande, and containing a grant of the vill of Cameringham com. Linc. and of a plot of ground in the bailey of the castle of Lincoln over against the crypt of the church of St. Paul beyond the street on the west, together with Robert bishop of Lincoln (1144—1166), Hugh Bardolf, and Hamelinus Bardolf. In the Carta Ricardi de Haia, setting forth the service of the knights of his fief in the same county, as required by the King in 14 Hen. II. 1168, these are of the new feofment, Hugo Bardulf two knights, and Doun Bardulf one knight; and from an inquisition made in the reign of King John this fief is identified with the knight's fee which was of the Honour of Gerard de Camville in Fillingham, which Doun Bardolf, then deceased, had held. In Normandy in 1220 William Bardof held a fief at Putot of the Barony of Cocquainvilliers, and another William Bardof half a fief in the same vill; also among the muniments of Blanchelande was a charter of Jordan bishop of Lisieux (1201-18), touching land given by Roger le Buffart, serviente Dodonis Bardol, in the parish of Beaufort. The descent of this fief at Fillingham upon the son of Thomas Bardol, seems conclusive of his being of the lineage of the first feoffee, Doun Bardulf; thus we have probably in him (and not in Thomas,) the father of the brothers Doun and Thomas, mentioned by Robert du Mont as in command of the new castle called Dringcūrt in 1173, the former in the preceding year being also one of those qui non venerunt nec miserunt nec aliquid dixerunt in regard of their service and infeudation in Normandy. Before that year, Thomas Bardol had acquired part of the succession of Ralph Halselin in England, which had at first been disputed with him by the King and adjudged an escheat; but of whose grant he subsequently obtained Letters Patent settling certain manors upon him and his heirs, who should issue of the body of the daughter of Ralph Halselyn, named Rosa, which had been parcel of the entire inheritance of Ralph Halselyn, the grandfather of the said daughter, viz. illam terram, quæ eidem nuper Regi escaetum fuit et sibi remansit donandam per judicium curie sue. Doon Bardolf was his son and heir, begotten of the body of the said Rosa, whose succession to his inheritance in 1198 has been previously noticed; from King John we have a letter, dated at Rouen 6th Apr. 1203, and addressed to this Doun Bardulf, bidding him know that He, the King, had become mainpernor for John de Préaux, who had put Him in pledge that, if he should have in

wardship the son and heir of Doun Bardulf, he would not seek out any craft or device by which the father should lose his land in his lifetime. He was deceased before 24th Feb. 1205, leaving by his wife Beatrice, daughter of William de Warren, a son under age, named William; of which date are the writs to the Sheriffs of the shires of Lincoln, Nottingham and Essex notifying the King's grant of the custody of the land quæ fuit Daonis Bardulf to Robert de Vipont. Ten years elapsed before William Bardulf attained his majority, the writs for the restitution of his lands bearing date 29th Aug. 1215, and it would seem from the entry in the Register of Philip Augustus quoted above, that in the year 1220 he was still the tenant of the fiefs of Bernonville and Putot in Normandy. Meanwhile Beatrix, daughter of William de Warren, made fine with the King in 3100 marks, to be rendered within four years, for having the lands and tenements which had been those of her father, (deceased 10 Joh. 1208) and which had come to her by hereditary descent, and for having her reasonable dower belonging to her of the tenements which had been those of Doun Bardolf, late her husband,⁴ and that she might not be distrained to marry, and that the debts which her father owed to the King be rendered out of the common chattels, belonging as well to her father, as to Milicent the wife of her father, on the day he died. Of this fine she first rendered accompt 11 Joh. 1209, and shortly afterward in the same regnal year became the wife of the King's favourite, Hubert de Burgh; but before 18 Dec. 1214 she had, after the birth of male issue who did not survive, sunk into the grave. Upon this pretext, as tenant by the courtesy of England, Hubert de Burgh obtained from King John a grant for life of the Honour of Wermegay com. Norf. which was of her inheritance, and had also respite of payment of what was yet due of her fine during the term of his possession, the debt to be exacted from the heir, when according to the law and custom of England, after the decease of the said Hubert de Burgh, he should recover seisin of the lands and tenements of the said Beatrice. Having been created Earl of Kent, 11 Feb. 1227, he survived until 12 May, 27 Hen. 3, 1243; after whose decease William Bardolf had livery of the Honour of Wermegay, and was the lineal ancestor of the Lords Bardolf of Wermegay, now represented by the coheirs of the barony of Beaumont.

Great Roll of the Exchequer of Normandy.

6 June 1200—6 November 1201.

This Roll contains, first, the several items constituting the receipts of Guérin de Glapion from the time, it would seem, of his being first in office as Seneschal of Normandy, namely, from Tuesday after the close of Pentecost in the second year of the reign of King John until Tuesday on the feast of St. Leonard in the third year of the reign of the same. Item he had received from the Treasury of Normandy 3,215 li. in money of Anjou—item, item, he had received from the same Treasury 550 li. sterling remitted from the Treasury of England, worth 2,200 li. money of Anjou—item, item, he had received from Richard de Fontenay 400 li. of the Tallage set by the same Richard in the Bailiwick of Arques and in the Baliwick Ridel toward the siege of Drincort, and 300 li. of the Baliwick of the Roumois of the same Tallage through Robert de Fréquiennes, and 400 li. which he had received from John de Neville and Robert d'Haute-rive and Nicholas the chaplain, of the prizes made in the comté of Eu, and of 200 li. which he had received of the Burgesses of Eu of the Tallage set in the town of Eu, and 300 li. from the Mayor of Rouen of the same Tallage set in the city of Rouen, and 200 li. of the ferm of the fair of Mont-martin by the hands of William Bele and William Fitz Lucas, and 50 li. from Richard de la Tour, and 100 li. from the Treasury; of which several items 7,365 li. made up the sum. Below follows an accompt of the expense of the same Guérin under warrant by writ or precept of the King, but of which full detail is wanting by reason of the now imperfect state of the Roll, viz. upon the breastworks of the castle of Andely 100 li.—in making the mills of the same castle 149 li. 13s. 5d.—in making a wall in the middle of the town of Verneuil 100 li.—for the purchase of stores for the castle of Verneuil 200 li. delivered to Henry de Gray—and in payment of their fees of the term of St. Michael in the second year to Ralph de Clermont, Hervey des Prés, William de Long Ré, and Robert Divorcé 180 li.—and to Roger de Berniencourt 50 li. by way of loan over his wages and over the allowance for the King's hounds, by the King's writ for cujus corpus ibi requiescit, et Isabellæ sororis meæ, et meæ, de LX acris terræ in Fortiscrea, viz. in Wadeland cum pertinentiis suis, &c." The tautology of vir and Dominus at once detects the incorrectness of the transcript, and it can hardly be doubted but that Douni has been misread Domini and transposed with mei, and Radulphi substituted for Bardulphi; whereby we get post mortem viri mei, Douni Bardulphi, a reading in accordance with facts and in conformity with usage.

finding necessaries—and to William de Vernon, Jordan the Arblaster, and Robert Rossel 40 li. by way of loan over their liveries—and to Richard de Limoges for the expense of the King's stud 20 li. and for seven horses bought for the King's use 169 li.—and to Richard de Willekier to carry on the works of Herbertot 300 li.—and to Patric de Cahors 50 li.—and to Girard the Fleming 15 li. of the King's gift—and to the same Girard and Arnulf his brother and to twenty servientes, themselves included, sojourning at the Isle d'Andely, 760 li. by way of loan above their wages by the King's precept, and by the King's writ, whilst the King was in England—and to Alexander Mallart and to William de Bosc-la-reine and the hired servientes sojourning at Bouteavant 80 li. by way of loan—and to John Torel knight and 5 servientes and one arblaster sojourning at Bouteavant 51 li. 13s. 4d. by way of loan—to William de Bosc Renoult and four servientes sojourning in the castle of Boutevant 43 li. 6s. 8d.—to the hired servientes in charge of the King's boats 13 li. 6s. 8d.—in livery of seven knights (militēs) sojourning in the castle of Andely from the feast of St. John (24 Jun.) until the feast of St. Cecily (22 Nov.) i.e. for 152 days, 42s. each day, both the said feast-days being reckoned, 319 li. 4s.—in the livery of 15 servientes sojourning there not mounted (pedites) during the same term, viz. to each 8d. a day, 76 li.—in livery of six sentinels (vigiles) sojourning there during the same term 30 li. 8s., and in other similar payments to the hired troops, divers sums. To a charter of King John, dated 14 Jan. 1200 at La Roche d'Orival, William Fitz Ralph, then Seneschal of Normandy, was a witness, and we have the testimony of a contemporary chronicler that he died the same year, whilst yet in office; to whom, it is added, succeeded Guérin de Clapiun, the Seneschal. Next after him was Ralph Tesson, who had the King's Letters Patent, teste'd at Argentan, 23 Nov. 1201, for all the lands and men of his demesnes and fiefs to be quit of shires and hundreds, and suits of shires, hundreds, ridings and wapentakes, pleas and Sheriff's aids, except pleas of the crown, quamdiu fuerit Senescallus Normanniæ. The interval is therefore that embraced by this accompt, and the words senescalcie sue may be read after tempore, in completion of the effaced line on the Roll. The half fief of Glapion was held of the Honour, of which the castle of S'te-Scolasse-sur-Sarthe was the caput, but the parentage of this great officer, who from the successive grants made to him, must have stood very high in the favour of King John, seems to be wholly unknown; *

* The Honour of S'te Scolasse was of the fief of the Earls of Gloucester, and had been held by King John, during the life-time of his brother, in right of his wife Isabella; this only we find a writ addressed to the Barons of the Exchequer of Caen, dated Saumur, 13 Nov. 1202, commanding them to cause Guérin de Glapion to have the ewagium at Caen for the maintenance of his mother and wife, during the King's pleasure. By royal grant, bearing date at Chinon, 25 Sept. 1199, the manor of Exmes was given to Guérin de Glapion and his heirs to hold of the King and his heirs, by the service of the fief of a single knight in lieu of all other service; and gift was subsequently made to him by the King of his vineyards of Le Mans, and of his meadows of le Parc, which, by writ at Tours 29 Jan. 1200, William des Roches, Seneschal of Anjou, was commanded to cause him to have in full possession. When no longer Seneschal of Normandy, he was equally the object of the King's bounty; thus by writ at Rouen, 1 Jul. 1202, the then Seneschal was commanded to cause Guérin de Glapion to have the manor of Annebecq to fix there the sojourn of his wife, and by writ, 7 Jul. at Bon-port, the Bailiff of Falaise was to give him possession of Carel, belonging to the land of Guy du Manoir, which he had by the King's precept. Annebecq was subsequently resumed by the King, but he had the value of it made good to him at the Exchequer. In 1203 he ungratefully followed the example set by Robert comte of Séés, and took part with the King of France against his benefactor, who thereupon wrote to the Constable of Normandy and Peter de Stokes concerning the fiefs of Courtonne and Lequeraie, which Guérin de Glapion had held, and which the King now restored to the Bishop of Lisieux as his right; and in like manner to the Vicomte of Caux, to cause William, Earl de Warrenna, to have Craville and Roquefort, which Guérin de Glapion had also held, and which were of the fief of the said Earl. Lastly, the King, by writ dated 26 Nov. 1203, at Morfarville, on his route to embark for England, bade the Barons of the Exchequer know that he had given to Robert de Vipont all the issues of the land of Belbœuf, which had belonged to Guérin de Glapion, qui contra Nos est, to be applied to the maintenance of himself and Richard de Beauchamp, Constable of the Tower of Rouen, in his service. From Philip Augustus he had, in recompense of his adhesion, the fiefs of Nonant, S'te-Scolasse, Moyon, and Mont-pinçon, confiscated as escheats upon Henry de Nonant, Baron of Totness, Amaury Earl of Gloucester, Reginald de Moyon, and Ralph de Montfeudal connection explains how a residence at the castle of S'te Scolasse at that time might have been the occasion of intimacy between the suzerain and his vassal, so as to cause the elevation of the latter, when the former attained the sovereignty.

pinçon, who had withdrawn with their sovereign into England. In 1208 he went to the Holy Land, from which he never returned, and his decease without leaving issue caused the resumption of the fiefs so granted; all which in 1220 were yet in the King's hands. In the annals of Roger de Hoveden of the year 1201 we are told that Warinus de Glapion, seneschal of Normandy, by order of his sovereign John, King of England, besieged the castle of Driencurt, which Richard, King of England, had given to Ralph d'Issoudun, brother of Hugh Le Brun. This quarrel with the comte d'Eu had its origin in the ravishment by King John of the daughter of the comte d'Angoulême, who had been previously betrothed to comte Hugh Le Brun; after which outrage, being suspicious of their just resentment, the guilty monarch fraudulently wrested from comte Hugh and his brothers certain castles in Poitou and Normandy, they being then sojourning in England in his service. By writs, dated at Clipston 6 Mar. 1201, King John signified to all that he had granted that Hugh de Bailleul and Thomas de St. Valery might do what harm they could to Ralph d'Issoudun, comte d'Eu, in the war to commence at the close of Easter in the second year of Our reign, and of the same date are letters to all of Eu, and of the comté of Eu, and to all of Driencourt and of the chatellenie of Driencourt, commanding them to put faith in what William de Kaeu shall say to them on the King's behalf of coming to Him and to His service and of interchange of pledges. On the 19th of March the King wrote from St. Edmund's-bury to Guérin de Glapion, the Seneschal of Normandy, and to Geoffrey de la Celle, Seneschal of Poitou and Gascony, telling them "that We have been given to understand that some of Our bachelors (bachelerii nostri), to whom We have given lands and fiefs, do not come upon your summons to Our service, and whereas it is manifest that they who do not obey the Seneschal, condemn the orders of the sovereign," wherefore they were commanded to seize into the King's hands the lands of all so offending. The siege of Driencourt resulted in its capture, and presently the quarrel was at its height, as may be inferred from this letter addressed to the men of Eu: "Ye well know that ye have been the liege men of Richard Our brother and Henry Our father of happy memory and of Our ancestors, and that ye are Our lieges and ought to be. And because We know well that ye will hardly brook Our injury, We send ye word that Ralph of Issoudun, comte of Eu, defied Us on Sunday last past not for Our fault, but through his own fault and pride. Wherefore We bid ye that from the receipt of these letters ye do all the evil ye can to him and his through you and yours, and from that term be ye not administering to him or his in any thing; and well and safely guard your town and receive into your town Ours, whom we shall despatch to you to harm the said Comte and his adherents, resting most assured that, if ye shall do this as We well know that ye will, ye will maintain and defend yourselves, as Our liegemen, and We will cause you fully to have the franchises which ye ought to have throughout Our lands. But if ye do not confide for the future in Us or some one of Ours, in any place in which We or Ours shall be able to injure you” The inhabitants of Eu, it seems, acted in accordance with this urgent summons of the King, who wrote to thank them for their faith and loyalty, and because they had so manfully driven out those who had entered into their town in dedecus nostrum et vestrum; adding that He sends to them John d’Eu and others of his knights with him and that He had given orders to William le Mareschal to furnish the town with troops. About the same time a false report having been credited that the daughter of the Comte of Eu, wife of Ralph d’Issoudun, was deceased, the King in another letter, dated at Montfort, 1 Apr. 1202, addressed to the knights, burgesses, and all the tenants of the comté of Eu and especially to the good men of Eu, informs them that their lady is dead, and that He therefore sends to them John d’Eu, quo justiore vel apparentiore heredem non novimus de comitatu Augi, commanding them to receive him for their lord and to be administering to him, as to their lord. The burgesses of Eu and Driencourt,* who had been thus prevailed upon to take part with the King, were, however, soon afterward compelled to abandon their homes and take refuge in the territory which yet remained to King John, being unable to contend against the forces of the King of France, who in this same year reduced the comté of Eu into his possession, and made himself master of Driencourt and Aumale. Hence one of the articles of the convention made with King Philip Augustus by the garrison of Rouen on the first of June 1204,

* On the Rolls of Letters Patent are two sent to the Burgesses of Drincourt, dated respectively at Lisieux and at Orival, on the 11th and 14th of March 1202, signifying the King’s commands for them to come in his safe conduct into his land with their goods and chattels, so they be there before the Conference; which term, in the second letter, was extended to within the Octaves of Easter next ensuing upon the petition of Hugh de Gornai. In 1203 Walter Constanz, late Mayor of Eu, and Gilbert d’Eu had the King’s Letters Patent de simplici protectione, and, as early as 29 June 1202, by writ dated at Sées, Geoffrey Fitz Piers was commanded to cause to be delivered without delay the chattels of Gilbert son of Adam “Our burgess, who, having abandoned his inheritance for Us, departed out of Eu,” which had been seized at Lincoln and elsewhere in England.

comprised a stipulation that the knights and burgesses of the comté of Eu who were at Rouen that same day, should be put in seizin of their lands and should perform their due service to the comte of Eu, and that the burgesses of Driencourt and of Aumale and of Eu should have again their tenements, rendering the services attaching to the said tenements where due, provided nevertheless that they return to the sites of their tenements. By the terms of the truce made between King John and Aimeri Vicomte of Thouars, at Chinon 2 Nov. 1202, permission was granted to William de Mauleon and the people of the comte of Eu of Livrai and of Chisai in Poitou to come within it, if they chose, having until the 6th Dec. Friday, the feast of St. Nicholas, to make known their determination; and by Letters Patent, dated at Saumur, 7th Nov. following, the King granted his safe conduct to Ralph, comte of Eu, on his route toward France from Friday next after the feast of St. Leonard in the fourth year of Our reign, i. e. from the morrow, until Tuesday next following and during the whole day of Tuesday. Bouteavant, a castle in the commune of Portmort, so strongly garrisoned at the date of this accompt, fell into the hands of the King of France in 1202, immediately subsequent to the octaves of Easter, when, after judgment had been pronounced against King John at the court of his suzerain upon the complaint of the comte of Eu, the war was renewed; and by the captor it was forthwith levelled with the ground. Curie suæ judicium Rex Philippus gratanter acceptans et approbans, coadunato exercitu, confestim invasit castellum Butavant in Normannia, quod Rex Richardus construxit, et solo tenus evertit; deinde cepit totam terram Hugonis de Gurnai et omnia castella in circuitu: invasit etiam castellum de Albemar cum comitatu de Eu et totam terram illam usque ad Archas, nullo ei resistente. Lions-la-forêt, Gaillefontaine, Gournai, La Ferté-en-Brai, Neufchatel de Driencourt, and Mortemer were all of the number of the castles thus unresistingly surrendered; at the same time the comte of Boulogne, utterly renouncing the friendship of King John, made his peace with his suzerain, and had the castle of Aumale and many others, which the latter had taken, committed to his custody. Such was the unhappy result of the ill-timed quarrel with the brothers of the house of Lusignan, originating in the fears of the guilty monarch, who thus hastily sought to arm himself against the anticipated vengeance of the injured party, and of which the result was the conversion of his well-disposed liege vassals into deadly enemies at the very moment when every danger was to be apprehended from the ably wielded power of France.

Roll of the year of Our Lord 1203.

Membrane 1. pars prima et secunda.

Costentinum per Ricardum de Fonteneio et Ricardum de Reveriiis.

Compotum Constabularii Normanniæ.

On this membrane, under the headings Costentinum and Ballia de Costentino we have accompts of the issues of that district and the expenditure during the past and current years on the part of the successive bailiffs, Richard de Fontenay and Richard de Réviers, as also the residue of an accompt of the third year past in the name of Robert de Troisgots, the Bailiff, who had served the office under King Richard I. Thus Richard de Fontenay rendered accompt of 286 li. 1s. 7d. of the ferm of the monies assised in the Honour of Cherbourg and of Valognes and of Brix of the year past. In tythe to the Canon of Cherbourg 6 li. of the ferm of Cherbourg, and to the Canons of Cherbourg 21 li. of fixed alms of the same ferm—in the accustomed fee of the Lardener 6s. 2d. of the ferm of Valognes—in tythe to the Canons Regulars of S'te Marie du Vœu for the service of the chapel of Valognes 2 li. 11s. from the mill and toll and fair of Valognes—in tythe to the Chaplain of Benouville-en-Caux 2 li. 10s. from the same—to three Recluses 2 li. 8s. for cloathing and lights—to the Recluse of St. Marcouf 10s.—in tythe to the abbey of Cerisy 20s. of the vaccaries of Tollevast and Hestmanbosc—in the execution of justice 65s.—and for the mill of Chiffrevast broken by the pond of Valognes 15 li.—constituted the several payments and abatements for which no writ was required; while under such sanction these further disbursements had been made, viz. in fitting up anew the mill and for the millstones of the same mill 12 li.—to Richard de Fontenay for Digulleville and Nacqueville, which the King had assigned to him for the exchange of the londe of Evrecy 6 li. 2s. 2d.—to the Chaplain of Valognes for the service of the chapel of the Chamber of Valognes 5 li.—for carriage of the King's grain from the Côtentin to the ship, which went on a voyage to Poitou, 43 li. 4s.—for carriage of the royal treasure from Barfleur to Neuilly 30s., and for carriage of the King's venison from Barfleur to Caen 4 li. 12s. 4d., leaving as debt 159 li. 1s. 9d., of which 7 li. 15s. were a remanent upon William de Cayeux of the monies assised in the manor of Fontenay-sur-les-Vez, and 100 li. 6s. 9d. upon the said Richard, of which he renders accompt after the Bailiwick of Vire, the title of his accompt on another membrane of this Roll. From the same Bailiff was also due accompt of 33 swine, 218 sheep and 720 fowls, clear of tythe, from the Honour of Cherbourg and of Valognes and of Brix of the year past, and of 31 geese and 4450 eggs from the same Honours of the same year. Richard de Réviers rendered accompt through Richard d'Auzouville of the above amount of ferm of the current year; no change had been made in the customary outgoings, and Richard de Fontenay and the chaplain of Valognes were paid the same sums as in the preceding year. Under the King's writ these expenses had been defrayed, viz. for seven casks of wine bought for the King's use and delivered for the King's drinking at Valognes 28 li.—for repairing the King's dwellings at Valognes 37 li. 9s.—for repairing the King's hays of Valognes and of Digouville and of Hundiroc 20 li. 16s.—for repairing the King's dwellings at Brix 9 li. 2s.—in the expense of the Archbishop of Bourdeaux and the Gascons in his company on their visit to the King 110 li.—to Frissura, Balistario Regis, 10 li. of the 20 li. which he has by the year on the Bailiwick of the Cotentin—to Ralph Tesson to purchase eight casks of wine for the King's use 32 li.—for skins of deer brought from the Côtentin to Caen 12s., and William de Cayeux had 7 li. 15s. as in the preceding year, of which he owed accompt; wherefore the accomptant had credit for a surplus, but remained charged with the same annual rents in kind for which Richard de Fontenay had been debited. King John was at Valognes upon the 19th of October in this year, and continued his stay to the 26th of the same month, when he returned by Thorigny to Bur-le-Roi; his writ to the Seneschal of Normandy and to the Barons of the Exchequer of Caen to reckon to Richard de Réviers the seven casks of wine, which he had bought for the royal table, in the accompt of his Bailiwick, bears date 5 Dec. following, the eve of his final desertion of Normandy. Elyas, Archbishop of Bourdeaux, Amoravicus, Elyas Biger of Bourdeaux, William Reymond de Montcaup and Lupescarra witnessed a charter of King John, dated at Caen 12 Oct. 1203, confirming a grant made by Queen Alienora, his mother, in favour of Stephen, chamberlain of the same Archbishop, and who afterward in December accompanied the King to England. The grant to Theobald Frissura of 20 li. annual rent out of the Bailiwick of the Cotentin for the maintenance of his wife during the royal pleasure bears date at Gonneville 2 Dec. 1203; she was daughter of Philip d'Annebecq and resident at Le Mans. Richard de Fontenay rendered accompt of 60 li. of the ferm of the Prevôté of Barfleur of the year past; in tithe to the abbey of St. Amand of Rouen 6 li. were paid as hitherto, and under writ, for the passage of Thomas Fitz Bernard with his equipment and the falcons of the King on his way to England 5 li. 9s.—for a certain vessel hired for the use of William Briquerre going to England 6 li.—for the passage of Robert of Winchester, Reginald Baccon and their companions going to England 4s.—for a certain vessel hired for the use of Adam de Port and of his son conveying the King's prisoners to England 6 li.—for the passage of Alexander the Clerk and Robert of Winchester and William de Avenas going to England 3s.—again for the passage of the same Alexander and his companions with three horses going to England 3s., leaving 36 li. 1s. owing. But of the same debt he rendered accompt below, and had credit for 27 li. 4s. for vessels hired for the use of the Bishops of London and Salisbury, and of William Briquerre and for the passage of the clerks and servants of the King going to England on several occasions; while of the remainder he elsewhere furnished accompt after the Bailiwick of Vire. The writ of the King to the Bailiff of the port of Barfleur to find a passage for Robert of Winchester, Reginald Bacon and Ernald de Erlawe, who had brought the King's treasure from England, with four horses, with order for the cost to be reckoned to him at the Exchequer, is dated at Rouen 27 Jul. 1202; that to find a good and safe vessel free of cost for Adam de Port and John FitzHugh conveying the King's prisoners to England at Falaise 10 Aug., and that for the passage of Alexander Le Clerc of Winchester and of William de Avenas going to England with three horses at Chinon on the 2nd September following. Richard de Réviers rendered accompt in like form of the ferm of the current year, his expenditure under the King's writ being as follows, viz. in the passage of Roger de Milliéres and his companions going to England with the King's falcons 22s.—in the passage of Samson Wacelin going to England 2s.—in the passage of Peter de Ely and his companions with three horses going to England 3s.—to Hugh de Hauville carrying the King's falcons into England 7 li.—for a certain vessel hired for the use of Thomas Fitz Bernard conveying the King's falcons to England and for cages bought to put the said birds in 6 li. 15s.; his deposit in the Treasury was 22 li. and he owed 16 li. 18s. The payment to Hugh de Hauville, the King's falconer, was pursuant to writ, at Morfarville 27 Nov. 1203, to the Barons of the Exchequer to reckon 7 li. money of Anjou secundum legem Scaccarii to Roger Wascelin, prevôt of Barfleur. Next follow accompts by the two Bailiffs of the ferm in each year of the Vicomté of the Cotentin, which was of the same amount and subject to the same customary payments as in former years; in 1203 for conveying the King's treasures from Barfleur to Neuilly on several occasions 9 li. 12s. had been paid thereout, which route was that of Le Petit Vay. The farms of St. Marcouf and of S'te-Mére-eglise were likewise rendered account of by the same Bailiffs; out of the former Richard de Fontenay had paid 40 li. to Stephen de Belleperche and 10 li. to Simon de Fournuchon, of which they both owed accompt, whilst upon William de Cayeu 100 li. were each year remaining in charge of the farm of S'te-Mére-eglise, and 3 li. upon each of the Bailiffs. This Leader of the King's forces had seisin of the land of S'te-Mére-eglise from the term of Easter then instant, which Roger de Emondeville had held, under writ dated at Clipston 6 Mar. 1201, exchange having been made to the latter elsewhere. The Bailiffs next rendered accompt of the other customary issues of the demesnes and forests of Cotentin in the years above mentioned, which correspond with the returns in 1198, save that 4s. 4d. were received in addition from the new purprestures of the forest of Montebourg; each had made payment of only 13d. to the Treasury, and were alike debtors for the balance. As to the rents in kind they had been made over in part to Robert d'Haute-Rive, who thereof owed accompt, and for the remainder, save that in the Treasury were 8 li. 16s. for 9 mines 1 quarter of oats, the mine being this year reckoned at 8s., the bailiffs stood severally indebted. Of these rents accompt was rendered for Richard de Fontenay by William de La Bazoge and for Richard de Réviers by Richard d'Auzouville as elsewhere; and the last named Bailiff besides stands charged on the Roll with 18 li. of the farm of the land of William Pinel for two years. Robert de Tresgoz (Troisgots) rendered accompt of 113 li. 3s. 6d. of the residue of the old farm of Cherbourg and of Brix and of Valognes with the appurtenances of the third year past, of 11 li. 14s. for 13 muids of oats, Rouen measure, of the mestier of Blanqueville with its appendages of the fourth year past,—of 8 li. 1s. 8d. for 40 swine, 92 sheep and 92 fowls, beside tythe to the chaplain of Benouville-en-Caux, of the same year—of 14 li. 13s. of the residue of the Tallage set in the vill of St. Lo by precept of King Richard—of 19 li. 4s. 4d. of the residue of the wines seized in the Bailiwick of the Cotentin and of the Loan set there, and of the view of the forest of Lithaire—of the 100 li. as mainpernor of the Comte de Meulan of the Loan of Gascony—of 8 li. 2s. 4d. of the residue of the view of the forest of Cherbourg and of 4 li. 10s. 7d. of the residue of the pannage of the same forest—of 51 li. 11s. 8d. of the residue of the view of the haie of Valognes

and of the défends of Rabé and of the haie of Montebourg—of 14 li. 3s. 9d. of the pannage of the haie of Valognes—of 3 li. 18s. of the pannage of the forest of Barnavast and Blanqueville—of 49 li. 12s. of the residue of the old ferm of Gavrai of the third year past, and of 4 li. 19s. 6d. of the residue of the pannage and view of the forest of Gavrai of the same year. The sum was 403 li. 4s. 4d.; in the Treasury 80 li.—for 100 (thousand) shingles bought and sent into England for the use of the royal dwellings in the New Forest 40 li.^t—in the cost of Walter Le Mareschal and Lubatus and a certain horse of the King sick at Barfleur, and for their passage to England 4 li. 10s. 7d., and in the expense of nine knights, prisoners, and of Stephen of Oxford with two others in charge of the said knights sojourning at Barfleur, and for their passage to England 4 li. 2s., were his disbursements, leaving 275 li. 1s. 8d. yet owing, of which he rendered accompt below. Robert de Tresgoz next rendered accompt of a palfrey, which he had proffered to the King for having his charter of certain land at Bayeux; the same he had rendered to the King and was quit. He also rendered accompt of twenty casks of wine of Poitou and Auxerre, of which Richard de Fontenay had had sixteen, of which he owed accompt, and four were yet owing. Of the sum above written he next accounted and had acquittance of 59 li. 8s. for 22 muids of oats, i. e. the mine for 6s. of the mes-tiers of Barnavast and Blanqueville of the third year past, delivered to Robert d'Haute-rive, for the King's use; and an accompt follows of 4 li. 5s. from the lesser pleas of the Bailiwick of the Côtentin of the same year, of which sum he had deposited 5s. in the Treasury, and continued to owe the remainder.

William de Hommet, Constable of Normandy, rendered accompt for himself and his mainpernors of 2133 li. 4s. 4d. of the residue of his fine; in the receipt of John de Préaux were 2 li. of the mainpernors of the same, of which he rendered accompt in the Bailiwick of the Roumois, in the fifth year past—in the receipt of Henry de Pont-Audemer 2 li. of the mainpernors of the same, of which he rendered accompt in the Bailiwick of Caux in the same year—in the receipt of Robert de Tresgoz 6 li. 5s. of the mainpernors of the same, of which he rendered accompt in the Bailiwick of the Côtentin in the fourth year past—again in the receipt of John de Préaux 36 li. of the mainpernors of the same, of which he rendered accompt in the Bailiwick of the Roumois in the third year past—again in the receipt of the same 70 li. of the mainpernors of the same, of which he rendered accompt in the Bailiwick of Pont-Audemer, the same year—in the receipt of William de Préaux 10s. of the mainpernors of the same, of which he rendered accompt in the Bailiwick of the Lieuvin in this year, and in acquittance of the same William de Hommet 2000 li. by the King's writ. The accompt preceedingly rendered by the Constable will be found on the Roll of 1198, where the above residue is put down as what was yet owing, and the payments in the fifth year past by his mainpernors will have been made in 1199, the year next ensuing. Below, Richard de Fontenay rendered accompt of 754 li. of the Tallage set by him in the Bailiwick of the Côtentin to send men-at-arms to the March in the year past—of 47 li. 4s. 9d. of the view of the forests of the Côtentin in the year past over the tythes and fixed liveries—of 10s. 5d. of the pannage of Brix and of Chiffrevast and Hestemanbosc and Auberville over the tythes and fixed liveries of the year past—of 15 li. which he had received from Richard Brienz of his amercement for the serjeanty, and of 6 li. from Geoffrey Tireavant, and of 3 li. each from Robert d'Aunay and Riverenc for the like. The sum was 828 li. 15s. 1d., of which 500 li. were in the Treasury, and of the remainder he rendered accompt after the Bailiwick of Vire.

^t This writ is entered on the Rotulus de Contrabrevibus, of the second year of the reign of King John, in Normandy, membr. 5. “Rex, &c. Roberto de Tresgoz. Mandamus vobis quod centum mille de azzeize mitti faciatis apud Suhantona et liberari Hugoni de Neville vel certo Ballivo suo ad opus domorum nostrarum de Nova Foresta. Et computabitur vobis ad Scaccariam. T. meipso apud Burdegalium xviii die Julii.” (18 Jul. 1200.)

Membrane 2.

Waureium per Petrum de Pratellis.

Ballia Constanciensis per Ricardum de Fonteneio et a tergo.

Peter de Préaux rendered accompt through Robert de Fréquiennes of 106 li. 2s. 4d. of the ferm of the Honour of Gavrai with the vill of Le Tourneur of nine months, out of which sum the abbey of Cerisy had in tythe 10 li. 12s. 2d. of the same term; of his debt for the remainder accompt is rendered below. Next follow accompts by the several debtors to the crown in the Bailiwicks, who had made payment in whole or in part to Peter de Préaux, and had therefore acquittance of the sums in his receipt; of the former was William de Rollos (Roulours) of 7 li. of the fief of a knight at La Bloutière of the aide de l'ost. Peter de Préaux further rendered accompt through the above-named Robert of 121 li. 0s. 8d. of his debts and receipts above written, and, his disbursements having greatly exceeded such sum, he was quit. In wages of three militēs, namely, to each one 6s. a day, and of five servientes equites, namely, to each one 2s. 6d. a day, and of twenty servientes pedites, namely, to each one 12d. a day, sojourning at Gavrai from the feast of St. Hilary until the feast of St. Michael, he had paid 653 li. 19s. 6d.—for making anew one barbecan and also one aula and one chamber and a dispensary and wardrobe and two granaries and two gates and eight turrets, and for repairing the bridge and for putting hurdles round the castle, and for other works of the same castle 264 li. 10s. 8d., and for repairing the King's mills of Gavrai 13 li. 13s. 8d.; wherefore he had credit for a surplus of 812 li. 3s. 2d. over and above his receipt. In the list of debtors in the Bailiwick, who had made in this year no payments, we have Ralph de Troubleville owing 31 li. 2s. 4d. of the residue of the ferm of the Honour of Gavrai with the vill of Le Tourneur, 4 li. 18s. 10d. of the residue of the view of the forest of Gavrai of the year past, and 18 li. 13d. of the pannage of the same forest of the same year, and 6 li. 9s. 2d. of the view of the forest of Gavrai and 4 li. 12s. 11d. of the pannage, besides 30s. for ten swine of the pannage of the same forest—John Burnof 4 li. of the residue of the tallage set by King Richard in the town of Gavrai and 200 li. for deforcement, and the heir of William de Dive 5 li. 5s. for three parts of the fief of a knight at La Bloutière of the aide de l'ost. Of his debts owing in this Bailiwick for the residue of his accompts as Bailiff in the third year past, Robert de Troisgots rendered accompt in the Bailiwick of the Côtentin, as set forth in the preceding membrane. Ralph de Troubleville above-named had the King's Letters Patent directed to Robert de Troisgots to deliver to him the castle of Gavrai to be in his custody with all its appurtenances, dated at Montfort 7 Dec. 1201, whose term of office as Castellan had embraced the year 1202 and the three first months of the current year. To him succeeded Peter de Préaux, for by writ teste'd by Girard de Furnival at Bonneville, 2d day of April 1203, King John signified to the Seneschal of Normandy "that Peter de Préaux had shown to Him that the Bailiwick of the Avranchin of custom rendered nothing annually to the crown except the issues of the pleas de spata; wherefore it was His command, that if such were the case, then the Seneschal to cause the same Peter to have the Bailiwick, with the above exception, rendering annually 50 li. toward the repair of the castle of Gavrai, if the Seneschal should think it the better course for the King." During this same year Peter de Préaux gave to God and the church of S'te Marie de Valricher and to the monks there serving God, for the health of the soul of John, the illustrious King of England, who had given to him the islands in the English channel, and for the redemption of his own soul and the souls of his father and mother and of all his ancestors, the island of Escrehou entirely, to build there a church in honour of God and Blessed Mary, so that the divine mysteries may be celebrated there every day, to have and possess the same in free alms; and he also granted to the same monks whatever should have been given to them by his men of Gersé and of Gernesé and Auriné for love of charity, the charter being witnessed by Engelram de Préaux his brother, Robert de Fréquiennes, Hugh Croc and Gilbert d'Ouille, knights, William the chaplain and others of the clergy. Peter de Préaux was one of the Knights, parties to the convention made by the garrison and inhabitants of Rouen with King Philip Augustus for a truce of thirty days from the first of June, 1204, and who bound themselves to give hostages within the ensuing Ascension of the Lord; when he selected William his nephew, son of John de Préaux, as his own. Subsequently he courted the favour of King John, from whom he had Letters Patent, dated at Bourgsur-Mer in Gascony 29 Jan. 1206, to come to him under safe conduct within the feast of St. Peter ad Vincula, and holding out a promise to restore to him his land in England and to gratify him in respect of the Islands, according to the counsel of Rannulph, Earl of Chester, and of Engelram de Préaux. It has been elsewhere stated that he married Maria, daughter of William de Vernon, Earl of the Isle of Wight, for whose marriage after his decease Robert de Curtenay, 13 Joh. 1212, made fine, and that no issue by her first husband had survived; but the following charter, extracted from the chartulary of Beaulieu, furnishes proof to the contrary, Notum sit omnibus presentibus et futuris quod ego Ælicia, Comitissa Augi, in viduitate et libera potestate mea constituta, assensu et voluntate Radulphi, filii mei, dedi et concessi in matrimonium Ælidæ, filiæ Petri de Pratellis, fratris mei, xx libratas annui redditus situs in molendino de Duno, quod Radulphus Le Cauchais de me tenebat, &c. Actum anno D'ni 1233 mense Martii. Osbert de Préaux, father of Peter de Préaux, gave to the monks of the Holy Trinity of the Mont-de-Rouen the tythe of the culture, which he had caused to be assarted, situate in the parish of Bois-l'Evêque, for his own soul and for the souls of his parents and of the parents of his wife, Matildis; and she, his wife, and their sons, Simon and John, granted the said tythe to the said monks to hold in perpetuity. In 1172 Osbert de Préaux was of the number of those who did not answer to the summons to make return of the services of their fiefs, and in 1180 William de Malpalu, the Bailiff of the Roumois, rendered accompt of 49 li. 17s. 2d. of the issue of the land of Osbert de Préaux with the pannage; which sum he had delivered into the Treasury and had acquittance. The seizure of his land into the King's hands was probably consequent upon his decease, when his widow may have remarried Henry, comte of Eu, whose daughter and heiress Alice, comtesse of Eu, would thus have been sister by the mother's side of Peter de Préaux. Henry, comte of Eu, died in 1183, leaving by Matildis his wife (deceased in 1207) two sons and a daughter; of whom Ralph, the eldest, survived his father three years, having died in 1186, a year after his brother, Guy. By French genealogists the surname de Longueville is given to Matildis, comtesse of Eu; and it would seem that she was daughter of Hamelin, and sister of William, Earls de Warren. The latter was witness to a charter of Alice, comtesse of Eu, late wife of Ralph de Issoudun, comte of Eu, whereby in her widowhood for the redemption of the soul of the said Ralph, her Lord, and for the health of her own soul and that of Ralph her son, and those of all her ancestors and heirs, she confirmed to the monks of the abbey of St. Mary at Roche the site of the same abbey and the grange of Aggecroft with its appurtenances and the wood of Lindric, as inclosed by the ditch, in pure and perpetual alms, together with all other their lands and possessions in the barony of Tickhill, and he is there styled her uncle. Hiis testibus, domino Willielmo, comite Warrennæ, avunculo meo, Philippo de Ulecotes, Willielmo de Cressi, Mavesino de Hersy, Baldevino fratre ejus, Matheo de Shepeleya, militibus. Datum apud Tikehill anno gratiæ millesimo ducentesimo nonodecimo. Ralph comte of Eu, who is erroneously said to have been in the host before Damietta, had died in Poitou in the month of May 1219,^t and

^t The following letter, inserted upon the Close Rolls of the third year of Henry III. furnishes evidence of the Comte of Eu being resident in Poitou at the time of its being written; it has reference to the convention in 1214, whereby King John restored to him the rape of Hastings and Tickhill with its appurtenances, and all the right of Alice his wife, daughter of the Comte of Eu; and for his land of Normandy, which the King of France had taken from him, engaged to deliver into the hands of the Brethren, Knights of the Temple, of his own money, to be rendered to the Comte of Eu by terms, as much as the said land was yearly worth by estimation of the said Comte of Eu, the Earls of Chester and de Ferrers, the Vicomte de Thouars and Hugh de Gornai, until the said King should acquire the land in question with the aid of the said Comtes of La Marche and of Eu and restore it to him. "The King to R. Comte of Eu, health. We have received your letters containing that you had received an answer from Brother G. Brochard that of the sum deposited with him by the Lord John the King, Our father, whence payment of the monies due to you might be made at the appointed terms, he will pay you nothing at the coming term of St. John the Baptist; wherefore We been buried in the abbey of Foucarmont, to which house a charter of his widowed Comtesse, dated at Melle-en-Poitou on the morrow of the Ascension of Our Lord in that year, i. e. 17 May, contains this recital; "Know ye that Ralph de Issoudun, an illustrious personage of happy memory, my husband, late Comte of Eu, being deceased, I have granted to God and Blessed Mary and to the church of St. Jean of Fouquarmont, and to the monks there serving God, with the assent of R. my son and M. my daughter, in pure and perpetual alms, for the redemption of the soul of my above-mentioned husband, and for the remission of my sins, and in remission of the sins of my kindred and heirs, to be possessed in peace and freely, whatever my predecessors have given to the said church of Fouquarmont, viz. that land which is called Tuxford and 4 li. in my demesne of Blythe and all the tythes of my land of England to be annually rendered, as was contained in the charters which the said monks had concerning the gift made to them of the possessions aforesaid by my predecessors." Such confirmation being made as above, the abbot and convent of Fouquarmont granted that they would appoint ten priests, who should serve God for ever in the same abbey for the redemption of the soul of her husband and in remission of her sins and of the sins of her heirs and kindred, these seeing and hearing, viz. Brother G(irard) Brochart, Preceptor of the order of Knights Templars throughout Aquitania, Magister Walter Ai, Segnorete, Magister P. send word to him by Our letters, which We send you, that We are exceedingly surprised at such an answer, because We believe so much money to have been deposited with him by King John, Our father, to make such payment to you, as thereof to be able to satisfy you of the sum due to you at the said term and also at other terms." In conclusion the King details the orders he had given for the payment, and the plan the Comte was to adopt in case of refusal; adding a threat of seizure of the goods and effects of the House of the Temple in England, if Brother Girard should not act as suggested. To this letter no precise date is affixed, but as it contains an allusion to the coming term of St. John the Baptist, 24 Jan. 1219, it may be presumed to have been written in the previous month; whilst the residence in Poitou of the parties appears from Brother Girard being a witness to the charter of Alice, Comtesse of Eu, dated at Melle in Poitou in the same month of May, and from other contemporary evidence. Bernard, the monk of St. Martial of Limoges, has simply Anno 1219 obiit Radulfus de Chaudu, Comes Ogiensis; and had he been in the host before Damietta, it is hardly to be supposed that the historians, who give such ample details of that crusade, would have omitted all notice of so eminent an individual, who had there closed his earthly career. By the writer of the article upon the Comtes d'Eu in L'Art de verifier les dates Melle-en-Poitou has been mistaken for Merlou-en-Beauvoisis!

^u Early in the month of August next following the decease of her husband Alice, Comtesse of Eu, was at Meulan, and there made fine with King Philip Augustus of the Comté of Eu in this form, viz. the King restored to her the Comté of Eu, reserving to himself the placitum writers above referred to Alice Comtesse of Eu is said to have died in the year 1227; whereas we have a writ, dated at Waltham 13 March 26 Hen. III. 1242, which certifies that Alice, Comtesse of Eu, had made fine with the King for 100 marks for having the custody of the lands which had been those of Idonea de Vieuxpont, which were of her fief, until the lawful age of the heirs of the said Idonea, of which she will render to the King on the feast of St. Michael 50 marks and at Easter next ensuing other 50 marks, and the Sheriff of Yorkshire had it in command to give her seisin of the custody of the said lands. Also on the Roll of Normans, who owed service and had been summoned to Chinon on the morrow of the Octaves of Easter, 1242, is read La Comtesse d'Eu envoie, a proof of her being yet alive and in possession of the Comté. Upon levy of the aid for the marriage of the eldest daughter of King Henry III. in 1245, Alice, Comtesse of Eu, was charged 62 li. 10s. for sixty-two Knight's fees and a half in com. Sussex, and 60 li. 15s. for sixty Knight's fees and three parts of the Honour of

ensis and the Jews and all other rights of justice and service, and the right which the Comte of Eu owed to the Lord of Normandy, as her father and her ancestors had done and rendered the same to Henry and Richard, late Kings of England, and their predecessors. The Comtesse of Eu on her part renounced all claim in Drincourt, Morte-mer, and Arques; but the King restored to her that which the Comte of Eu, late her husband, held of the land of Roumare, when he went to John, late King of England, reserving to himself the forest of Roumare and Neuf-marché, in which she claimed nothing, together with the placitum ensis, &c. as before. The King also retained the fief of Bully, held of him by Robert de Melleville in the Bailiwick of the Neuf-chatel of Driencourt. The Comtesse also pledged herself not to marry, except through the King, who engaged not to force her into marrying, and to raise no fortresses beyond what were then existing, except through the King. In consideration of these premises the Comtesse became bound to the King for payment of 15000 marks of silver, troy weight, to be rendered as follows, i. e. 5000 marks, on the coming feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin, and 5000 marks on the ensuing feast of All Saints, and the remainder in moieties on the feasts of Easter and St. Remy next following. Geoffrey de la Chapelle on the part of the King and Robert de Melleville on the part of the Comtesse of Eu were appointed receivers of the rents and profits of the Comté of Auge, so as they might be reckoned in the payment of the debt abovesaid. To this charter, yet preserved in the Archives at Paris, her seal remains attached in yellow wax, and has on the obverse a female erect holding a falcon with jesses and inscribed . . . ILLVM HÆ . . . , and on the reverse a shield charged barry and a label of seven points . . . ET . . . COMITISSE A Before the end of the same month Alice, Comtesse of Eu, was in England, as we have a writ of the King to the Sheriff of the county of Lincoln, dated at Grantham 24 Aug. 1219, to cause Alice, Comtesse of Eu, to have without delay full seisin of the manor of Greetwell with the appurtenances, and Letters Patent to the Knights and free tenants and others of the Honour of Tikhull, in these words, *Mittimus ad vos Aliciam, comitissam Augi, dominam vestram, mandantes quatinus faciatis ei fidelitatem et homagium et alia qua ei facere debetis et intendentes ei sitis et respondentes tanquam domine vestre in omnibus que ad predictum Honorem pertinent, &c. Tickhill com. Ebor.; which last sum was yet owing in its entirety 31 Hen. III. 1247, according to the entry made by the Sheriff of Yorkshire in that year. In fact, in the said year 1242, 26th of his reign, upon the renewal of war with France, King Henry III. by Letters Patent took into his protection and defence the men, lands, goods, rents and all the possessions of the same Alice, who was then resident at Eu, having in 1225 for the last time quitted England with the licence and of the free will of the King; and the custody thereof was committed to Bernard de Savoy. This misstatement apparently originated with the author of the Neustria Pia, who prefixes the date 11 Sept. 1227 to this extract from the Necrology of the abbey of Eu, “3^o Idus Septembris. Anniversarium solemne et commemoratio ante missam piæ memoriæ Aelidis Comitissæ Augi, quæ nos et ecclesiam istam præ ceteris diligens, in alia munerum et ornamentorum beneficia, quibus eam decoravit, digitis S. S. Leodegarii et Bartholomæi ipsam decoravit.” In his account of the abbey of Foucarmont of the foundation of the Comtes of Eu and their place of sepulture, Père Du Monstier repeats the same error, blunders in his dates as to the sieges of Acre and Damietta, and almost makes us doubt his information when he says that Ralph Comte of Eu had interment in the said abbey by the care of the same Alice his wife; he cites no epitaph and refers in authentication of the assertion merely to common report. The annalists of the Cistercian Order alike note the foundation of the said abbey, daughter of Savigny, on the 25th of July 1180 by the Comtes of Eu, and the endowment of the same, to wit, in the year 1224, by Ralph II. Comte of Eu, together with Joan his wife, daughter of Eudes III. Duke of Burgundy, who in that same year had interment in this abbey. Ralph II. Comte of Eu, only son of Alice Comtesse of Eu, remarried Yolendis, daughter of Robert Comte of Dreux and Braine, who also died in his life-time; for she having given to the abbey of St. Ived de Braine in alms 10 li., money of Provins, Ralph de Issoudun, Comte of Eu, by his letters gave his sanction anno 1240 to this alms of Yolendis of happy memory, his wife. He was afterward for the third time married to Philippa, daughter of Simon Comte of Ponthieu and Montreuil, who survived him, and became the wife of Ralph, Sire de Coucy, slain in November 1249 at the battle and assault of Massoura; hence this second marriage was probably of date prior to the setting forth of the expedition in August 1248 and closely approximate to the time when Alice, Comtesse of Eu, was yet living. The only issue of these several marriages of her son had been a daughter by the second wife, who having been given by the King in marriage to Alphonsus de Brienne, surnamed of Acre, he in her right entitled himself Comte of Eu as early as the year 1249; at which time the old Alice, Comtesse of Eu, will have been at length deceased. After the peace between Henry III. and Lewis IX. in 1259, when the former was at Paris in the month of October, special request was made to Him to restore to Alfonso, Comte of Eu, the castles of Hastings and Tickhill, and this answer returned to Lewis in the presence of the said Comte and of his brother, Lord John of Acre; "that when the King of France should restore to the men of England their lands in Normandy, He would restore and give back to the men of the realm of France the lands and tenements which had been theirs in England." In the reign of Edward I. the suit was renewed by John, Comte of Eu, son and heir of Alphonso, who came before the King and his Council at their Parliament after Easter in the 18th year of his reign, 1290, and petitioned for the inheritance of a certain Alice, Comtesse of Eu, his great-grandmother, when answer was given in the same terms as before; but it was added "that when such restitution as required should be made of the lands in Normandy, the King would be more readily disposed toward the same Comte in his matter than toward the rest from those parts." Dugdale in his Baronage, quoting Placita de Banco 10 Ed. I. Term. Trin. Ebor. recites that Alice Comtesse of Eu had issue by her husband Ralph de Issoudun a son called William, and Maude, a daughter, married to Alfonsus, son to John, King of Jerusalem; which Alfonsus by her had issue John, Comte of Eu. But this Alice, in her widowhood, making forfeiture to the King, William her son also adhering to the King of France, the Honour of Tickhill escheated to the crown. The name William is in error for Ralph, and the marriage of Alfonsus was with the granddaughter and not the daughter of Alice, for John Comte of Eu designates her proavia mea in his petition. Matildis was probably the name of the daughter of Alice, as in this respect we have M for the first letter in a charter already quoted; but all the genealogies concur in giving the name of Maria to the wife of Alphonsus de Brienne. His son John, the Petitioner, died in 1294, and, with his wife Beatrice de Chatillon, surnamed de St. Pol, was sumptuously interred in the choir of the abbey of Foucarmont, to which they had given the vill of Fêques and many other gifts. The father, who was Chamberlain of France, had yet more honourable burial, for having died 13 Sept. 1270 in the service of God and of King Lewis IX. and of Philip, his son, below Carthage in the Kingdom of Tunis, his body was brought over to France, and interred in the church of St. Denis in 1271 on the Friday (29 May) after Pentecost.

Richard de Fontenay rendered accompt through William de la Bazoge and Richard de Grisy for William de St. John of 50 li. of the ferm of the Vicomté of Coutances of the past year, and of 50 li. of the same ferm of this year; which sums, save 10 li. for tythe to the abbey of Cerisy, were in the Treasury, and also 7 li. of the ferm of L'Oiselerie in Lingreville of the third year past, of which Thomas de Périers rendered accompt; of the 14 li. due of the same ferm in the subsequent years Richard de Fontenay stood charged, as did Lucia de Moyon in 100 li. of the ferm of the land of Moyon of the past and present year. Among the accomptants, as debtors to the crown in this Bailiwick, were John the priest of Lingreville, of 1089 li. 5s. of the residue of the chattels of Peter Fitz-Hugh, dead a usurer,—Robert Murdac of 106 li. 16s. 3d. of the residue of his fine—Thomas de Périers of 5 li. which he acknowledged to have received of the Honour of Lithaire and Orval and of 5 li. of the residue of his receipts of the third year past—the Bishop of Coutances 35 li. of the service of five knights of the aide de l'ost de Normandie in the past year—William de la Soulle 7 li. of the fief of one knight for the like—(Si)mon d'Avranches 7 li. of the fief of one knight for the like and the Sire de Cambernon 7 li. for the like. On the Roll of Infeudations in 1172 the entries of these fiefs are as follows; Episcopus Constanciensis servitium v militum, et ad suum servitium xiii. milites, i. e. adds the scribe, he ought to take the service of thirteen knights for the host; under the heading In vicecomitatu de Cerenciis first Guillelmus de Sola i milit. et ad suum servitium ii mil. de comite Moretonii, next Guillelmus Albrincarum i milit. de comite Moretonii, and lastly Jordanus de Campo Arnulfi i milit. et ad suum servitium ii milit. Below Richard de Fontenay rendered accompt through the same deputies of 99 li. 8s. of his receipts, written on both sides of this Roll, and of 23 li. 11s. 5d., which he had received from Henry de Calix of the fair of Mont-Martin; the sum was 122 li. 19s. 5d., in the Treasury were 17d., and of the residue he rendered accompt after the Bailiwick of Vire. Thomas de Périers, the deputy for William de St. John in 1198 and the following years, rendered accompt of 80 li. of the Tallage set in the Bailiwick of Coutances to send men serving at arms into Anjou, set by precept of William Fitz Ralph, then Seneschal of Normandy. Among the debtors making no payment we have the heir of William de Moyon 59 li. of the residue of the aide le l'ost of his knights of the Honour of Moyon—Ralph Taisson 31 li. 16s. of the Tallage of his land—the knights of the Honour of Moyon 40 li. of the residue of the aide le l'ost—William de Pirou 430 li. 3s. 6d. of the residue of his fine for having the land of William de Tracy—Robert de la Haie of Plessis 5 li. of the fief of one knight in Créances of the aide de l'ost of Gascony—the heir of William d'Ouville 3 li. 15s. for three parts of one knight's fee of the ost of Gascony—William de Port 12 li. 10s. of the service of two knight's fees and a half of the fief of William d'Orval for the same—Robert de la Haie of Plessis 5 li. of the fief of one knight of the Honour of Mortain for the same—Henry de Cambernoun 60 li. for having such reasonable share of the land of his father as belonged to him—the heir of William d'Avranches 5 li. for the service of one knight of the ost of Gascony—William Cael the third part of 114 li. for having right of the same debt versus Richard de Vernon—William d'Ouville 5 li. 5s. of three parts of one knight's fee of the aide de l'ost of Normandy in the year past—the heir of Oliver de Tracy 7 li. of the fief of one knight for the same—the heir of Hugh de Beauchamp 7 li. of the fief of one knight for the same—the heir of Richard de Toqueville 7 li. of the fief of one knight for the same—the heir of William Avenel 35 li. of the fief of five knights for the same—the heir of Gillebert de Brucourt 7 li. of the fief of one knight for the same—the heir of Robert de St. John 7 li. for the same in Terregate, and Fulk Murdac 5 li. of the fief of one knight. Richard de Fontenay also himself owed 10 li. of the minor pleas of the Vicomté of Cerences of a moiety of the past year and of this year, of which he rendered accout after the Bailiwick of Vire. “William de Pyreu proffers to the Lord the King 1200 li. money of Anjou, for having wholly the land of William de Tracy, as the same William had it on the day on which he died, ita quod stabit ad rectum si quis inde versus eum loqui voluerit,” is an entry sub tit. Constanc' et Vire on the Rolls of Normandy 2 Joh. 1200, and we have also proof that this land is identical with the fief held by Turgis de Tracy in 1172; for in a copy of the Roll of Infeudations subsequent to the separation of Normandy, after Turgisus de Traceyo ii mil. et ad suum servicium viii mil. we have subjoined Guillelmus de Pirou habet to denote this new possessor. On the same Roll, after the original entry Radulfus de Haia ii mil. et dim. de honore de Plaiseis et i. mil. de honore de Moretonio de feodo de Criensiis, et ad servitium suum vi. mil. et dim., we read Rex habet, and elsewhere Honor de Haia de Puteo de comitatu Moretonii i. mil. Regi. Also sub. tit. In Ballivia de Constanciis, we have Guillelmus de Ouilla juxta Constanciis tres partes i. mil.; and after Guillelmus de Aureavalle servicium ii mil. et dim. et ad suum servicium vi mil., the notification Rex et comes Boloniæ habent. Robert de la Haie of Plessis held in England the Honour of Burwell com. Linc. by descent from Ansgot, the tenant in capite at the time of the compilation of Domesday; and on the Roll of Fines received 6th Joh. 1205 sub tit. Linc. is the proffer of 200 jars by Robert de la Haie for having a certain market at Burewell in each week on Tuesday, the Lord Bishop being his security for 100, as the King affirmed. Having thus withdrawn into England, his land in Normandy escheated, and in 1220 Honor Plesseti, quem Dominus Rex tenet in manu sua per eschaetam, debet d'no Regi servitium iiii mil. was the return relating to it on the Register. William d'Ouville had in the year of this accompt mortgaged his land in England, in Leicestershire, to his brother Simon from the feast of St. John for a term of three years, he having assumed the cross; which transaction was confirmed by the King's letters patent, dated 15 Aug. 1203 at Alençon. William du Port, son of Adam, had inherited the fief of William d'Orval upon the decease of his mother Mabilia d'Orval in the second year of this reign; he was in England 9 Joh. 1208, when he had respite of his debts at the Exchequer, and as late as 1220 his Honour of Lithaire was still in the King's hands; Honor Lutheare, quem D'n's Rex tenet in manu sua per eschaetam, debet D'no Regi servitium ii mil et dim. is the entry in the Register of that year. The fiefs next mentioned were of the Honour of the Comte of Mortain, and occur under the heading before cited, De vicecomitatu de Cerenciis, on the Roll of 1172; Oliverus de Traceio i mil. et ad servitium suum iv mil. et isti quatuor in servitio Comitis Moretonii uno die cum custamento suo et deinceps cum custamento Comitum—Hugo de Bellocampo i mil. Regi de comitatu Moretonii—Robertus de Touquevilla i mil. per mensem ad custamentum suum—Guillelmus Avenel v mil. et sibi i mil. de comitatu Moretonii; and under the heading De Ballia de Oximis—Gillebertus de Breuecourt ii mil. Regi de Pinu cum pertinentiis. Idem i mil. de fædo Moretonii in Cerenciis—Robertus de S'c'o Johanne i mil. de Terra Wasta. Among the Oblata brought from England after the return of King John to Normandy in 1199 was a proffer on the part of Oliver de Traci of 1000 marks to the King for having the Barony of William de Traci, which was worth in England 100 li. sterling, and in Normandy 200 li. money of Anjou, salvo jure et clamio cujuslibet in ea, qui jus clamare voluerit, a clause, which, it seems, took effect in the transfer of the land to William de Pirou.* In England Oliver de Tracy held a moiety of the Honour of Barnstaple com. Devon through the grant of King Stephen to his father Henry de Tracy, but which grant had been made to the prejudice of the heir of the former possessor, Joel, son of Alured, who was grandfather of William de Briouze; wherefore, by final concord made between him and Oliver de Traci, the latter acknowledged the right of the former to the inheritance and restored it to him, who re-granted to the said Oliver all the land which he had held, both in demesnes and in fiefs, to hold of him, the said William, for the term of his life. It was also agreed between them, that if the said Oliver should die without an heir of a wife espoused to him, born after the term of this agreement, all the said land should remain to William and his heirs for ever; but if such heir should be born, then the manor of Fremington and the service of five knights to remain to William and his heirs, and the heir of the said Oliver to have the residue, to be held of the said William by the service of 23 knights for all service. In case of the reversion of the said land to the said William in default of such heirs of the body of Oliver, and the wife of the said Oliver should be yet surviving, she to have in dower during life the manor of Bovey, and the service of seven knights. William de Briouze also for himself and his heirs ratified all grants made before the conclusion of this agreement by the said Oliver or by Henry his father, to whomsoever they might have been made, in alms or otherwise. For having this agreement inscribed on the Great Roll 40s. were owing 7 Ric. 1. 1196 by William de Briouze, and from its contents the conjecture of Dugdale that Oliver de Tracy had died 31 Hen. Passais. Guillelmus de Traceio i mil. et sibi v. mil. This William, by the name of William de Traci, son of Gervasia de Courtenai, gave to the Canons of Torre com. Devon all his lands in North Chillingford, which he held of Dru de Montgirim, also a feudatory in the Passais, where in 1172 Odo de Montegerol had a knight's fee, for which he owed forty days of ward at his own cost, and afterward at the cost of the King. Henry de Traci, son of William de Traci, for the health of his soul, and the souls of his father and mother, and of all his ancestors and successors, gave and granted to God and the church of St. Mary of Ford, and to the monks there serving God, in pure and perpetual alms, the land of Cnutesbury, with the land of Leoford, and with all its other appurtenances, and all the right which he had in the land of Cliftwich, which had been the marriage-portion of his mother; and he granted besides to the same monks the lands which they had held of the fief of Braose, priusquam hereditatem suam recuperavit, viz. the land of Linton with the service of the land of Furssil, and the land of Colebrook, with common of the pasture of Brahames for 300 sheep and 20 cattle, free and quit from all secular service and exaction, as of free alms; and engaged that he would behave towards the same monks peacefully, and that he would not harass them or their men or their tenements. And this he pledged and swore faithfully to observe, these being witnesses, H. archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Geoffrey Fitz Piers, Geoffrey de Bocland. Hubert obtained the see of Canterbury in 1193, and Geoffrey Fitz-Piers was created Earl of Essex in 1199, wherefore this charter will have been dated in the interval.

name, is shewn to be incorrect; Oliver, son of Henry de Tracy, in fact survived till 12 Joh. 1211, when Eva, his relict, wife first of Thomas de Londres, made proffer of 120 marks for assignation of dower and license of marrying at will. At the time of the separation from England Robert de Brucourt was tenant of a moiety of the manor of Winchendon com. Bucks, and his land is noted to be worth 5 li. on the Roll de valore terrarum Normannorum 6. Joh. 1205; in which same year it was conceded by the King for a fine of 100 li. and two palfreys to the abbey of Nutley.

Baillia de Vira per Ricardum de Fonteneio.

Richard de Fontenay rendered accompt through William de la Bazoge of 180 li. of the ferm of the Prevôté of the Castle of Vire of the year past, and of 70 li. of increase of the same year, and of the like sums in the current year. Both of the old ferm and the sum in increase the abbey of Troarn had the tythe, and 450 li., left owing, remained charged upon the Earl of Chester, who was also a debtor in 40 li. for the ferm of the Vicomté of Vau-de-Vire of the said two years, and in 40 setiers of oats for the issues of the bernage in Chênedollé, Prêles, Sieurmon and Carville for the same term. The Earl of Chester likewise owed for a similar amount due of the fermes and issues during the third and fourth years past appertaining to this Bailiwick. Richard de Fontenay next rendered accompt of the amercements, fines, and proffers of the Bailiwick of Vire, viz. of a sum of 85 li. 5s. 6d.; out of which 3s. were in the Treasury, and of the remainder he rendered accompt below. Accompts follow of debts in the names of individuals and vills, for Tallage withheld in regard of the latter,⁷ of which payment had been made in part ; and there is a list of debtors from whom nothing had been received. For example—William de Montbrai owed 140 li. of the loan which the King had made to him—the fief of Torgis de Tracy 10 li. of the service of two knights of the host of Gascony—William Bacon of Landelles 5 li., as mainpernor of William de Pirou, and the Earl of Chester 2598 li. 6s. 9d. of the residue of his accompt of his Bailiwicks, and 700 marks, which the King had lent to him, and 700 li. of the Loan of Gascony, and 100 li. for having right versus Peter de Sablé of the Honour of Croisilles, and 195 li. for relief of fourteen knights of the fief of the Bishop of Bayeux, and 2250 li. of the fermes of St. James and of the Vicomté of the Bessin, and of the prevôté of Avranches, and of the Bailiwick of Vire, during four years and a half, and 240 quarters of oats of the Bernage of the Bailiwick of Vire during four years, with which entry the list terminates. The memorandum at foot amodo requirendum est in Oximino may be best understood in reference to the debt of the Earl of Chester only, who was henceforth to be liable for the same in the Bailiwick of the Oximin, and to be there summoned for its discharge by the officers of the crown. Rannulph, Earl of Chester, had succeeded to his earldom when a minor, inasmuch as his mother Berta, daughter of Simon Comte of Evreux, was only twenty-nine years of age in 1185, nor did he obtain his knighthood before 1188, on occasion of his marriage with Constance, the widowed Duchess of Brittany, at the command of King Henry II. During the reign of Richard he had been in the possession of the whole of his hereditary offices and lands, but in neither fiscal year, of which the Rolls have been preserved, does he appear as an accomptant at the Exchequer ; hence the fermes, with which he is here charged, extending over a period of four years and a half, must be referred to that reign in default of any precise specification of the number of years past. Rannulph, Duke of Brittany, Earl of Chester and of Richmond, gave to Rufus, and in that of 1332 Guillelmus le Gueuderel est patronus ecclesie beate Marie de ultra aquam. Now, in the Register of Philip Augustus we have Radulfus de Argogis, dim. feod. de feodis Rohais de Dubra—Adam de S'e'a Maria dim. feod. de eodem—Willelmus Rufus apud Mainmillum—Guarini sextam partem feodi de eodem—Rannulfus de Doito ap Mesmillum Roberti tertiam partem feodi de eodem ; by which entry the patron of S'te Marie-outre-l'eau is identified with the tenure of a fief at Mesnil-Guérin, the above name being simply expressive of the site of the church across the river Drôme in respect of that of St. Jean Baptiste, probably the mother church of Mesnil-Guérin. Rohais de Dovor was the eldest co-heir of the barony of her grandfather, Richard de Lucé, chief Justiciary of England in the reign of Henry II ; and in 1251 the family of Argouges had yet the patronage of the church of Pont-Bellenger, the commune immediately adjacent to S'te-Marie-outre-l'eau.

the Abbey of Blessed Mary of Montmirel, and to the Canons there serving God, a site in the vill of St. James de Bevron in the presence of Roger of Chester, brother of the Earl, Roger, Constable of Chester, Eudo of Chester, and several others. On the Roll of Normandy, begun 18 May, 1200, entry is made of the proffer of the Earl of Chester to the Lord the King of 100 li., money of Anjou, for having right of the land of the Honour of Croisilles and of Sai,² with the appurtenances and fiefs and knight-service, which he claimed versus Peter de Sablé, and command was sent to Guérin de Glapion, the Seneschal of Normandy, that he do him right therein, and not to demur by reason of the ost from maintaining it to him. Croisilles is a commune in the vicinity of Gacé, the seat of the barony of Peter de Sablé, and was apparently parcel of the Honour of Sai, near Argentan, which had descended as to one moiety in the line of Du Hommet, through the marriage with Agnes de Sai, and was held by the branch which had the surname de Similly. A writ dated at Bonsmoulins, 22nd Sept. 1199, directs Thomas Mauflâtre to deliver to the Earl of Chester the castle of Similly, whence it would seem that the inheritance of Gervasia de Sai, who was younger sister of Agnes du Hommet, and daughter of Jordan de Sai, to whom the bourg of Similly of old belonged, had continued in the hands of the crown from the time of her decease, she having died without issue; or else it may be that this grant to the Earl of Chester was consequent upon his marriage with the niece of William du Hommet, Constable of Normandy, who, as heir of Gervasia de Sai, will have made cession of such, his right. Mention has been made in a former page of the surrender of Similly by the Earl to the King, 12 Apr. 1203, when at the castle of Vire; on which occasion he found for his mainpernor William, Constable of Normandy, and for his hostage, Roger, Constable of Chester, with the whole fief which he held of him, sub tali condicione, quod si præfatus Comes unquam a fidelitate et servi-

Wherefore, my conjecture as to the Honour of Creully being in that year in the custody of Peter de Sablé falls to the ground, and it will have remained with Geoffrey des Roches, who was displaced 25 Aug. 1202 by Richard de Réviers, but again put in possession under Philip Augustus.

At the same time Fulk Paynell delivered on his own behalf, to the King, his son as a hostage; the Constable also of Normandy, and Ralph Tesson, Seneschal of Normandy, and Robert de Troisgots and John de Préaux delivered to the Lord the King hostages for themselves. Thus satisfied of his fidelity, the King by letters patent dated at Falaise 8 May, 1203, commanded Hugh de Chaucomb upon sight thereof immediately to deliver to Rannulph, Earl of Chester, the castle of Similly. Upon the inquest taken of the fiefs held of the see of Bayeux after the death of Bishop Richard, son of Samson, in 1133 it was found as follows, Rannoudus, Vicecomes Baiocensis, tenet feodum septem mil. et dim—Comes Cestrie tenet de episcopo feodum quinque mil., scilicet, apud Brammoest et apud Mesmillum Osulfi et feodum Roberti de Fontibus et forestam de Alleya et apud Frazinos et Montem-Secretum et Clivefeugeriam. Below is a second entry in respect of the lands held by Rannulph, Vicomte of the Bessin, of the fief of the church of Bayeux, which concludes in these words: *Has terras tenuit prefatus Rannoudus Vicecomes pro servitio novem militum et dimidii. After the union of the fief of the Earl of

* The feudal relations between the Bishop of Bayeux and the Vicomte of the Bessin will be best understood from the following instrument, copied into the Chartulary of the diocese. "Hec est conventio que facta est inter episcopum Baiocensem et Rannulfum Vicecomitem, cum diu prius discordiam habuissent. Facta autem est Baiocis in domo Baiocensis episcopi, presentibus hiis hominibus episcopi ex parte sua, Guillelmo Ogeri filio, Heltone, Adam Huberti filio, Adeloldo camerario, Roberto de Sulleio; et hiis ex parte Rannulfi, Herberto Gondeuini filio, Guillelmo de Semilleio, Nigello Serlonis filio. Hoc igitur foedere convenerunt; fecit enim Rannulfus fidelitatis securitatem episcopo, sicut domino suo, fide et sacramento de vita sua, videlicet, episcopi, et de membris, que corpori suo adherebant, et de captione sui corporis quod nullo modo eam quereretur dampno episcopi. Fecit etiam sibi fidelitatem ligiam idem Rannulfus iurejurando de tota terra quam episcopus ea die tenebat, et de tota illa terra quam ipse episcopus concilio Rannulfi adquireret, hoc modo, quod ipse Rannulfus eundem episcopum juvaret ad hoc, ut ipse Episcopus eam ex integro optineret. Chester with that of the Vicomte of the Bessin, the entire service will have been estimated at fourteen knights, and from the delay in the payment of the relief we may infer that the Earl had only attained his majority in the preceding reign. At the foot of this membrane Richard de Fontenay rendered accompt of 85 li. 2s. 6d. above written of the amercements, fines, and proffers of the Bailiwick of Vire—of 33 li. 10s. above written of his receipts—of 8 li. 17s. of the ferm of the Prevôté of Barfleur of the past year—of 61 li. 13s. of the ferm of the Vicomté of the Cotentin of the same year—of 3 li. of the ferm of S'te-Mere-eglise of the same year—of 17 li. 12s. of the minute rents of the Cotentin—of 328 li. 15s. 1d. of his receipts in the Bailiwick of the Cotentin—of 151 li. 6s. 9d. of the ferm of the monies assessed in the Honour of Cher-

Honorem vero de Plaissediz et saltum Ele de calumpnia, quam inde Rannulfus episcopo faciebat, absolvit, et absolvendo episcopo quiete utrumque dimisit. Sed de terra Rogeri Malifiliastri et Rainaldi de Surrehain ipso Rannulfo promisit ex conducto, quod de iis a comite excambium equivalens reciperet, si idem Rannulfus erga comitem efficere possit. Si vero non possit, episcopus Rannulfum fideliter adjuvaret ut inde Comes Rannulfo excambium redderet; adjuvaret quidem eundem sed prece et consilio non per pecuniam ex pacto. Si autem neutrum possit fieri, nec Rannulfus nec aliquis suus filius a pacta fide discederet, quamvis ipse utrumque in manu sua retineret. Fecit igitur episcopus Rannulfum, sicut suum hominem, securum per fidem de vita sua, id est, Rannulfi, et de membris que corpori suo adherebant et de captione sui corporis, quod nullo modo eam quereret dampno Rannulfi, et de tota terra, quam idem Rannulfus ea die tenebat, et de tota illa, quam ipse consilio episcopi acquireret, hoc modo quod ipse episcopus Rannulfum adjuvaret contra omnes impugnare volentes, salva fide comitis Roberti. Reddidit vero episcopus Rannulfo omnes illas terras, quas idem Rannulfus jam ab eo habuerat, excepta terra Nigelli de Costentino. Sed de terra Flavinnei et Gaveruz concessit Rannulfus ut excambium ab episcopo reciperet, si ipse sibi dare vellet. Et dedit sibi Episcopus hec incrementa, videlicet, totam terram Tort-capel et terram Bernardi filii Ilgeri. Illam autem partem de nemore Bretele, que ad episcopum pertinebat, recepit Rannulfus in dominicatu ab episcopo, concedente Adeloldo, non denegante episcopo. Dedit ei iterum episcopus terram de Busc, quam Robertus de Prateriis ab episcopo tenebat, et terram quam Hugo de Rosel ab episcopo tenebat, et terram Guillelmi Chochet, et terram quam Episcopus habebat in Bussei, et per unumquemque Pascha pelles marturinas et erminium Renonem vel triginta libras Rothomagensium. Hos erga suos homines, Guillelmum de Semilleio, Herbertum Gouduini filium, Hugonem de Rosel, Rannulfum Alani filium, Nigellum Serlonis filium, dedit Rannulfus episcopo, hujus conventionis assertores et obsides, ex precepto Rannulfi per fidem eorum episcopo pasciscentes, ut in predicta fidelitate Rannulfum ergo episcopum quantum possent precibus et consilio retinerent. Si autem non possent, contra Rannulfum episcopo veritatis testes existerent. Similiter vero episcopus hos suos homines, Sansonem, Guillelmum Ogeri filium, Heltonem, Adeloldum camerarium, Robertum de Sullei Rannulfo dedit ut obsides, ex precepto episcopi Rannulfo per fidem promittentes ut precibus et consilio quantum possent episcopum ergo Rannulfum in predicta amicitia detinerent. Si autem non possent, Rannulfo contra episcopum de veritate testimonium darent.

bourg and of Valognes and of Brix—of 140 li. which he had received from Matthew Danais for having the custody of the land and of the heir of John Belet—of 80 li. which he had received from the Earl of Leicester pro vadio negato at Montchauvet—of 300 li. from the mainpernors of Thomas de Gorges of his fine—of 122 li. 18s. of his receipts from the Bailiwick of Coutances—of 190 li. 7s. which he had received of the amercements of the men of the Bailiwick of Coutances, who had not gone in the host, set by Gilebert des Prés and Richard de Grisi—of 10 li. of the minute pleas of the Vicomté of Cerences of half the past year and of this year, and of 47 li. 14s. 6d. which he had received of debts upon summons for the Cotentin at the time he was Bailiff, in all a sum of 1580 li. 15s. 10d. ; the deposit in the Treasury was 10d. and of the remaining debt he rendered accompt after the Bailiwick of Mortain. John Belet was eldest son of Michael Belet and Emma de Cheney, and brother of Magister Michael Belet, William provost of Bayeux in the preceding reign, Bogo, Robert, Adam, Hervey and Eustace, and of Emma, Annora and Roisia, all named in the foundation charter of the priory of Wroxton, com. Oxon. by the aforesaid Magister. He married Alicia, daughter of Fulk d'Oyri, seneschal of Baldwin comte of Aumale, who, being left a widow, King John by Letters Close to the Sheriffs of the shires of Northampton and of Norfolk and Suffolk, dated 26 Oct. 1204, bade them know that he had given her to Ralph Tirell, his serviens, and had sent his command to her to take him to her husband, and in case of her refusal to cause Hugh de Nevill to have her land without delay ; but on the Fine Roll, 6 Joh. 1204, the proffer of 50 marks and two palfreys for having the daughter of Fulk de Oyri, widow of John Belet, is entered in the name of Ralph Ridellus. This projected marriage, however, did not take effect, and in 1205 Fulk d'Oyri proffered to the King 100 marks for having the marriage of Alice, his daughter, widow of John Belet, and so as that the said Alice should have her dower of the frank tenement of John, late her husband ; afterward, 9 Joh. 1208, she became the wife of Thomas de Burgh. Prior to 15 Jul. 1203, Eustace Belet had paid into the King's Chamber in Normandy 8 li. of the relief of the land, which had been that of his father ; and hence it is probable that he was the heir in custody of Matthew Danais. In England the manors of Wroxton com. Oxon, and Thorp com. North^a. passed to the above-named Magr. Michael Belet, but rather under the grant made to him by King John 28 Dec. 1205, of all the lands with their appurtenances, which had belonged to Hervey Belet, his grandfather, than by right as next heir. Gorges, from which Thomas had his local surname, is a commune in the arrondissement of Coutances, canton of Periers, and was the site of more than one fief. In 1220 Robert de l'Espesse (de Spissa) held of the Honour of Plessis the fief of a knight at L'Espesse, Gorges, and elsewhere, and in 1251 the church of Gorges had three patrons, viz. Robert de l'Espesse, patron for the fief of L'Espesse, the King for the other portion, which was of the fief of Thomas de Gorges, and the Prior and Chapter of Mortain of the third portion, which was of the fief of Camp-Rond. In England Thomas de Gorges held of the King's grant the wardship of the manor of Poorstock com. Dorset, which the Escheators of the King, by his writ dated at Lexington, 28 Sept., 20 Hen. 3, 1236, were directed to deliver to Joan, his relict, for her support during the royal pleasure. Ralph de Gorges, who comes next, had Poorstock for his life, and was lord of Litton, com. Dors., a fief of three knights, held of the Honour of Chewton; from him descended the barons of this surname in England.

Membrane 4.

Ballia de Moretonio per Ricardum de Fonteneio et a tergo.

Upon the accession of John, Comte of Mortain, to the throne after the death of Richard I. the comté, which had been his appanage, was again annexed to the demesne of the crown in Normandy, and the fermes rendered account of by the Bailiffs, as in 1180. On this membrane Richard de Fontenay made return for the year past and the current year, and upon comparing the entries with those on the Roll of the year 1180, no alteration will be found in the fermes and issues or in the annual charges, save that the Prior and Canons of Beaulieu near Rouen had 40 li. of fixed alms in the two years by the King's charter.^b The balance of the account of the ferm of the toll, the ovens and the mills of Mortain, was 139 li. 9s. 8d.; of which 100 li. were charged upon William de l'Etang, and of the remainder, charged upon himself, ^b This charter is transcribed on the Roll of Charter and Chirographs of Normandy made in the time of Guérin de Glapion, then Seneschal of Normandy, in the second year of the reign of King John, assisting at the Exchequer Samson, Abbot of Caen, and Ralph Labe and Peter de Lions, clerk of the Lord the King. By it the Prior and Canons of Beaulieu were to have 20 li. of rent, money of Anjou, to be received annually at Mortain from the Prevôté of Mortain, viz. at the feast of St. Michael 10 li. and at Easter 10 li. by the hand of the provost of Mortain.

Richard de Fontenay renders accompt on the back of the membrane. The sum owing of the residue of the old ferm of Le Teilleul of the fourth and the third year past, and the balance of the fermes of the two years of which the Bailiff now rendered accompt, were also remaining in charge upon the same William de l'Etang, for by charter, given by the hand of Hubert, Archbishop of Canterbury, "Our Chancellor," at Rouen 6 Sept. 1199, King John granted and confirmed to William de l'Etang the vill of Le Teilleul with all its appurtenances and fifty librates of rent in the mills of Mortain, "to have and to hold to him and his heirs of Us and Our heirs for his homage and service, which he has done to Us." The King also granted and confirmed to the same William a certain site of a mill at Verneuil, with the mill constructed by him upon that site, and a certain dwelling with the appurtenances built in the same town upon the wall towards the causeway of the pond, and 20 li. of rent, money of Anjou, in the Prevôté of the same town of Verneuil, "which he had of the gift of King Richard, Our brother, of happy memory." At the foot of the accompt of the minute rents of Mortain during the two years, deduction is made of 24 li. 12s. 8d. in loss through the vills having been laid waste by war, which were wont to render the customary aide du Vicomte—of 7 li. 14s. 4d. of the year past for the land of Le Bois, which William de Fougères had, whilst he was in the King's service—and of 3 li. 4s. for the fiefs of Espinard and Estrééz laid waste by war during the two years. The charter of King John, granting to William de Fougères for his homage and service "all the land, which is called Le Bois (Le Busc) of Our demesne in the parish of Villechien to hold to him and his heirs of Us and Our heirs by the render of a nias hawk annually on the feast of St. Michael," bears date at Bur-le-roi 30 Jan. 1200, being witnesses, William Marshal, Earl of Pembroke, William Earl of Salisbury, William des Roches, Seneschal of Anjou, Ralph de Mauleon, Seneschal of Poitou, Rogo de Sassey, Geoffrey de la Celle, Robert de Turnham, &c. William, son of Henry, Baron of Fougères, by his wife Oliva, daughter of Comte Stephen of Brittany, had inherited from his mother the manor of Long Bennington com. Linc. which was of her frank marriage, and held besides of the grant of his brother Ralph, baron of Fougères, the manor of Twyford com. Bucks for his homage and service. Also by the terms of the convention between the said William de Fougères and Geoffrey, his nephew's son, 7 Oct. 1200, it was agreed that he should hold the whole land of Fougères, as Ralph de Fougères had committed it to him to be faithfully guarded, from the

Nativity of the Lord in the year 1201 for the space of five years ; upon the expiration of which term, he was to render back to Geoffrey, his nephew's son, all the land of Fougères without dispute. After the murder of Prince Arthur and the defection of Comte Robert of Sées, William de Fougères, Juhel de Mayenne, and other Britons, were among the first to declare themselves in opposition to King John, who thereupon issued his writ to the Seneschal of Normandy, dated at Sées 27 Jan. 1203, commanding him to cause Walter Le Franceis (Francigena) to have without delay Hudimesnil with all its appurtenances and chattels, which was belonging to William de Fougères, "who is against us with Comte Robert of Sées." The frontier line of Normandy and Brittany will have forthwith become the seat of war ; and we have here the proof, a fief in the parish of Heussé, on the extreme verge, having been each year rendered wholly valueless by its ravages. The same Richard de Fontenay also rendered accompt of the ferm of the Prevôté of Tinchebray and of the issues recovered by inquest of the past and current years. Beside the customary alms to the Canon of Mortain, as in 1180, 14 li. for the furnage of Tinchebrai during the two years had been paid to the Lepers of Tinchebrai, who had it of fixed alms by the King's charter, and which was of the ferm ; also 65 li. to Fredericus Malésmains of the term of his tenure of Tinchebrai, and 4 li. for palisading the castle of Tinchebray and for stopping up a certain gate of the same castle under the King's writ. The Canons of Ivrande had also 8 li. of the three past years and of this year for the land of Préaux with the appurtenances, which the King had given to them by his charter ; a gift made when he was Comte of Mortain, as we learn from two charters, the one given at Le Bois named above, 24th Sept. in this year, and the other at Falaise three days afterwards, confirming to God and the church of S'te Marie d'Ivrande and the canons there serving God the land of Préaux with all its appurtenances, quam eis dedimus dum essemus Comes Moretonii, which Robert Le Mareschal had held, in free pure and perpetual alms, for the health of Our soul and those of all Our ancestors. The grant to the Lepers had also been made prior to the King's accession, and who by his charter, given by the hands of Simon, Archdeacon of Wells, at Bonneville-sur-Touques, 7 May 1200, confirmed the same, viz. panem de furnagiis de Tenerchebray salva decima que pertinet ad prebendam canonici. Accompt of the ferm of the Vicomté of Cerences during the same term of two years follows in the name of the Bailiff, whose disbursements for customary alms and fees accord with those made in 1180 ; and as to the sum left over,

240 li. 1s. 4d., it was a charge upon Rogues de Saussey, who was also a debtor in 36s., for the two years, for eighteen boisseaux of wheat recovered by inquest. By charter given by the hand of Hubert archbishop of Canterbury, "Our Chancellor," 7 Sept. 1199 King John granted to Rogo de Saussey for his homage and service "whatever We had in Coutances and Cerences, whilst We were Comte of Mortain, with all its appurtenances, for 100 librates of land in money of Anjou, to hold to him his heirs and assigns of Us and of Our heirs for the service of the fief of one knight in lieu of all service." Simon le Lormer and Henry de Calix rendered accompt of 270 li. 13s. 5d. of the issue of the fair of Montmartin, of the year past; in the Treasury were 228 li. 18s. 8d., and the annual payments, viz. 27 li. 16d. in tythe to the Prior of Mortain, 40s. to the Dean of Mortain of fixed alms, 14s. to the Vicomte of Cerences, 6s. to the Provost of Cerences, 8s. 2d. to two graverengerii of fixed liveries, 4s. 2d. to the Lepers of fixed alms, and 10 li. to Lescelina de Subligny de feodo embraced the remainder, save 19s. 7d. which were yet owing by the Accomptants. Henry de Calix singly rendered accompt of 54 li. 6s. 4d. of the issue of the same ferm of the current year, out of which the tythe and fixed alms were paid as above, and the Vicomte had his fixed livery; but the whole residue had been made over to the Bailiff of Mortain, and of which he rendered accompt in the Bailiwick of Coutances. Gervase Mancon and Simon Le Cheverer are put down as owing 73 li. 2d. of the residue of the old ferm of the fair of Montmartin of the fourth year past; and William Belet and William Fitz Lucas rendered accompt of 46 li. 6s. 2d. of the residue of the ferm of the same fair of the third year past, which sum was in the receipt of William Poignard, who had accounted for the same in the Bailiwick of Caen in the past year, wherefore they were quit. The smallness of the issue of the fair in the current year will have resulted from the war with the Britons, who had been accustomed to attend it in time of peace, as before remarked. Among the debtors in the Bailiwick of Mortain, who rendered no accompt in this fiscal year, we have Richard Silvanus, Bailiff in 1198, who owed 232 li. 15s. of the residue of his accompt of the Tallage of 1000 li. set upon the Jews of Normandy by the same Richard through the precept of King John—Matthew de Préles 15s. of the fourth part of a knight of the ost of Poitou—Rolland Avenel 20 li. of the residue of the loan of Gascony, and 25 li. of five knight's fees of the ost of Gascony—Peter de St. Hilaire 200 li. and one horse for having such seisin of his land of Les Loges, as he had when he went into France—Nicolas Ave-

nel 40 li. for having the King's precept to Rolland Avenel to restore to him the barony or the escheats of the fief, which had been that of William Avenel, and William de Fougères 100 li. of money had in loan. William Avenel, lord of Les Biards, and Seneschal of the Comté of Mortain in 1191, was father of Rolland, Nicolas and Oliver; of whom the first had land at Ashley, com. Hants, in England at the time of the separation of Normandy, which was afterward given to the Earl of the Isle. Richard de Fontenay yet owed 279 li. 18s. 4d. of the residue of his accompt of his fermes and receipts of the third year past, of which sum were remaining 100 li. upon William de l'Etang, and upon himself 179 li. 18s. 4d., of which he rendered accompt below. He also rendered accompt of 21 li. 7s. 7d. of the view of the forest of La Lande pourrie of the past year, over the tythes and fixed liveries and fees, and of 13 li. 7s. 4d. of the view of the forest of Tinchebrai of the same year, and of 36 li. 6s. 8d. and of 13 li. 5s. 3d. of the like view of the same forest in the current year; under the King's writ he had expended 15 li. in the repair of the hays of La Lande pourrie—37 li. 12s. 6d. in the livery of Durand de Loviers and 3 li. for making snares to catch wolves, whilst of the remaining sum he rendered accompt below. In his name is also an accompt of the sums due of the amercements of the men of the nuns of Mortain, for infractions of the assize of wine; but which the King had remitted to them. He next rendered accompt of the various debts above-written, and of 125 li., which he had received from Ralph Taisson, then Seneschal of Normandy, by the hand of William Poignard, and of 40 li. from the same Ralph by Robert le Forestier, and of other 20 li. from the same Ralph, and of 100 li. from Ralph Picache of his fine, an amount in all of 979 li. 16s. 11d.; save having paid back to Geoffrey L'Anglois, a man of the nuns of Mortain, 3 li. which had been received of him for wine oversold, he owed the whole sum, of which he rendered accompt below. An accompt of 52 li. 4s., which the Bailiff had received of the issue of the land of William de Cahagnes,^c follows, and which debt had been acquitted by payment of the ^c The fief of Cahagnes was held of the Comté of Mortain, and on the Roll of Infeudations, anno 1172, under the heading In Ballia de Tenarchebrato, the service of the tenant is thus entered, Radulfus de Chainois 1. mil. At the time of taking the Domesday survey William de Cabaingees held certain lands in capite and divers fiefs of the Comté of Mortain and the Bishop of Bayeux, all which before the close of the reign of Henry I. had been parted between Ralph and Hugh de Cahagnes, who both left descendants. Ralph de Cahagnes married Alice, daughter of Hugh, and sister of Walchelin Maminot, and had with her certain lands at Peckham in Kent in frankmarriage, which were subsequently bestowed upon the sum to the King in his Chamber. Simon, the Archdeacon of Avranches, also rendered accompt of 800 li. of his fine for having the lands, chattels and debts of his father, William Pitot, which he had delivered in at the Treasury and was quit. Richard de Fontenay next rendered accompt of 28 li. 2s., which he had received from the escheats of the Bailiwick of Caux of the year past, whilst he had them in his custody—of 4 li. 5s. 4d. of the escheats of the Bailiwick of the Roumois—of 17 li. 8s. of the escheats of the Bailiwick of Montfort of the same year—of 2 li. 5s. of the escheats of the Bailiwick of La Londe—of 6 li. 3s. 6d. of the escheats of the Bailiwick of the Lieuvin—of 8 li. 7s. of the escheats of the Bailiwick of Vire—of 20 li. 14s. 4d. of the escheats of the Bailiwick of Coutances and Cerences—of 53 li. 11s. of the escheats of the Bailiwick of the Côtentin, and of 200 li. 7s. 9d., which he had received of the issue of the Bishopric of Coutances, whilst it was in the King's hands,^d and of 320 li. 7s. 4d. which he had re-

Priory of Merton, com. Surr. where after her decease Alice de Cahagnes had interment; to which same religious house Ralph de Cahagnes also gave the advowsons of several churches of his fief in England, and that of Cahagnes in Normandy. In 1168 he held of the old feofment of King Henry I. three knight's fees and of new feofment the fourth part of a knight, and in 1185 his daughter Juliana, who had been the wife of Richard del Estre, was a widow in the King's gift, having land in Berton com. Cantbr. which was of her frankmarriage. His son William de Cahagnes was succeeded by another Ralph de Cahagnes, Sheriff of the counties of Dorset and Somerset from 3 to 6 Ric. I.; in which last year he was deceased, for then his son William paid relief for his lands, and became his successor in the shrievalty, which he held till the end of the reign of Richard I. On the accession of King John he fell under the royal displeasure, and both his lands in Normandy were seized and his chattels in England sold by the officers of the crown; but, having made proffer of 100 marks for having the good will of the King, he had restitution of his lands, for which he paid scutage 3 Joh. 1202, viz. ten marks of the fiefs of three knights. The mother of his children was Letticia, who survived him, and had dower of his lands 6 Hen. III. 1221; afterward remarried to Hugh Paynell, Lord of Drax com. Ebor., who being also deceased 28 Hen. III. 1244, she had livery of his lands during the minority of their issue. By his charter, given by the hand of Simon, Archdeacon of Wells, at Valognes 17 Feb. 1200, King John ratified the exchange made between the prior and canons of Merton and the prior and monks of St. Fromond of their churches, viz. of the church of Cahagnes in Normandy, which belonged to the said Prior and canons, granted to the said Prior and monks, and of the tythes and churches which had belonged to the Prior and monks of St. Fromond in England, granted to the said Prior and Canons, sicut permutatio rationabiliter et secundum Deum facta est ex indulgentia Lucii Papæ tertii et sicut carte episcoporum diocesanorum, H(ugonis) Lincolnensis et H(enrici) Baiocensis et patronorum earundem ecclesiarum et decimarum rationabiliter testantur.

^d Vivian de l'Étang was consecrated Bishop of Coutances in succession to William de Tournebu in the year 1202, and on the 12th day of September was present in the chapter of Coutances at the settlement of a dispute between the abbots of L'Essay and Blanchelande. The death of his predecessor is by Dom. Beasin stated to have occurred on the 4th of November, 1199, and in the year 1202 by other authorities, the day of his obit being marked in the Obituary of

Below, Richard de Fontenay rendered accompt of the same debt, and of 976 li. 16s. 11d. above written of the residue of his accompt of his debts and receipts, and of 1580 li. 15s. of the residue of his accompt of his receipts after the Bailiwick of Vire, in all of 3018 li. 15s. 5d.; his outlay was as follows, viz. in liveries of four knights sojourning at Mont-St.-Michel for one whole year and 34 days and of one knight sojourning there for 305 days, i. e. to each daily 6s., 570 li. 6s.—in wages of ten servientes pedites for the same term, i. e. to each 8d. daily, 133 li.—in wages of five servientes pedites for 36 days, i. e. to each 8d. daily, 6 li.—in wages of fifteen knights sojourning at Mortain for 140 days, i. e. from the third day of June until the feast of Simon and Jude, viz. to each 6s. daily, 630 li.—in wages of ten servientes equites for the same term, viz. to each 2s. daily, 140 li.—in livery of one knight sojourning at the castle of Vire for 49 days, i. e. from Pascha florida (Palm Sunday) until the Sunday next after the Ascension of the Lord, viz. 6s. daily, 14 li. 14s.—in wages of three servientes equites for the same term, viz. to each 2s. daily, 14 li. 14s.—in wages of seven servientes pedites for the same term, viz. to each 8d. daily, 13 li. 16d.—in wages of three servientes equites sojourning at Tinchebrai for 44 days, viz. to each 2s. daily, 13 li. 4s.—in wages of nine servientes pedites for the same term, viz. to each 8d. daily, 13 li. 4s.—in minor works of the castle of Vire 7 li. 10s.—for making a certain ditch round the castle of Mortain 291 li. 15s.—for making a certain ditch before the tower of the same castle 250 li. 9s.—for making a certain ditch round the church (monasterium) of the castle of Mortain 164 li. 16s.—for making a certain ditch in front of Le Rocher 24 li. 17s.—for making a certain ditch in front of the hall of the same castle 95 li. 15s.—for barring the tower of the same castle and for making the mills of the same castle 18 li. 8s.—for making the hurdle-fences of the same castle 13 li.—for making the bars and portcullices of the same castle 5 li.—for making the pali-

There is, however, authentic evidence of his being present at Caen on the 23rd of January, 1200, in company with the archbishop of Rouen and the bishops of Bayeux and Evreux, and of his subscribing to a charter for settlement of the disputed matters between the King and the metropolitan; hence it is apparent he survived until November in that or the following year, probably the latter, as the smallness of the receipt from the issues of the see, whilst it was in the King's hands, may be taken as proof of a short vacancy.

The same Bailiff rendered accompt of his debt below, and having since paid to Geoffrey the Moneychanger (le Cangeor) in discharge of the monies which the King owed him, 320 li. 7s. 4d. he continued indebted in only 89 li. 0s. 9d. upon the balance of his accompts for this fiscal year.

Robert de Vieuxpont rendered accompt through William d'Amfreville and Hugh de Sorreuele, clerk, of 26 li. 13s. 4d. of the ferm of the Vicomté of the Roumois of eight months;^e in the Treasury were 5s. and in tythe to the Treasurer 53s. 4d. had been paid as usual, whilst in the repair of houses, walls and the bridge of the castle of Rouen, and for timber for the tower, and for nets bought for the King's use 75 li. 2s. 8d. had been disbursed under the King's writ,^f leaving a surplus of 51 li. 7s. 8d. which in his next accompt was reduced by 9 li. 7s. 6d. the sum received by him of the assised issues in his

^e On the Patent Rolls, 4 Joh. 1203, the Letters appointing Robert le Vieuxpont to the office of Bailiff of the Roumois are read as follows: *Rex, &c. omnibus per balliam Rothomagensensem constitutis, salutem. ^f The King's writ to the Seneschal of Normandy and Barons of the Exchequer to reckon to Robert de Vieuxpont the sum mentioned, which he had laid out as stated, after the feast of the Apostles St. Peter and Paul in the fifth year of his reign, bears date at Rouen 9 Nov. 1203 and is entered upon the Rolls of Normandy.

Bailiwick. Among the debtors making no payment, in addition to such as are found on the Roll of 1198, we have the Earl de Warren 14 li. 15s. 9d. de jurea—Robert Le Clerc 50 li. which he had from William Malet toward the works of Tillières—Roger du Bois 20s. because he did not come to the arrière-ban—Reginald du Bois 100 li. of the relief of the land of Osbert de Cailly—William Quailou 3 li. for concord versus the abbot of S'te Catharine of Rouen—the Comte of Dammartin one bezant for oyer of the concord made between him and the Archbishop of Rouen, as the chyrograph between them witnesseth, and William Le Chien 200 li. which Geoffrey the Money-changer lent him to make his liveries. The Abbot of the Mont de Rouen rendered account of 6 li. 5s. of the fiefs of two knights and of the fourth part of a knight's fee for the aide de l'ost of Gascony, which he delivered in at the Treasury and was quit; and for the same Stephen de Longchamp and Reginald du Bois owed 50s. of residue for the fiefs of two knights of the Honour of Cailly—Hugh de Gournai 60 li. of the fiefs of twelve knights—the heir of William de Roumara 20 li. of the fiefs of four knights—Gohel de Baudemont 5 li. for the same—William d'Etouteville 5 li. of the fief of one knight in Doudeauville—Evanus de Brac 15 li. of the fiefs of three knights at St. Saens—the heir of Geoffrey de St. Martin 5 li.—the heir of William de Maucombe 5 li.—the heir of Richard de Prétot 5 li.—Geoffrey d'Eu 5 li.—Godefroi de Gamaches 50s. of half a knight's fee—the heir of Robert de Poissy 5 li., and the Comte of Boulogne 5 li. at Alisai near Pont de l'Arche. Thomas de St. Valery owed 50 li. of the loan of Gascony, as mainpernor of Guérin de Glapion, and 40 li. as mainpernor of William le Marescal, and John de Préaux 200 li. of the same, as mainpernor of Peter de Préaux, and 5 li. which the King had lent him at Tours; of the loan of Gascony 38 li. were also owing by Walter Pipart, and from the Honour of St. Saens 21 li. were due of the aide de l'ost of Normandy of the past year. Upon the Roll, containing the Infeudations of the Knights and their service in 1172 to the Duke of Normandy, the entry is Abbas de Monte Rothomagi iii. mil. et quartam partem; but the reading in the Register of 1228, Abbas S'ce Katherine tenet ii feoda militum et unam quartam de Ducatu, agrees with the tenure here put down. On the same earlier Roll we read Osbertus de Caillio ii mil. de honore de Caillio, and Hugo de Gurnaio xii mil. et omnium reliquorum ad Marchiam; so in like manner the service in the host of William de Romara was only four knights elsewhere than upon the March at Neufmarché. Again, In Ballia Willielmi de Malpalu, i. e. the Roumois, we read Goellus de

Baudemont i. mil.—Willelmus de Stotevilla i. mil. de feodo de Dodealvilla,—De Sancto Sidonio iii mil. Regi—Galfridus de Sancto Martino i mil.—Willelmus de Maucouple i mil.—Richardus de Perrecort i mil.—Gaufridus de Augo i mil., and below Godefridus de Gamages dim. mil. Regi—Robertus de Pissiaco i mil. Regi de terra de Mouflaines et de Hacquevilla—feodum de Alisio prope Pontem Archæ i mil. Regi. Evan de Brac, lord of St. Saens, was apparently one of the Gascon mercenaries of King John, who had rendered some efficient service, for which he had of the royal bounty this fief for his maintenance. By Letters Patent, dated at La Suze 9 Sept. 1202, addressed to Daminus de Braburgo and to Ivo de Brac and to Walter Le Loup, that monarch bade them know that He had appointed Brice the Chamberlain His Seneschal of Anjou, who by reason thereof not being able to attend to the guard of the castle of Tillières, He the King had committed it to the custody of Roger de Montbegon; and to him the persons addressed were to deliver it with the stores and other things, as the same Brice had had it. There is also a letter of the King to Ralph Tesson, Seneschal of Normandy, dated at Rouen 26 May 1203, to deliver to Yvain de Bracle a knight called Bernard Beulemedle, and in the year 1207 he was in the receipt of a fee of 20 marks ad marcam Flandrensem at the English Exchequer. Auvere Bardof rendered accompt of 40s. for five bezants for having right versus Hais, mother of Guifard, of the tenement of the kitchen of the abbot of Jumiéges (which sum was in the Treasury), and Philip de Colombiers of 37 li. 7s. 3d. of the old ferm of the forest of Roumare, of which he had acquittance, where accompt is again rendered below. He also owed 85½ swine of the nine sties of the forest of Roumare of the past year, and 14 li. 15s. 6d. of the view of the forest of Roumare. Robert de Vieuxpont rendered accompt through the same parties as above of his receipts from the escheats of the Bailiwick of the Roumois in the eight months of his term of office, viz. from the chattels of certain felons, and 60 li. of the issue of the land of Guérin de Glapion at Belbeuf; the sum, 77 li. 15s., covered the surplus of his accompt above written and left him indebted for the balance. He also rendered accompt through the same of 2 li. 4s., for 18 muids of oats from a certain portion of the bernage of Pavilly and of Escures of the year to come, and of 50 li. which he had received from Lucas Fitz John of his fine for having the purprestures of La Vaupalière, which had been seized into the King's hands; but the sum of 80 li. disbursed by him for the expense of the Queen, wife of the King, during her sojourn at Rouen, caused a surplus in his favour of 27 li. 6s., which in his accompt next following is deducted from the balance owing above, leaving only a debt of 8 li. 8s. 10d. due from him at the Exchequer.

The accompts of Philip de Colombières of the ferm and issues of the forest of Roumare in this year were rendered through Henry de Pont-Audemer, and accord with his accompts in 1198, save that the number of porcarie had been increased from eight to nine and a half, upon which tythe was paid in proportion.

Peter de Stokes rendered accompt through Fulk Hasle and Matthew le Clerc of 27 li. 3s. of the ferm of the Vicomté of Conteville and of the demesnes of Boulleville; to Thierry le Tiois, lying sick at Pont-Audemer, 10 li. had been paid and the remainder continued owing. He also rendered accompt through the same of 14 li. 14s. this year for 42 setiers of oats of the bernage of the Vicomté of Sanctæ Mariæ Ecclesia, the setier for 7s.; in the Treasury were 4s., and he owed 14 li. 10s. besides 10s. which the fleta of Rileclif was worth yearly. The grant of the manor of Conteville to Girard de Fornival has been already noticed, and a memorandum to that effect is inserted on the Roll. Among the debtors to the crown in this Bailiwick we may notice, in addition to those already occurring in the reign of Richard I., the heir of Sanson Marmite in 35s. of the residue of the fief of half a knight of the ost of Normandy of the year past—Robert d'Apperville 14 li. 10s. 4d. of the residue of his receipts from the Knight's fees of the Honour of Vatteville and 250 marks for having the goodwill of the King and his confirmation of the charter of King Richard, so nevertheless as that he render accompt of 3000 li. of his receipts—Ralph de Ardena 30 li., which he took in the manor of the Bishop of Dol, whilst it was in the King's hand—Nicholas de Tocqueville 150 li. sterling for having the King's peace toward himself and his father, and for having his lands and his chattels in Normandy—Walter de Ely 27 li. 3s. of the ferm of the Vicomté of Conteville and the demesnes of Boulleville of the fifth year past (1199) and 42 setiers of oats of the bernage of the Vicomté of Sanctæ Mariæ Ecclesia of the same year, and 5 li. which he received of Robert Le Bigot of his fine, and 25 li. which he received of Philip Mimecan toward the works of Vaudreuil, and 8 marks which he received of the abbot of Grestain of his fine—Philip Mimecan 12 li. 10s. of the residue of the chattels of William Ibert and Robert his brother, because it was found by inquest that he had them, and 3 li. 19s. of the residue of his receipts—the Comte of Meulan 20 li. of the loan of Poitou—Girard de Fornival 5 li. for pledging of the charter of the monks of Canterbury—William de Mara 3 li. 10s. of half a knight's fee of the ost of Normandy of the year past, and Richard Fitz Landry 257 marks 11s. 2½ sterling of the residue of his fine. John de Lisanet, Bishop of Dol, had died 28 Jan. 1199, at which date Ralph de Ardena was Bailiff of Pont Audemer, and so continued up to the accession of King John, when he was succeeded by Walter de Ely; as usual upon the vacancy of a see, the manor of the Bishop at St. Samson-sur-Rîle had come into the King's hands, until the appointment of a successor. On the Roll of the fifth year of King John four several charters, bearing date at Orival 15 Jan. 1203, in favour of the monks of St. Augustin of Canterbury are transcribed, to all of which Girard de Furnival was a witness; and it would seem from the present entry that he was also selected to be their bondsman for the fees due from them at the Norman Exchequer. Peter de Stokes rendered accompt of the amercements of Quillebeuf for infractions of the assize of wine, of which the sum, 38 li., had been pardoned to the inhabitants by the King's writ, and, on the back of this membrane, of the amercements set in the vill of Pont-Audemer for the like, amounting to the sum of 137 li. 15s., which the King had equally remitted to the Comte of Meulan, the lord of the place. In a second list of debtors, following the above accompt, we have Gerard de Furnival 17 li. 4s., which he had received from John de Préaux of fouage—Hugh de Nevill, le Gros, one palfrey, for which he was mainpernor of Geoffrey Landry—Roger Le Roi and Wimare his wife the fourth part of 73 li. 13s. which Gillebert Malésmains owed to them, that the same Gillebert might be arraigned to restore to them the aforesaid monies, but henceforth this debt was to be required in the Bailiwick of La Londe—William Ferrant 300 li. of his fine for trespass in the forest, and the heir of Robert du Thiel 30 li. which the King lent to the same Robert in Gascony. Below, Peter de Stokes rendered accompt of 5 li. of Ralph de Manneville of a knight's fee of the Honour of Montfort of this last ost of of Normandy—of 5 li. of Henry de Malloc for the same—of 25s. of Walter de la Rivière for the same of the fourth part of one knight's fee—of 50s. of Henry du Pin of the half of a knight's fee for the same—of 25s. of Richard Fitz Landry of the fourth part of a knight's fee for the same—of 33s. 4d. of Amaury d'Epinaï of the third part of a knight's fee for the same—and of 33s. 4d. of Roger de Torville of the third part of a knight's fee for the same—in all of 18 li. 6s. 8d., which sum the same knights had remitted to them because they did the service. The Bailiff of Pont-Audemer also rendered accompt of his receipt from the fiefs of the knights of the Honour of Montfort of this last ost of Normandy, viz. from Oliver d'Aubigny 8 li. 6s. 8d. of the fief of one knight and of two parts of a knight's fee—from John de Gerponville 5 li. of the fief of one knight—from the fief of Ecaquelon 5 li.—from Richard de Lamberville 5 li. of the fief of one knight—from Hugh de Tocqueville 50s. of half a knight's fee—from William Formentin 50s. for the like—of the fief of Eschoeis 50s. for the like—from Guerold de Vattetôt 50s. for the like—from Ralph Fitz Alan 25s. of the fourth part of a knight's fee—from the fief of Apetuit 16s. 8d. of the sixth part of a knight's fee—from Waleran de Ponthieu 33s. 4d. of the third part of a knight's fee—from Geoffrey de Campagny 25s. of the fourth part of a knight's fee—from Oliver de Campigny 16s. 8d. of the sixth part of a knight's fee—and from Robert Le Bigot 33s. 4d. of the third part of a knight's fee—in all 43 li. 6s. 8d. ; which sum, deducting 5s. in the Treasury, Peter de Stokes yet owed.

The abbot of Fécamp rendered accompt of 100 li. of the ferm of the Vicomté of Fécamp, as in former years ; which sum, save 10 li. for tythe to the Treasurer, had been by him paid to Esturgion, a Flemish knight, under the King's writ,^s and he was quit.

William de Mortemer rendered accompt through Henry Le Clerc de Bellemare of 30 li. of the ferm of the Vicomté of Entre-Rîle-et-Seine ; out of which, in addition to he tythe appertaining to the Treasurer, and 3 li. 14s. for the execution of justice, he had paid 30s. for the carriage of stakes from Hauville to Caen by the King's writ, whilst of the residue owing he rendered accompt below. He also owed 16 li. 11s. 11d. as the balance of his accompt of the fixed issues of his Bailiwick, and eighty swine from the eight sties of Barneville in the forest of Essarts, and thirty-five muids of oats of the rent of the same forest, for which his accompt embraced the term of two years; but of these rents in kind there are other accompts below. Nicholas de la Londe rendered accompt of 14 li. 12s. 4d. of the residue of the old ferm of the Vicomté, and of 31 li. 10s. of the residue of the oats from the forest of Essarts, which sums had been received of him by the Bailiff, and he was quit. William de Mortemer was also at this date Bailiff of Caux and one of the constables of the castle of Arques, for by his Letters Patent dated at Herbertot 28 Dec. 1202, and addressed to the bailiffs of William Le Mareschal, King John bade them know of his having delivered the castle into the custody of William de Mortemer and William Martell, to whom they were to yield it up upon sight of the said Letters without delay; and by other Letters of the same date the Bailiwick of Arques was confided to William Martell and that of Caux to William de Mortemer. The latter was brother of Henry de Mortemer, and both were tenants of the Honour of Montfort, of which William held the fief of one knight and Henry a fourth part; a writ to the Bailiff of John de Préaux of Montfort, teste'd at Pont de l'Arche 12 May 1202, commands him to cause William de Mortemer to have the land of his brother Henry in the Bailiwick of Montfort, as fully as the said Henry had it at the time when the King took it from him. Adhering to the party who withdrew their allegiance from King John, William de Mortemer was one of those whose seal was attached to a copy of the articles of the truce between the Kings of France and England in the month of November, subsequent to the battle of Bouvines, where he was present among the Knights of Normandy bearing banners; and by Letters Patent, dated at Christchurch 31 Jan. 1215, King John granted to him a safe conduct to come to England on pilgrimage to St. Edmund and to St. Thomas. Among the debtors, accomptants in this Bailiwick, we have Nicholas de la Londe of 44 li. 20d. which he had received of Geoffrey le Cangeor of the tallage set in the Bailiwick of La Londe to maintain servientes in the March, and of 7 li. 2s. 6d of the residue of his accompt of the sties of Barneville, and of 15 li. 5s. of the view of the forest of La Londe of the third year past; which sums, save 5 li. in wages to the viewers of the forest, were in the receipt of William de Mortemer and he was quit. Geoffrey Fitz Landry rendered accompt of 18 li. for having the King's confirmation of thirty acres of land in the forest of Beaulieu, as did others of divers sums had from the sale of the wood of Bourg-Achard; whilst William de Mortemer himself rendered accompt of the view of the forest of La Londe in the current year, and of his receipts and debts above written. The sum, after deduction of 4 li. 12s. in wages of the viewers, was 250 li. 4s., allowed to him in abatement of the surplus on his accompt of the Bailiwick of Caux, amounting to 3249 li. 4s. 3d.; hence he was quit and had 2999 li. 0s. 3d. as his surplus yet due. Among those making no payment Peter de Stokes owed 7 li. 10s. of the residue of the ferm of the Vicomté of Entre-Rîle-et-Seine of the year past—Robert d'Harcourt 5 li. of the fief of one knight of the aide de l'ost of Poitou, which Richard de Bosrenoult and Richard de Berville hold—Robert d'Appeville 7 li. 2s. 6d. of the residue of his accompt of the sties of Barneville—the heir of William de Meulles 35s. of the fourth part of one knight's fee of the aide de Post of Normandy of the year past—the heir of Robert Doissel 35s. for the like—the heir of William des Haies 35s. for the like—Robert d'Harcourt 7 li. of the fief of one knight for the like—and Jordan de Cantelou one palfrey to have annually a fair of two days at Amfreville. Lastly, William de Mortemer rendered accompt of eighty swine from the eight sties of Barneville of the forest of Essarts, and from this number the abatements correspond with the return in 1180 in regard of tythe, fixed alms and liveries; the remaining 57 swine the Bailiff continued to owe.

Computum Roberti de Veteriponte de Receptis suis.

Robert de Vieuxpont rendered accompt, through William Quarrel and John the Queen's chaplain, of 9 muids 1 quarter and a half of wheat, which he had received of the chattels of William Poignard at Bretteville and Verson according to the measure of the same vills, and of 8 muids 4 setiers of wheat at Langrune according to the measure of the same vill, and of 8 muids 9 setiers 3 quarters of barley and 2 muids 10 setiers of oats at Bretteville and Verson according to the measure of the same vills, and of 10 boisseaux of lentils, 2 boisseaux of beans and 3 quarters of tares at the same vills according to the measure of Caen, and of 2 muids 2 setiers of barley of the chattels of the same William at Langrune according to the measure of the same vill, and of 1 muid 10 setiers of barley, which he had received of the chattels of John Le Roux at Courseulles, according to the measure of Courseulles; in all of 17 muids 4 setiers 1 quarter and a half of wheat, of 2 muids 10 setiers of oats, of 12 muids 10 setiers 3 quarters of barley, 10 boisseaux of lentils, 2 boisseaux of beans and 3 quarters of tares; in the Treasury nothing—in expense of the Queen, wife of the King, sojourning at Caen, to make bread 3 muids 7 setiers of wheat by the King's writ, and he owed for the quantity remaining, which was worth 193 li. 14s. 9d. The writ here referred to was dated at Trianon in November 1203, and is transcribed on the Rolls of Normandy; it was addressed to the Seneschal of Normandy and the Barons of the Exchequer, who are directed to reckon to Robert de Vieuxpont in his accompt the above quantity according to the measure of Langrune, which he had used for making bread for the Queen "Our wife and her household." Below, Robert de Vieuxpont rendered accompt of the debt above-written, and of 3 li. 6s. 1d. which he had received of the rents of William Poignard at Bretteville, of 20s. received from the oven of the same vill, of 56s. from the rents and straw, and of 11s. 1d. from the straw and chaff of the same vill—of 6 li. received from the sale of a windmill at Langrune of the same William,—of 40s. from a horse of the same William sold—of 13s. from the sale of the swine of the same William—of 21s. of the aide of the same William at Langrune—of 31s. 6d. of the timber taken in the house of the same William at Caen—26s. of the sale of the casks, 36s. 8d. of the sale of the wool, and 30s. of the sale of two cows of the same William, in all of 217 li. 16s. 1d. His disbursements were in the expense of the Queen, wife of the King, sojourning at Bonneville 100 li.—again in the expense of the same Queen sojourning at Caen 80 li.—for the hire of a certain vessel to carry the daughter of the King and the equipage of the King to England 18 li. 13s. 3d.—to William Engeleir and twelve carpenters of the King 23 li. 3s. 8d., and to the same William, to defray the purchase of two cords for the use of the King at Dol, 37s. 4d. leaving a surplus of 16 li. 8s. 3d., in abatement of which 10 li. were reckoned to him below in his accompt of his receipt from the sale of the hay of William Poignard. Robert de Vieuxpont next rendered accompt of 511 li. of Tallage set in the Bailiwick of Caen toward sending servientes to the siege of Alençon, of which sum he had 6 li. 8s. 3d. to cover his remaining surplus, whilst through the King's writ the Constable of Normandy had 10 li., which the Bailiff had taken from the men of his land of the same Tallage, and the Earl of Arondel 6 li., which had been also taken of the men of his land for the same Tallage; ^h to the King in his Chamber 400 li. had been paid, and 100 li. to two knights of Catalonia, being again a surplus of 11 li. 8s. 3d. over the receipt. Below, he rendered accompt of 100 li. received of John le Roux of his amercement, and of 8 li. received from the parish of Langrune, and 2 li. from the parish of Cussy for servientes withheld; to the King in his Chamber a second payment of 100 li. had been made, and the remaining 10 li. went in abatement of his surplus, which in the next accompt was wholly covered by the sum of 53 li. 8s., which he had received of the chattels of Simon d'Escures. Under the King's writ he had paid 7 li. for the hire of a certain vessel for the transport of the Queen's equipage to England, and 75 li. to Vitalis Curtal, Burgess of Gazo de Biards, for 10 casks of wine; whereby he had anew a surplus of 30 li. 3d., from which the only abatement was of 7 li. 4s., for a muid of wheat of the chattels of William Poignard seized at Moulineaux. His only other accompt was of thirty-five bacones and six casks of wine, which he had received in store of the castle of Caen, and which having been wholly consumed during the stay of the King and Queen at Caen, he was quit. King John landed at Portsmouth on the 6th of December 1203, and during the year the court had at times been resident at Caen and Bonneville-sur-Touques; but it is probable that the consumption of victuals here denoted was on occasion of the celebration of the preceding feast of Christmas by the King at Caen, ubi cum regina epulabatur quotidie splendide. Johanna, eldest daughter of King John and Isabella, was the only issue of their marriage at this date, and will have been born in the course of this fiscal year, in as much as she was in her tenth year, when, pursuant to the convention between her father and Hugh Comte of La Marche and Ralph Comte of Eu, and Geoffrey de Lusignan, in May 1214, she was sent for from England and brought to Poitou to be betrothed to Hugh de Lusignan, eldest son of the Comte of La Marche, to whose custody and to that of his father she was committed. The latter withdrew into a monastery, and she was yet remaining in the custody of the son, then Comte of La Marche, without having consummated marriage, in May 1220, when he became the husband of her mother, Queen Isabella, to whom he had been first affianced, prior to the marriage, with King John. Johanna, thus abandoned, was claimed by her brother King Henry III. and after some delay given up by the Comte of La Marche and brought back to England, where in the following year she married Alexander II., King of the Scots, but died issueless in his lifetime. The siege of Alençon is noticed by William Le Breton, the biographer of Philip Augustus, who relates how that monarch upon intelligence of the proceeding collected together an army made up of the knights and their attendants, who had assembled for a tournament at Moret, with which he hastened to deliver the besieged, and how King John retreating with his army from the siege, with loss of his warlike engines, tents, and baggage, saved himself by flight. We have, however, writs, which bear date at Alençon from the 13th to the 15th of August in this year, entered upon the Rolls of Normandy, whence it would seem that King John was then in possession of the town, and it may be that the castle of the rebel Comte of Sées alone resisted his arms, and was thus unsuccessfully besieged. In September King John was at Dol in Brittany for four days, but no details of his proceedings are on record. At foot of this membrane we read, "William Poignard gives to the Lord the King 2000 li., money of Anjou, for having the grace of the Lord the King, and thereof he renders at present 100 li. so that in them shall be reckoned to him what Robert de Vieuxpont took of the chattels of him the said William, and he will render the other 1000 li. at the fit terms, which the Seneschal of Normandy shall appoint him, the same William." Accordingly, Letters Patent, addressed to the Seneschal of Normandy and to all his Bailiffs and liegemen, and dated at Cherbourg 4th Dec. 1203, were issued by King John certifying his acceptance of the above proffer, and the same are enrolled. By other letters of the same date He granted to William Le Gros, Seneschal of Normandy, 500 li. money of Anjou, to be annually received at the Exchequer at Caen in moieties at Easter and Michaelmas as long as he should be Seneschal, unless in the meanwhile the King should make provision for some one of his sons in marriage, whereby the said Seneschal ought to hold himself indemnified.ⁱ Contemporary with the predecessors of King John were William and Fulk de Vieuxpont, of whom the former in 1198 rendered accompt in the Bailiwick of Auge of 2 marks, 8s. 4d. sterling, as mainpernor of Richard d'Argences, and made payment of part of the debt at the Exchequer, whilst of the residue of his knight's fees he is there put down as owing 11 li. 8s.; entries, which necessarily fix the locality of his fiefs to Vieuxpont en-Auge. Of the latter we have an accompt in the same year in the Bailiwick of Falaise of 30 li., as mainpernor of the Constable of Normandy, of which he then paid in a moiety; and other entries as

ⁱ The date of the appointment of William Le Gros to the office of Seneschal of Normandy was immediately subsequent to the siege of Alençon, when King John, was at Chambrais; *Rex &c. omnibus &c. Sciatis quod fecimus Willelmum Grossum Senescallum nostrum Normanniæ quamdiu nobis placuerit, unde vobis mandamus quod ei tamquam senescallo nostro sitis intendentes in omnibus. T. G. to his being indebted for two casks full of wine of the chattels of Robert Paynell, and in 2 li. of the residue of the money which the Seneschal had lent him, and in 16 li. of the residue of his knight's fees. In the same year the land of Robert de Vieuxpont at Chailloué was in the custody of the King's officer, and another Robert de Vieuxpont rendered accompt of 15 marks for Lucas Fitz John de plegio Ricardi Landri. In the fourth year of the reign of King John Ralph Tesson, Seneschal of Normandy, was commanded by writ, dated at Aurival 15 Jun. 1202, to cause William de Vieuxpont to have the land which had belonged to Robert de Vieuxpont his brother in Normandy, during the King's pleasure; and by a second writ, at Bonport 13 Jul. following, to cause the same William to have such seisin of the land of his said brother at Vieuxpont, as the same Robert thereof had, when he went into France after this war, on condition that he stand to the right thereof in the King's court, if any one should be willing to lay claim against him on this behalf. In the same year Robert de Vieuxpont, Lord of Courville, conceded to the abbey of St. Péré at Chartres his rights in the voierie at Mittainvillier, and delivered in confirmation of his grant a deed sealed with his seal, on which was a shield charged with six annulets. In England a William de Vieuxpont was lord of the vill of Hardinstone com. North^a, in 1199, and as such was impleaded by Emma, widow of John Fitz Dor, for her dower of the tenement of her husband, when, the defendant not appearing to answer, the land in question was at first seized into the King's hands, and afterward, from there being no reclaim in right time, its possession awarded to the plaintiff; also of the grant of William, King of Scotland, a William de Vieuxpont, held Alston and other lands in Tyndale in Cumberland. Robert de Vieuxpont, Lord of Westmoreland, by his deed, dated at Cliburn in Westmoreland, on Saturday 24 Apr. 11 Joh. 1210, granted and confirmed to the abbey of Shapp the whole vill of Renegill with all its appurtenances sicut etiam carta Matildis, matris meæ, et confirmatio Ivonis, fratris mei, quas inde habent, melius testantur; and on the Charter Rolls, 2 Joh. 1201, it is noted that the mother of Robert de Vieuxpont has Letters Patent of the Lord the King of protection, as long as the said Robert shall be in the service of the Lord the King. On record is also a charter of King John, given by the hand of Richard de Marisco at Bristol, 17 May 1209, whereby he confirmed to Ivo de Vieuxpont the grant, which the Lord William, King of Scotland, had made to him and confirmed by his charter, of the lands which William de Vieuxpont, father of the said Ivo, held in Tyndale, viz. Elrington, Aldston, and Kirkhale, with their appurtenances, to hold to him and his heirs of the said king, and his heirs, by the service of one knight. Upon the Rolls of Normandy are also two writs, one attested by Peter de Préaux at Falaise, 6 May, 1203, and addressed to John le Marechal requiring him to cause Robert de Vieuxpont to have the land, which had belonged to Robert de Vieuxpont deceased, namely, the vill of Vieuxpont with its appurtenances; and another, dated at Bur-le-roi 15 Oct. following, addressed to the Seneschal of Normandy and the barons of the Exchequer, by which the King certifies that he had received in his Chamber at Chambrais on Tuesday after the Assumption of the Virgin Mary (19 Aug.) by the hands of Ivo de Vieuxpont 300 marks, and 93 li. money of Anjou, and 5d. of the Tallage of the Bailiwick of Caen for sending servientes to the siege of Alençon, which was of the receipt of Robert de Vieuxpont, and directs his acquittance thereof at the Exchequer. We have also a writ to the Barons of the Exchequer, dated at Morfarville 27 Nov. 1203, bidding them know that the abbot of St. Pierre-sur-Dive had paid to the King in his Chamber 100 li. money of Anjou, which he owed for licence of agreeing with Robert de Vieuxpont, with orders to them to acquit him of the same. This abbey was in the vicinity of Vieuxpont-en-Auge, and of the gift of a former Robert de Vieuxpont, in the time of William the Conqueror, had been endowed with the patronage of the church of Vieuxpont as to one portion and with certain lands; hence this concord is a proof of that vill being in the hands of a Robert de Vieuxpont at the date of the accompt. In the Archives of Calvados is a charter without date, with seal attached, of which Mons^r d'Anisy has given this analysis:—"Marie, dame de Cuverville, widow of Robert de Vieuxpont, confirms the grant of the domain of Castillon, made to the poor of the Maison-Dieu of Lisieux by Robert, son of Richard de Lamberville, who held this domain by subinfeudation of her son, Ivon de Vieuxpont, for payment of a pound of pepper of annual rent," but the legend round the seal, on which is a female figure erect, with falcon on her left arm, reads Sigillum Mathildis, Domine de Cuverville; on the reverse is a shield charged with thirteen annulets, 4, 4, 3, 2, without legend. Another charter has the date December 1227, and is of Ives de Vieux-Pont, seigneur de Cuverville, in confirmation of the grant of 25 acres of land, as well as of the patronage of the church of St. Cyrille of Courbesarte made to the same hospital by William de Corbesarte, which were dependancies of his domain; on the seal, a knight mounted and armed, his shield charged with nine annulets, 3, 3, 2 and 1, legend S. Ivonis de Veteri Ponte, and a like shield and legend upon the reverse. Both Catillon and Corbesarte are immediately adjacent to Vieuxpont-en-Auge, in the doyenné of Le Mesnil, originally parcel of the comté of the Oximin, between the rivers Vie and Dive, and from the armorial bearings we may infer Cuverville, as here written, to have been identical with Courville in France, of which Ives de Vieuxpont was lord in 1233, in as much as his descendants bore d'argent à 10 annelets de gueules. Marie, or Mathildis, dame de Courville, was apparently living in 1220, the mother of children not yet of age, heirs of the fief of Vieuxpont-en-Auge, then in her custody; in the Register of the fiefs held in capite of the Duchy of Normandy in that year, in the Bailiwick of Peter de Tilly, which comprised the comté of the Oximin, this entry refers to her tenure, non fuit qui responderet de feodo Veteris Pontis, quia domina, que custodit pueros, manet in Francia; postea domina cognovit per litteras suas quod tenet per servicium duorum militum honorem Veterispontis d'no Regi. From William de Vieuxpont the manor of Hardingstone had meanwhile passed into the hands of Ivo de Vieuxpont, who in 1217 was with the King's enemies; wherefore the sheriff of Northamptonshire was commanded by writ dated 12 March, in that year, to cause Robert de Vieuxpont to have full seisin of this manor, which had belonged to his brother. By Idonea, daughter and heir of John de Builly, to whom he was already married in the reign of Richard I., Robert de Vieuxpont, Lord of Westmoreland, Bailiff of Caen and of the Roumois in this fiscal year, left issue a son John de Vipont, whose coat of arms, in a Roll compiled 1240-5, is emblazoned de goules a six faux roundelelets d'or, a bearing which is corroborative of his affinity to the house of Courville, and of a common descent from the lords of Vieuxpont-en-Auge.

ADDENDA.

Page xxvii, note f. In the note at the foot of this page Richard de Rethvers has been inadvertently designated son of Comte Gislebert of Brionne, a parentage alone descriptive of Richard de Bienfaite, the progenitor of the family of Clare; nor has Dugdale in his Baronage been more correct in making him the grandson of the same Comte through a false identification with Richard, son of Baldwin de Meulles. The earliest notice of the family, which had its local surname from the vill of Réviers, Rethvers, Redvers, Reverie, Riverie, situate in the Bessin between the rivers Seule and Mue near their confluence, is contained in the Cartulaire de l'abbaye de Saint-Père de Chartres, (published in 1840 under the auspices of the French government and edited by M. Guérard,) and has reference to the grant of a third part of Gourbesville in the Côtentin to that monastery. Under the heading De terra Gausberti Ville we there read as follows, "In the name of the Holy and Undivided Trinity. We wish to make known to all the faithful of Christ, as well present as to come, I, Landricus, by the grace of God abbot, and all the convent of the monks of the monastery of St. Peter at Chartres, in what manner the land has been given to Our house, which We are seen to possess in Gourbesville, by a certain knight and of illustrious race, by name Richard; as also in what manner the same was granted by the most noble Comte of Normandy, William, as well as by the brothers of the aforesaid knight, William, to wit, and Baldwin. In the year therefore in which the intestine war is known to have been terminated, which had long continued between King Henry and Comte William, the aforesaid knight, Richard, had been sent to the castle of Thimert with a view to its custody; which castle with its inhabitants was then under anathema. Who, whilst he was there, having been attacked by the malady of the body, of which he also died, and having care and fear for the loss of his soul, a certain Nigel being called to him, who had his sister in marriage, as well as other friends, he begged that a certain monk of Our's, Geoffrey, who then chanced to be there, might run to the bishop of the city, and that, as well he as the others, might cause him to be absolved, and carry him to the monastery for interment; upon this understanding that from that day for ever the monks of Our house should possess the third part of Gourbesville, except the knights, namely, whatever he possessed in houses, in lands, in meadows, in waters, in the church, in cattle. The absolution having been thereupon obtained, and the body buried among the nobles of the city, We made his name of commemoration, and shall commemorate it every day with the rest by whose benefactions Our life is supported. Moreover the glorious Comte, frequently named, William, for the reward of heavenly life gave his sanction to this gift in the vill, which is commonly called Cour-Demanche, not far from the castle of Dreux, before his nobles, whose names are these; William Fitz-Osbert, Walter Gifard, Fulk d'Aunou, Hubert de Rie, Robert Bertran, William Marmio, Rainald Darsel, Ralph Falchemand, Hunfrey, Turolde, William Fitz-Corbucion, Bencelin de Scolt, Raher and William de Vernon, Hugh Fitz-Gereau. And the brothers of the deceased gave their sanction before all those named above, William, namely, and Balduin, in order that they also might merit to be sharers with their brother in the recompence. Of Ours were present, Bernard Fitz-Wulmar, Warin, cook, Walter, mayor, Oydelarius, constable. If any one shall choose to gainsay this charter let him be struck with the everlasting sword of anathema, and, frustrated of his wish, let him pay three pounds of gold to the judge. This donation was conceded and ratified on the day before the Nones of August, on the day on which Henry, King of France, was deceased, and written by Paul the monk." This monarch died 4 Aug. 1060, the date therefore of the charter, and from this time the Abbot of St. P  re de Chartres was patron of the church of Gourbesville for the third part so given, though the same was for a time usurped by a descendant of the donor, of the family of R  viers, as may be collected from another document in the Chartulary. "Wherefore let the record of this present writing set forth to those present and to come what agreement has been made between Us, monks of St. Peter, and Richard de R  viers, who slew Our monk, Giralde. For, indeed, the same knight went unto the lord Udo, Our abbot, who had gone into those parts for the necessity of his affairs, begging mercy and pardon for the slaying of the same monk. But he the same knight, in recompence and in confirmation of this peace, granted to Us for ever four acres of land in places marked out near Our land, and four quarters of wheat in alms

each year. But the land, which We have claimed against him, and the third part of the church of Gourbesville with the tythes, to remain under claim, until upon Our motion plea therein be moved, and whose the property ought to be justice in peace to determine. This agreement was come to before the lord Bishop, Algar of Coutances, who was there present with the abbot, who also by his assent approved of and confirmed this peace. These are the witnesses of this act, Peter abbot (of Montebourg), Ralph Sapiens, Hugh Bajulus, Peter Parmer, Roger de Lucre, Richard de Ham, Mascelin, cook, Hugo Polleve, Garin marescal, Theobald, Ranulph, Alcher, William Avenel, Oliver, his son, Ralph de Eroudeville, Geoffrey de Hainou, William Mansel, Richard de Ussi, Peter de Curvilla, Robert de Valognes, Richard Faucheman, Geoffrey de Grinvilla, priest, Geoffrey, priest of Gourbesville, Geoffrey, priest of Orglandes." Algar first occurs as the occupant of the see of Coutances 2 Mar. 1132, and died in the same year as Udo, abbot of St. Pére de Chartres, who was deceased Oct. 1150, thus fixing the date of this instrument to the intervening period. Richard de Réviers was son of William de Réviers, and both father and son are named among the barons of William de Vernon, who attested his charter to the abbey of Montebourg, confirming the previous gift of his father, Richard de Réviers, to that religious house for all the land, which his barons should give in alms to the said abbey, to be free and quit, Richard de Ussi mentioned above being again a witness." The charter of his father, containing this gift, has been preserved, and was to this effect, "In the name of the Holy and Undivided Trinity. I, Richard de Redvers, seeing every thing, save what is done for the sake of God, to be perishable and subject to vanity and able to be of no assistance to the soul after death, give and grant to the abbey of St. Mary of Montebourg and to the monks there serving God a certain manor in Dorsetshire, which is called Lodris, and another in Devonshire named Auxemuda, and a third in the isle of Wight, Sanfort by name, and these free and quit from all claims, pleas and disquietudes and aids, except in regard of the suzerainty, which belongs to me, with all the customs and privileges with which my lord King Henry gave them to me; what he retained to himself in them, in like manner I retain to myself in them, save warranty; which truly I do for the redemption of my soul and of my father and mother and of my sons and of all my ancestors and successors. I give also with the aforesaid manors to hold in perpetual alms to the said church the gifts of my barons in lands free and quit, and the tythe of the mills of Réviers and of the mill of Gonneville and of the mills of Farmanbruil and of Tourlaville and of Bevrant. And that this gift may be for ever ratified and unimpeached I confirm it by the sign of the Holy Cross under the testimony of the witnesses present." Below in the chartulary Ricardi de Revers + signum is followed by these names, Richard de Morville, Roger de Magneville and Walter de Ham. The monastery of Montebourg had been built by Roger, a monk of St. Croix-St.-Leuffroi, in the demesne of the Duke of Normandy, and Henry, King of the English, gave this abbey to Richard de Réviers, that he might guard and improve it as if it were his own, and which he took care to do. Prior to this concession Richard de Réviers by the advice of the same King Henry and by the counsel of Ralph, Bishop of Coutances, had established in the castle of Néhou (Nigellihumus) a church in honour of the Holy Virgin Mary, in which he placed canons, over whom he appointed Richard, priest of St. Georges, as dean, and there constituted him a canon, granting to the church in perpetual alms all whatsoever he held in lands and in churches and in every thing belonging to the churches of the aforesaid clerk, namely, in sheaves and fisheries, and he gave him the site of a certain dwelling in the castle aforesaid in alms and 20s. in England toward the supply of necessities. Like provision was made for three other canons out of rents in England, which amounted to 4 li. sterling, and of these 60s. were in Tiverton, and 20s. in Thorley. William de Réviers also, after he had made peace with the founder, gave to the same church in the vill of Néhou the messuage of Anfrid son of Briard, and this messuage Richard de Réviers granted as a prebend to Richard, son of Baldwin, and customs the same as to the other canons. At foot is the cross of Ralph, Bishop of Coutances, that of Richard de Revers, and those of Richard de Moreville and of Roger and Geoffrey de Manneville. Mention is also made in the same act of endowment of the tythes of the forests and of the mills of the old Honour of Néhou and of certain mansuræ in the manor of Ste-Mère-église. This expression is indicative of some change, and probably alludes to an agreement with William de Réviers, whereby enfeoffment had been made of the forest of Modroold and the service of two knights and a half in his favour; hence it would seem that he was akin to Richard de Réviers, and probably each was the representative of one of the brothers, William or Baldwin, living in 1060, and heirs to their brother Richard. In the chartulary of the monastery of the Holy Trinity on the Mont de Rouen record is made of the gift of Richard de Réviers to the same of the church and tythe of the vill of Opinées, for which he nevertheless received 15 li. of deniers from Abbot Walter and his brethren; below the memorial signum Ricardi de Rethvers is written, and those of Girard de Gornai and of Hugh de Belbœuf follow, as also the names of the witnesses on the part of the monks. In Domesday Book among the Francigenæ in Dorsetshire Ricardus de Redvers is put down as holding the single manor of Mosterton, in the Hundred of Beaminster, nor does his name occur elsewhere. Adeliza, wife of Richard de Réviers, was a daughter of William Peverel of Nottingham, who gave with her in marriage the manor of Olvelei, com. Berks; which in the Domesday Book is surveyed as the land of her father, wherefore it may be assumed that their union was subsequent to its compilation. By Ordericus Vitalis, in treating of the events in Normandy of the year 1090 when prince Henry was in arms against his brothers, Hugh earl of Chester, and Richard de Redvers, de Radveris, and the other barons of the Côtentin, except Robert de Moubrai, are said to have held with him; and it was doubtless his support in this emergency which won for him the favour of the future sovereign. After his accession to the throne of England Ordericus again names Richard de Réviers among the strenuous and sagacious men King Henry admitted to his councils, and has also recorded his death in the course of the year 1107, at the same time noticing his burial at the monastery of Montebourg in Normandy, which he asserts to have been founded by him in his own property; that he ranked as founder is apparent from his name being yet to be traced on the covering stone of his tomb with the epithet fundator. His fidelity to Henry at the time of the return of Duke Robert from Palestine is also noted by William of Malmesbury, Richard de Retvers being one of the few nobles, he says, who alone supported the rightful cause. The historian of the foundation and founders of the abbey of Ford, a composition of late date, has also preserved some valuable notices respecting Richard de Réviers, though he is in error in making him Earl of the shire of Devon, an honour only conferred upon his son Baldwin de Réviers, and upon him not till the reign of King Stephen. He, however, correctly states that King Henry I. gave to his beloved and faithful Richard de Réviers, first Tiverton and afterward the Honour of Plimpton, with other places belonging to the same; and that ultimately he obtained from the same King a grant of the Isle of Wight. In the chartulary of the abbey of St. Etienne of Caen "Hugh de Redvers" is named among those who affirmed a charter of

Rainald d'Orval, made prior to A. D. 1093, but after the accession of Duke Robert, by which he gave to that monastery for 250 li. of current coin his share in the manor of Baupté; and in the chartulary of the sister abbey of the Holy Trinity at Caen, where enumeration is made of its losses in the time elapsed ex quo rex Willelmus finivit, we read Hugo de Redeveis aufert v modios vini et vineam quoque anno ad Vernun. Mention is also made of him in a charter of Henry I. in favour of the Canons of Brumore, of date subsequent to 17 Nov. 1129, whereby the King confirmed in the first place, to wit, all the grants which Baldwin de Réviers and Hugh, his uncle, had made to them in alms in the vill of Brumore and had by their writings confirmed. From his possessions at Vernon he was also, it seems, surnamed of that place, for a Hugh de Vernun was witness to a charter of Robert, Duke of the Normans and Comte of the Mançeaux, made in favour of the monastery constructed by his uncle Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, in the land of the church of St. Mary, A. D. 1089, in the second year of his rule; which charter was affirmed by his signature and ratified by his seal, whilst the said Duke Robert was at the siege of Eu, on the day that the said castle was surrendered to him. Adeliz, soror mea, is likewise named as having held Benoitville, conjointly with Richard de Ansgerville, in one of the charters of Richard de Réviers for Montebourg; but which vill he then gave in its entirety to the said monastery. Adeliz Pevrel, widow of Richard de Réviers, long survived him, and by the consent of her sons, Earl Baldwin and William de Vernon and Robert de Ste-Mère-église, and of her brother William Pevrel of Nottingham, and of her grandsons Richard de Réviers, Henry, and William, gave to the abbey of Montebourg for the redemption of her soul, and of her father William Pevrel and of her mother Adelina, of whose gift she had possession of it, and of her husband and of her sons, the manor called Oувelay (Woolley) free and quit with all its appurtenances. The witnesses of this donation were her sons, Earl Baldwin and William de Vernon, Stephen de Mandeville, William Le Moine, and William Avenel, in the chapter-house of Montebourg, in presence of Abbot Walter with the whole convent; and in the isle of Wight in Caresbroc these acknowledged themselves to be witnesses of the said almsgiving, Brien de l'Isle, Payn Trenchart, Geoffrey de l'Isle, Walter de Clamorgan, Richard d'Argentan and Salomon his son, Robert, chaplain, Richard Fitz-Nigel, William, chaplain, Richard d'Oувelai and Herbert d'Orglandes. In the chartulary is also copied a letter of Adeliz de Réviers to her venerable lord and most dear father Joscelin by the grace of God Bishop of Salisbury, praying him to confirm her grant and to protect the monks dwelling at the manor of Oувелai, situate in his diocese; which prelate was consecrated in 1142, and Earl Baldwin was deceased in 1155, thus limiting the date of this letter to the years intervening. William de Vernon had the entire succession of his father in Normandy, save the manor of Ste-Mère-église apportioned to his younger brother, and he held also the manor of Freshwater in the Isle of Wight; wherefore in the year 1131, when Payn Trenchard rendered accompt of the new Danegeld of the Isle, his quota, 32s., was remitted to William de Vernun by the King's writ. Solicitous for the salvation of his soul, this William de Vernon gave to S'te Marie de Montebourg and the monks there serving God in perpetual alms the church of S'te Marie of Néhou free and quit entirely, with all the prebends and rents in wood and in plain which belonged to it, "as the charter of his father Richard de Réviers testifies, and which for attestation thereof is inscribed above," so that the convent might be increased and strengthened of as many monks as, after the decease of the clerks, there might be room for at Néhou; and in like manner he added the church of Gonneville with all its appurtenances, and the gifts of his barons in every thing free and quit of all belonging to him. This donation he made and placed upon the altar of Blessed Mary on the same day on which the venerable father and lord, Hugh, Archbishop of Rouen, consecrated the aforesaid church of Montebourg and dedicated it, in the year of the Incarnation of the Lord, 1152, together with the venerable Richard, Bishop of Coutances, and Rotrou, Bishop of Evreux, being present Walter, abbot of the same house, with all the abbots and barons of the whole province; of the grant, with the prelates, were witnesses Richard de Hai, and Unfrid de Bohun. In a subsequent charter of confirmation to the same abbey by the Bishop of the diocese, Richard named above, made at Coutances in the year of the Lord 1157, on the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, the above-mentioned grant of the chapel of Blessed Mary of the castle of Néhou is rehearsed, as also the concession of William de Vernon of the chapel of St. Magloire in the island of Serc with the enclosure and all appurtenances, that of the same William and of Lucia his wife, and of William Earl of Arondel, of all belonging to their fief in the church of Notre Dame de Turqueville, and that of Richard de Vernon and of Lucia his mother, of a moiety of the church of St. Floxel and a moiety of the church of Siouville. Lucia, the wife of William de Vernon, was daughter of William de Tancarville, Chamberlain of King Henry I., and, with her brothers Rabel and Robert, is named in a charter of that monarch to the abbey of St. Georges de Boscherville as an assenting party to the gifts made by their father, when in the year 1114 he converted the collegiate church into a monastery, and at which time she was yet unmarried. Among these gifts were included in the Côtentin the church of St. Floxel entire, with every thing belonging to it and the tythe of the mills of Vaudiville and the tythe of the forest of Montebourg with all the rent; but not long after upon her marriage with William de Vernon, this fief of the Chamberlain in the Côtentin was transferred to his daughter, Lucia, who taking name from the caput or chief seat, entitles herself in one of her charters to the abbey of Montebourg, Lucia de S'c'o Floscello. For the salvation of her soul, and of her father and mother and of Baldwin, her son, she gave the fourth part of the church of Turqueville, which she had in her demesne of the fief of her father, and was deceased before 14 Jan. 1165-6; on which day William de Vernon and Richard de Vernon, his son, for the soul of Richard de Réviers and of Adeliz and of Lucia and of all ancestors and successors, granted to the abbey of Montebourg these alms, to wit, at Vernon all the tythe of their wine, except forth of their own enclosures, and a messuage at Gamilly, and the house of William Rossellus towards the bridge, and another house near the gate appendant to the wall, and the chapel of St. Michael with a daily rent of three deniers, and all the tythe of their nuts, and the house of Hubert du Mesnil-renard and his vineyard, which he planted near the enclosure of Vernonet. Singly Richard de Vernon confirmed the gifts of his mother for the soul of Baldwin, his brother, and gave, moreover, all the land which he and his mother had held in Barnavast. The charter thus dated was made and confirmed with the seals of the lord William de Vernon and of Richard his son, at Néhou, before these witnesses, Richard de Wauville junior, Henry de Barneville, Ralph de Gors, Walter Postel, Gerard de Faipou, Richard Hare, chaplain, Mag^r Roger Haretel, Walter Hopechim, Robert Galopin, Vivian nephew of Abbot Richard of Montebourg, and many others. Apparently William de Vernon, who must have been far advanced in years, had ceded to his son, prior to the date of this charter, his fief in Normandy; and in accordance with this supposition is the relation in the chronicle of Robert du Mont touching the events of the year 1152, where we read "that after the octave of Easter Louis, King of the French, with a great army, coming at an early hour in the morning from Mantes to Vernon, burnt the bourg situate beyond the walls, and the most rich vill and fertile in vineyards, which they call the Longueville; for Richard, son of William de Vernon, had excited his wrath, not fearing to plunder the merchants under the safe-conduct of the King." And again, "that about the end of the month of July in that year the same king, gathering a mighty army from his whole realm, besieged the castle of Vernon for well nigh fifteen days; and when no progress had been made after frequent assaults, nor from the aid of machines of various kinds, and the Comte of Flanders, in whose numerous bands the King chiefly confided, being desirous to take leave, lest the said King should depart ingloriously, if he were thus to win nothing, by secret conventions and promises he wrought with Richard de Vernon, that at least his standard should be raised on the tower, and the same tower committed to the custody of Goel son of Baldric, who in regard of his tenure was subject to both, viz. to the King and to Richard." Up to the month of August, A.D. 1154, the castle of Vernon was subject to the power of the King of France, when, together with Neuf-marché, it was restored to Henry, Duke of the Normans, under a convention by which the latter gave to the King 2000 marks of silver for compensation of the loss he had sustained in taking, fortifying and holding the said fortresses; and from this date it was again in the possession of the family of Vernon. In the time of Duke Robert, father of William the Conqueror, through the suggestion of Gradulfus, abbot of the monastery of Fontenelle, otherwise of St. Wandrille, confirmation was granted of the gifts then made to his house, and among them that of Sierville, with the church and all belonging to it in wood and plain; quam idem Gradulfus a me petiit, are the words of the charter, rogante Vernonensi Hugone, qui eam de me tenebat eo tempore. The Hugh de Vernon here named subsequently embraced the monastic state in the monastery he had thus benefited, and in the Chartulary of St. Père de Chartres is copied a deed, by which Hugh the monk (monachus), with his son William, as yet a little boy, for the redemption of their souls and of their kinsmen, granted for ever to St. Peter of the monastery of Chartres and of the cell of Jusiers the custom of toll, which up to that time had been taken at their castle of Vernon, so that they should pay no toll for the future of the goods of St. Peter, by the river Seine or by land, brought to Rouen or taken back from thence. This concession was made at the entreaty of Landricus, abbot of the said monastery, from whom they had in return the prayers of his house and an excellent horse, and in the castle of Vernon, on the day of the festival of St. Clement, martyr, the dauntless King Henry reigning, and William, the illustrious Comte, holding the monarchy of Normandy; and in the year 1053 William de Vernon, with his father, named Hugh, a monk of St. Wandrille, came unto the monastery of the Holy Trinity at Rouen, and there made sale to the abbot Rainer of his property at Martinville, with the consent of William, comte of the Normans. In the year 1077, for his own salvation and that of his ancestors and heirs, William de Vernon conceded to the monks of Bec freedom from all customary dues throughout the fief of Vernon; and to the abbey of the Holy Trinity of Rouen a like concession was also made by William de Vernon, son of Hugh, and his wife, Emma, with the consent of William, King of the English, and Duke of the Normans. According to the epitaph upon his tomb, he was the founder of the collegiate church of Vernon, and was cut off by fate, whilst preparing the stones for the edifice; but a charter of Richard de Vernon in 1186 declares the first William de Vernon, his ancestor, whose body lay in the church of Vernon, to have given to that church, when Gilebert, bishop of Evreux (1071—1112), dedicated it, land at Giverni and a fourth part of the whole forest of Vernon. The heirs of this William de Vernon will therefore have been the brothers, Richard and Hugh de Réviers, sons either of William or of Baldwin de Réviers, parties to the grant of Gourbesville in 1060, named above; and in the charter of King William and of Queen Matilda for the abbey of the Holy Trinity at Caen in 1082, to which signum Ricardi de Revies was subscribed, we have mention of an aunt of William de Vernon, through whom the succession may have passed. “Billeheldis, daughter of Roger,” it is there recited, “what her father had given to her for a marriage-portion in Vernun, she gave to the aforesaid church, her nephew, William, of whose Honour it was, giving his assent, to whom for his concession I, the Queen Mathildis, gave de meo censu.” By the monk of Bec, the interpolator of the History of the Normans, which has for its groundwork the composition of William, the monk of Jumiéges, and the continuator of the same History down to the year 1137, we are told that a niece of the Comtesse of the Normans, Gunnoris, wife of Comte Richard I., the daughter of her brother, Erfast, was united in marriage with Osmund de Centum-villis, Vicomte of Vernon, and that of her was born the first Fulk de Ancio, as also several daughters, one of whom was mother of the first Baldwin de Revers. These localities are apparently to be identified with the bourg of Anet and with Guainville, situate in Le Pincerais adjacent to the frontier of Normandy, on the right bank of the Eure, where it limits the diocese of Chartres; in as much as the charter of Symon de Aneto granting to the abbey of St. Père a certain mill, which he had constructed in front of his castle of Anet, is witnessed by Gilduin de Coten villari, in whose surname we have the right orthography of what is misread above de Centumvillis, and of which de Gaenvillari was the modification in prevalent use. The same writer elsewhere wrongly ascribes to Baldwin de Réviers, instead of to his father, the foundation of the abbey of Montebourg, and the use of the word primus in the passage quoted probably implies an intention to denote simply an ancestor of Baldwin de Réviers, eldest son of Richard de Réviers, with whom he was contemporary, and not to give the name of such ancestor as within his knowledge. By charter dated at Vernon in the year of the Lord 1174 Richard de Vernon bid it be known to present and future, that "having diligently inspected the charter of Hugh de Vernon, my uncle, and ascertained its veracity from his knights and burgesses and men, with the assent of his heirs, he had granted to God and the church of Jumièges in perpetual alms, for his own salvation and that of the souls of his father and mother and of all his ancestors, the franchise, which the aforesaid Hugh by the assent of William de Vernon, my father, to wit, his brother, gave to the aforesaid church, and which the monks of the same church have possessed in peace down to my time, viz. that for vessels or boats carrying the wine of the monks or for any other articles whatsoever appropriated to their own use, in going and returning, by land or by water, they owe no manner of custom to me or my heir or to any one else at Vernon or throughout the banlieu of the same castle;" the same he confirmed with the ratification of his seal, being witnesses Roger de Vernay, William d'Arganchy, Hugh de Vernon his brother, and many others. In 1195, pursuant to the preliminary treaty of Issoudun of the 5th of December, of the command and with the assent of Richard, King of England, Vernon with the Chatellenie and all its appurtenances, and Longueville with all its appurtenances, and whatever they had in them, either in fief or in demesne, were by Richard de Vernon and Richard his son quit-claimed to Philip King of France, for 800 li. money of Paris; which sum was exchanged for Montmelian and other possessions in the realm of France, to be held as a fief by the service of five knights, and their deed in ratification of this exchange yet remains in the archives of the Hotel Soubise at Paris, with the seals of the father and son attached. Both are of green wax, and on one is the figure of a knight, mounted and armed, his barred visor down, holding a sword in his right hand and in his left a shield borne in front, charged with a saltire, around Sigillum Ricardi de Vernone; on the other is a shield with the same bearing of a saltire and over it a label with thirteen points, around Sigillum Ricardi de Vernun, perhaps the earliest example of a difference in Heraldry distinctive of the coats of father and son. By the succeeding Barons of Néhou of the family of Vernon this bearing was emblazoned d'or a un saultier d'azur, a coat afterwards assumed by the family of La Haye of Néhou, whose ancestor was married to the eldest coheiress of the ancient line.

Page ccxi. l. 10. In fact, we have in the Chartulary of Montebourg direct proof to the contrary. By a deed dated at Harcourt, in the month of May, 1226, Richard d'Harcourt, Lord of St. Sauveur, with the assent of Matildis, his wife, gave to that abbey the tythes of his fief in the parish of St. Laurent de Rauville; and by another deed, in the year 1239, Matildis, Lady of St. Sauveur, daughter of Ralph Taisson, in the time of her widowhood, confirmed to Montebourg what was held of her fief in the parish of St. Laurent near her castle of St. Sauveur, to wit, in four vavassories of land in Torvilla.

Page ccxxi. l. 8. The surname d'Issoudun has been improperly given to Ralph of the house of Lusignan, Comte of Eu jure uxoris, in this and the following pages; as also at p. clvii of the Observations on the Rolls of the Norman Exchequer in the preceding volume. The fief from which he had name was situate in Poitou between Melle and Lusignan, and the bourg, its caput, retains the name of Exoudun at the present time, conformably to the readings, Radulfus Exoldunensis and Radulfus de Exoldun, descriptive of the Comte of Eu in the Letters Patent of King John. On the Roll of 1195, where reference is made to the payment to the host of Issoudun, the spelling indeed conforms with the present usage, and we read Isoldun; but in the copies of the treaty in confirmation of the articles of the truce agreed upon between Issoudun and Charrost, 5th Dec. 1195, and in other instruments, we have invariably Exoldunum. This ancient identity with Exoudun of the name of the bourg in Berri originated the error; which last was in the tenure of Andrew de Chavigny at the above date, and the subject of one of the articles of the treaty.
